READING.

Reading is a pleasant little village of 150 inhabitants, and is located on rolling prairie, fifteen miles northeast of Emporia and fourteen miles southwest of Osage City, on the A., T. & S. Fe Railway, and [illegible] miles south of the Marais des Cygnes River.

EARLY HISTORY.

A tract of land on which Reading is now located, was in 1870 owned by McMann & Co., of Reading, Pa. On the building of [illegible] A., T & S. Fe Railway, James Fagan, agent for the lands, and T. J. Peter and M. S. Sargent, who represented the railroad interest, organized a town company, with James Fagan as president. A town site of sixty acres on Section 3, Township 18, Range 13, was laid off and called Reading, in honor of a town of that name in Pennsylvania, and during the summer of 1870, when the town site was laid off, a depot was built, a few dwelling houses, a store building, erected by Bothel & Buns, in which was also kept the postoffice; a drug store was opened by a Mr. Pierson; Mr. Coleman started a tinshop; D. L. Pettinger, who erected many of the first buildings, located as a resident carpenter; James Fagan sunk a town well, which supplied the inhabitants with water.

The postoffice, which was established in the summer of 1870, was made a money order office, October 7, 1882, T. C. Biddle purchasing the first money order. It receives four mails a day, and is a "Star Route" office, having a route to Williamsburg, Franklin County. J. M. Stevenson, present Postmaster.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

Prior to the settlement of Reading, there were about ten Catholic families in its vicinity, who were supplied by a priest from Topeka who held monthly services at the house of James Fagan until 1870, when a frame church edifice was built. Since that time they were supplied by Father Perry, of Emporia, until 1880, when Father D. Mier, of Emporia, took charge.

First Congregational Church.—Was organized in 1874 with seventeen members, by Rev. D. Phillips. The first services were held in the old United Presbyterian Church, which was purchased in 1875 by the Congregationalists. The building is a small frame structure, 20x34, but answers the purpose. Mr. Phillips remained eighteen months, and was six months later succeeded by Rev. W. C. Walkup, who was in turn succeeded by Revs. L. Newcomb and J. Feemster, Rev. M. H. Smith being the present pastor. Present membership, 113.

Methodist Episcopal Church, Dunlap Circuit.—An organization of this denomination was effected February 12, 1880, with thirteen members, by the Rev. H. J. Coker. In March, 1881, it was re organized in Reading by Revs. J. W. Anderson and A. Buckner. A parsonage was built during the summer of the same year. Present board of trustees (1882) J. A. Stratton, E. A. Edson, J. Swinkins, M. W. Stratton, J. T. Wright. Severy, Thomas C. Biddle, Henry Jacoby, G. D. Patten, James F. Wright, Eli Patterson, M. W. Stratton, J. A. Stratton, A. M. Eidson. The society will erect a fine new church edifice the coming summer. PLYMOUTH.

The name of Plymouth recalls to the reader recollections of the days when the Puritans first settled in New England. The name of this village doubtless owes its origin to that fact. It is located on rolling prairie, seven miles nearly due west of Emporia, on the line of the A., T. & S. F. R. R. The first settlement was made in 1857, by C. Humphrey. He was followed by John Smith, C. Stout, John Carter, E. Parker, and others. The first Township Board was composed of D. McMillan, H. W. Fick, P. Eikendry, D. Molsingee, B. Weaver, and R. Thomas. The postoffice was established in 1858, D. McMillan being appointed first Postmaster. In 1859, C. Humphrey opened the first store. The first school was opened in 1862, by Mary Hammis, and kept in a private dwelling until 1864, when a schoolhouse was erected. During the same year religious services were held by Rev. J. Steel, at the house of Mrs. Campbell. A saw mill was built by Messrs. Townsend & Campbell, the same year.

Plymouth is located in the midst of a good farming community, and transacts more business annually, for its size, than any point in the county. At this place is located a good grist and saw mill.

In June, 1854, he located upon One Hundred and Forty-Second Creek, at the crossing of the old Santa Fe trail. This was before the lands of the Territory were open for settlement, the land upon which he located being situated between the Shawnee and Kaw Indian lands, and in dispute between those tribes. As soon as the lands were open to settlement, Mr. W. pre-empted 160 acres. Here was established a station on the stage line between Independence, Mo., and Santa Fe, N.M. Mr. W. built a small log cabin (which is still standing, and forms part of the present residence of George E.) and opened a house of entertainment for travelers. He also opened a general store, which was the first establishment of the kind in southern Kansas away from the Indian posts. He was appointed Postmaster by President Pierce, the office being the first in the county, and the only one in 1855-56. His store was robbed in September, 1856, by a party calling themselves Free-state men. Mr. W. was away from home at the time of their arrival, but returned after they had cleaned out his store, taking about $3,000 worth of goods. He drew his revolver upon the leader of the party, but before he could use it, so many firearms were pointed at him that he considered discretion the better part of valor, and submitted to the inevitable. After making him take off and surrender his spurs, the party departed. Mr. W. continued to run this store and station until 1866, when the stage line was discontinued. He then devoted his attention to the cultivation of his farm. In July, 1881, he went to California to visit his brothers, and while there, November 4, 1881, he died, and was buried at Sacramento City. His wife died in May, 1880. In 1840, he began business for himself, conducting a general mercantile business, and at times, also engaged in farming and stock dealing. In 1854, he was elected to the office of County Treasurer of Auglaize County. He was also Postmaster at St. Johns, Ohio, in 1839, again in 1844 and 1856 and was Justice of the Peace three terms, nine years at St. Johns, Ohio, and removed to the county seat, Wapakoneta, where he resided for two years; returning then to St. Johns, he resumed his business operations. Three years later he sold out his business at St. Johns and engaged in general merchandising at Wapakoneta, dealing largely also in stock and grain, where he remained until he came to Kansas, in 1866. In April, of that year, he located in Lyon County, on Eagle Creek, in Center Township, where he purchased a farm of 174 acres, which he has improved by the erection of a commodious dwelling, barns, granaries and corn-cribs capable of holding about 15,000 bushels. He has since purchased about 500 acres on the Verdigris River, in Greenwood County, which he has given to his sons; about 340 acres near Eureka, Greenwood County, and 480 acres in Center Township, about four miles southwest of his original farm, and a farm of forty acres about one mile east of his home place, also 320 acres adjoining his home place, making it now 494 acres. His principal crop is corn; he raises many cattle and hogs, and deals largely in stock, buying and shipping cattle and hogs. He was elected a director of the Emporia National Bank in 1873, and re-elected annually ever since. He has held the office of Township Trustee ten or eleven years since he came to the State, and served as a Justice of the Peace one term here. He married Miss Sarah J. Van Tress, of Allen County, Ohio, May 10, 1840, by whom he had nine children, of whom Sylvester V., William S., Susanna, Hannah and Martha are living. She died September 18, 1856, and he married June 14, 1857, Miss Elizabeth Waggoner, of Auglaize County, Ohio, by whom he has had seven children, of whom Charles L., Clara J., Cora B., Daniel F., Maggie M. and Rhoda Kate are living.

JOHN H. FERREN, farmer, Section 30, Township 21, Range 11, P. O. Madison, Greenwood County, is a native of Cumberland, Guernsey Co., Ohio, and in 1859 came to Kansas with his parents, who located in Franklin County. August 22, 1862, he enlisted in Company C, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and served with his regiment in Arkansas and Missouri, being in the engagements at old Fort Wayne, Cane Hill, and Prairie Grove, and was subsequently one of the United States mail escort across the plains. He was mustered out at Fort Riley, in September, 1865. In 1868 he married Miss Mary R. Rumford, of Lyon County. They have five children, the eldest being twelve years of age. Mr. Ferren's farm contains 180 acres, fifty of which are under cultivation, his corn averaging forty-five bushels per acre. He has an orchard of several hundred trees, good barn, etc., and has recently erected a fine two-story residence. At present has upwards of 100 head of cattle, 30 hogs, and 6 horses. He is at present Road Overseer, and in 1879 was Township Trustee. For the past three years he has been W. M. of Lyon Grange, No. 1,146, P. of H., and is a member of Emporia Post, No. 52, G. A. R.

W. S. PROVO, farmer, Section 13, P. O. Madison, Greenwood County, is a native of Fountain County, Ind., and was born in 1847, and removed with his parents to Missouri in 1854, where they remained until 1861, when he came to Kansas and located upon a farm near Fort Scott. March 13, 1863, he enlisted in Company A, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry. He participated in the engagements at Lexington and Westport, Mo., and also the Little Blue and the Big Blue fights, at the Little Blue being wounded in the face. He was also engaged with the Cheyennes at the North Platte Bridge, D.T., when so many of the Eleventh were surprised and killed; and upon another occasion he, with seven of his company, were in a running fight with the Indians to the number of twenty, on the Medicine Bow River, when the Sergeant of the party was killed. After leaving the army he settled upon a farm in Douglas County, and in 1871 removed to Madison Township, Greenwood County where he remained until 1881, when he sold his farm and removed to his present location on Section 13, just across the county line. In 1872 Mr. Provo married Miss Addie Reed. They have five children, viz.: Elsie, Susan Olive, Harry Munro, Daniel W., and George C. Mr. P.'s farm consists of 160 acres, seventy acres of which he has under cultivation, and his first year's corn crop averaged thirty-five bushels to the acre. He has fifty head of cattle and several horses, hogs, etc. His residence and farm buildings are insured. He is a charter member of Madison Lodge, No. 171, I. O. O. F.

FREEMAN G. SOULE, farmer, Section 24, Township 21, P. O. Bitlertown, was born in Jo Daviess County, Ill., April 24, 1839. He was raised on a farm, and continued to reside there until his removal to Kansas, in the spring of 1858. He located in Center Township, Lyon County, pre-empting a claim of 160 acres on Eagle Creek, which he improved, and where he resided until August, 1862, when he enlisted as a private in Company C, Eleventh Kansas Regiment, participating in all the engagements in which his company took part. He was promoted to Corporal, and mustered out at Fort Riley, in August, 1865, returning to his farm, which he soon after sold. He bought another farm of eighty acres on Eagle Creek, in 1866, to which he has since added land adjoining to the amount of 340 acres. He has made valuable improvements upon this farm, including dwelling, barn, corn-cribs, etc He married Miss Susannah Bitler, of Center Township, November 21, 1867, by whom he has had eight children, of whom Harry L., Clifford L., Elsie P., Lucius G., Ralph L., Freeman W., and Cora E. are living. He has been a member of the School Board many years, and has held other township offices.

MIAMI COUNTY.

LOCATION, TOPOGRAPHY AND NATURAL RESOURCES.

MIAMI County is located in the eastern tier of counties, next to Missouri, and in the second tier south from the Kansas River. It is bounded on the north by Johnson County, on the east by Missouri, south by Linn County, and west by Franklin County. When organized the county was named Lykins, in honor of David Lykins, long a resident of the county, and a member of the first Territorial Council. The first Legislature of the Territory passed an act in 1855, bounding Lykins County as follows: "Beginning at the southeast corner of Johnson County, thence south twenty-four (24) miles, thence west twenty-four (24) miles, thence north twenty-four (24) miles to the southwest corner of Johnson County, thence east twenty-four (24) miles to the place of beginning." Lykins County, as thus defined, was twenty-four miles square, and contained 368,640 acres. The name of the county was changed from Lykins to Miami by the Legislature, June 3, 1861, and on March 3, 1868, an act was approved which changed the boundaries of the county so as to include an additional half-mile strip on the west, and thus to increase the area by the equivalent of twelve sections, or 7,680 acres. The section line between the second and third tiers of sections, in range twenty-one east, was made the western boundary; but since north of the third standard parallel, which is three miles south of the north line of the county, the corresponding ranges are one-half mile farther to the east than those south of said parallel, Miami County loses three half-sections, or 900 acres; therefore, the exact area of the county is 375,360 acres.

(e) Organized in 1874, from parts of Middle Creek, Osage, Osawatomie, and Stanton.

Miami County is diversified as to surface, about twenty per cent being bottom land, and eighty per cent upland. The uplands are, for the most part, gently rolling, the highest hills in Osawatomie Township not being more than 130 feet above the level of the bottom-lands. These latter average about one mile in width. The valley of the Marais des Cygnes, the widest of the valleys, averages about two miles in width.

The principal streams are the Marais des Cygnes and Pottawatomie Creek, both of which enter the county from the west, and uniting one mile east of Osawatomie, form the Osage River which flows east five miles, then south, leaving the county nine miles west of the eastern boundary line. Bull Creek is a large stream entering the county from the north, and flowing south into the Marais des Cygnes. Rock Creek and Wade's Branch are tributary to Bull Creek from the west, and Little Bull, Ten Mile and Wea creeks from the east. Wea is a large stream with three branches. Elm Creek is a short stream, rising near the center of the county, and flowing south into the Marais des Cygnes. Middle Creek rises in the eastern part of the county, and flows generally southwardly into the Marais des Cygnes in Linn County. Sugar Creek rises in the southeast part of the county, and flows south into Linn County. Walnut Creek is a branch of Middle Creek from the west. Mound Creek rises in the southwest corner of the county, and flows east, then southeast, into the Marais des Cygnes, Linn County. Besides these streams, there is a large number of smaller ones; an abundance of springs, and good well-water is found at a depth varying fifteen to one hundred feet.

The principal varieties of native grasses are "prairie" grass, blue-joint and wire grass. Prairie grass grows everywhere on the uplands, and is most abundant: blue-joint grows on moist ground, and is very sweet and nutritious; wire grass is not specially valuable.

The principal kinds of native timber are the cottonwood, coffee bean, hackberry, hickory, linn or basswood, maple, mulberry, oak—Spanish, black, burr and post—pecan and walnut. These grow mostly along the creeks, average width of belts being about one-half mile, and occupying about ten per cent of the surface, open prairie occupying ninety per cent.

On the uplands the soil varies in depth from one to four feet; in the valleys from four to thirty feet. It is everywhere exceedingly fertile. The subsoil is usually clay. Good limestone is found in almost every locality. There is also considerable sandstone. A species of limestone, resembling gray granite, is found in Mound Township, and in the central and southern portions is found what is called "Fontana marble," from the town Fontana, near which the principal quarries of the marble are located. This marble resembles the Junction City stone, is readily shaped with saw or plane, and is quite valuable for building purposes.

Coal is believed to underlie about one-fourth of the county, but the quality is generally too poor, and the layers are too thin to justify working.

In various parts of the county there have been found "tar springs," and "oil springs." The most noted of these are the "Wea Tar Spring," the "Beaver Tar Spring," and the "Won-Zop-peach Tar Spring," "Dales Oil Spring," and "Honeywells Oil Spring." The existence of some of these springs had been known to the Indians from time immemorial, and to white men about thirty-five years. But prospecting for petroleum was not undertaken until 1882. In July of that year the Kansas Oil and Mining Company bored down on the farm of A. Westfall, about seven miles east of Paola, to the depth of 300 feet, obtaining a copious supply of gas. In order not to lose this gas the drill was raised and a second well commenced in August, about thirty rods from the first, with the determination of reaching petroleum or the level of the sea, about eight hundred feet below the surface. At a depth of 330 feet, reached September 1, sufficient gas was flowing from the two wells to light a city of 1,000,000 inhabitants, and the gas was remarkably pure.

Miami County is remarkably productive. It contributed largely to the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia. The largest apple on exhibition there was from the farm of Fred. Wygant, near Osawatomie, Miami County. This apple was twenty-four and one-half inches in circumference, and weighed twenty-eight and one-half ounces, and a corn-stalk nineteen and one-third feet long was designed for that exhibition, but while on the way through Osawatomie a pair of mules ate two or three feet off the top of it and the sending of it was then abandoned.

INDIAN HISTORY.

The Indians that have lived in Miami County, are the Miamis, the Confederated Tribes, the Pottawatomies and the Shawnees.

The Shawnee reservation embraced a strip of land across the northern end of the county, about two and one-fourth miles in width. Some of them continued to live here until 1866, when with the remainder of their tribe they moved to the Indian Territory.

The Pottawatomie reservation, which was partly in Franklin County, embraced in Miami County, Mound and Osawatomie townships, and a small portion of Stanton and Valley Township, in all about eighty square miles, or 51,000 acres. This tribe was removed to a reservation on the Kansas river in 1847-48, where a portion of them still remain.

The Confederated Tribes were composed of the Weas, Piankeshaws, Peorias and Kaskaskias. They inhabited the northern part of the county, bordering the Shawnee Reservation. Upon their removal here they were but remnants of previously large and powerful tribes. The Weas were at one time a portion of the Miami tribe, their language being almost identical with that of the Miamis. The Confederated Tribes formerly lived in Southern Illinois. In 1818 they removed to Eastern Missouri, and settled near St. Genevieve. In 1827 the Weas and Piankeshaws moved to what is now Miami County, the Peorias followed in a year or two, and the Kaskaskias came in 1832. From this time until 1854, these tribes continued to live in undisturbed possession of their reservation, when it became necessary to open up the country to settlement, and a treaty was made between them and the Government by which they sold all their lands except 160 acres for each member of the tribe, ten sections for tribal purposes, and one section for the support of a Mission School. In the formation of this treaty, Col. Manypenny represented the Government, and Kio-kun-no-zah, Yellow Beaver, and others as chiefs the Indians; Baptiste Peoria acting as interpreter. As white settlers came in and filled up the country, the Confederated Tribes made preparations to make one more removal. With the consent of the Government, a delegation from the tribes purchased a portion of the lands of the Quapaws and Senecas in the Indian Territory, in 1866 The purchase was ratified by treaty in 1868, and the most of the Confederated Tribes removed to their new homes, on Spring River, that year. Many of those who remained were admitted to citizenship and were prosperous members of the community, while some have since gone to the Indian Territory.

When the treaty of 1854 was made, the Confederated Tribes numbered 260; but they have steadily declined in numbers.

At least two of the members of the Confederated Tribes are worthy of brief mention—Win-ris-cah, or Christmas Dagnette, and Baptiste Peoria.

The former was born near Terre Haute, Ind., about the year 1800. He was a nephew of a Wea chief, and received a liberal education. Besides three or four Indian languages, he could speak English, French and Spanish, and at the age of sixteen acted as interpreter for the Government. He removed to Kansas with his tribe, which he served for a number of years as chief, and died in 1848.

Baptiste Peoria was born also about the year 1800, near Kaskaskia, Ill. He did not receive a school education, but by the natural force of his intellect acquired a number of Indian languages, the Shawnee, Delaware and Pottawatomie, besides those of the several Confederated Tribes, and also English and French. He acted for many years in the capacity of interpreter, and for some time as chief, but generally preferred to be on the "outside," as there he could be of much more use to his tribe, which during almost the whole of his long life continued to look up to him as their best adviser. When the tribes removed to the Indian Territory, Baptiste went with them, and died there in the year 1874. He was a man of large and enlightened views, and was distinguished for the virtues which spring from a kindly heart and generous spirit. His widow, who was at the time of her marriage to him, the widow of Christmas Dagnette, still resides in Paola, at the ripe age of eighty-two, loved and respected by all who know her.

The Miamis were the first settlers in Miami County. They, as well as a portion of the Shawnees, were originally from Ohio. They were removed to what is now Indiana, by Gen. Anthony Wayne, in accordance with the treaty of August 3, 1795. In 1840, a treaty was made by which they agreed to remove to new homes in the Indian Territory (now Kansas) and, in 1846, eight hundred Miamis located in the southeast part of the present Miami County, on Sugar Creek. In 1847 about 300 more arrived; and in 1848 about 500 of them returned to Indiana, which return was afterwards acquiesced in by act of Congress.

In the same year those Miamis remaining in the county removed their home from Sugar Creek to the Marais des Cygnes, in the central southern portion of the county, locating at what has since been known as Miami village. The removal was caused by sickness, superinduced by change of climate, privation and exposure. In three years from the time of their arrival on Sugar Creek their number was reduced by death from 600 to 300, one-half the deaths occurring on Sugar Creek. Their principal burying ground was then about two miles southeast of the present village of Rockville.

The original Miami reservation consisted of about 500,000 acres of land, and was bounded on the east by Missouri, on the south by the reservation of the New York Indians, on the west by the Pottawatomie reservation, and on the north by that of the Confederated tribes. In 1854, as white settlers began to seek homes on the Miami reservation, the Government purchased all but 72,000 acres, Col. Manypenny acting for the Government, and Now-a-lun-qua ("Big Legs") on the part of the Miamis, and Jack Hackley as interpreter.

The Miamis remained on this remnant of their reservation until 1871, when having been reduced to about 130 in number, the most of them removed to the Neosho River in the Indian Territory. A few remained and became citizens of the United States, made considerable progress in agriculture, and became useful, upright and respected citizens.

The agents for these tribes have been the following: Col. Ely Moore, until 1854; Col. A. M. Coffey, 1854 to 1855; Col. M. McCaslin, 1855 to 1857; Gen. Seth Clover, 1857 to 1861; Col. G. A. Colton, 1861 to 1869; James Stanley, 1869 to the time the Agency was abolished. Col. McCaslin was removed by President Buchanan for having protested against the invasion of Kansas by Missourians. He was Colonel of the Fifteenth Virginia Infantry during the Rebellion.

EARLY SETTLEMENTS.

One of the first white men to settle in Miami County was David Lykins, who came here in 1844, from Vigo County, Ind., as missionary to the Confederated tribes of Indians. Other missionaries and teachers came to these tribes and to the Miamis, from time to time, and also traders, all of whom came to aid or live among the Indians.

In 1854, bona fide settlers began to arrive with the object of making homes for themselves and developing the resources of the country. Among these in various parts of the county, were S. H. Houser, in Stanton Township; in Osawatomie Township, Daniel Goodrich, C. A. Foster, John Childers, Harmon Dace, C. H. Crane, John Serpell, William Chestnut, S. L. Adair, R. W. Wood, and O. C. Brown; In Paola, Knowles, Isaac and William Shaw and their mother in June, and their brother Cyrus in September, T. J. Hedges, D. L. Peery and W. A. Heiskell; in Richland Township, David Anderson and others; in Middle Creek Township, William Blair.

1855, the following settlers arrived at Paola: Capt. Arbuckle, Charles Alexander, S. P. Boone, W. D. Hoover, Elias Hughes, Thomas Hill, H. Harbison, Dr. Finlay, James and Joseph Lykins, Peter Potts, J. A. and J. H. Phillips, George Tomlinson, and Allen T. Ward; in Osawatomie, Thomas Roberts, S. M. Merritt, James Hughes, James Williams, N. T. Roscoe, William, John and Patrick Poland, W. A. Sears and John Littlejohn; in Stanton Township, H. B. Standiford, Benjamin Goodrich, James and W. H. Kinkaid, the Bingham boys, Samuel and William Whitehead, Israel Christie, John West, Caleb and Robert Sherer, Hiram Mullens, Josiah and D. H. Bundy, W. B. and Isaiah Nichols, John T. Benning, John Vanhorn, Thomas and Perry O'Brien, Orrin Williams, John Oliver, Thomas Roberts and Rev. Martin White. In Wea Township, George Town and sons arrived in 1856, and in 1857, J. W. Chandoins, William Blair, Nathan Childers, William Catching, Thomas Grinter, Sumner Myers, S. G. Echols and quite a number of others.

In Osage Township, A. Mobley settled as early as 1854, and in 1857, when the lands were open to settlement, quite a large number came in, among them, John Dodd, William Strovinger, J. H. Bruner, A. Westfall, Jonas King, Abijah Bales, James Jones and A. P. Brown; in 1858, Jeremiah Jolly, Jonathan Ruble, Isaac Polhamus and from fifteen to twenty others. In Marysville Township, H. L. Lyons, James and John Beets, J. G. and Enos McDaniel, J. J. and Owen Park, James Tindle, Joseph Goodwin, John Reed and Charles Barry.

THE BATTLE OF OSAWATOMIE.

This was the most memorable battle of the Border War. It was fought August 30, 1856. Capt. John Brown, Dr. W. W. Updegraff and Capt. Cline commanded the defense, and Gen. John W. Reid the attacking party of 400 Missourians. Gen. Reid's command, after crossing the Marais des Cygnes, at Bundy's Ford, four miles northwest of Osawatomie, approached the town about daylight, Rev. Martin White acting as guide. Frederick Brown was making preparations to return to Lawrence that day, and on his way to Rev. S. L. Adair's, met Gen. Reid and Rev. White with a small body of men in advance of the main force. He saluted them with "Good morning, boys; are you going to Lawrence to-day?" Rev. White replied: "Why, I know you!" and, taking deliberate aim with his rifle, fired at Brown, shooting him dead in the road, about a mile west of town. This was twenty minutes before sunrise. Messengers were immediately dispatched to notify the people in town, and Capt. Brown, who was a half-mile east of town. He, Dr. Updegraff and Capt. Cline collected their men together as rapidly as possible. At first it was designed to make use of the block-house as a defence, but learning that Reid had a cannon with him, this plan was abandoned and Brown and his men, forty-one in number, all told, took up their positions in the timber along the south side of the Marais des Cygnes, facing south; Capt. Brown, with seventeen men, on the right, Dr. W. W. Updegraff, with ten men, in the center, and Capt. Cline, with fourteen men, on the left. There was also an independent command still further to the left, in the Emigrant Aid Company's mill, consisting of "Pap" Austin, an ex-regular soldier, and his large rifle, to which he had applied the fancy name of "Kill Devil," carrying an ounce ball. When the forces were arranged in the woods the enemy was passing within about 600 yards of them. Mr. Holmes, a volunteer, advanced towards the top of the hill, on the southwest of the town, to reconnoitre, and finding the enemy close at hand, fired at them, striking one of them in the mouth or chin and causing him "to bleed like a pig," as one of his companions afterwards expressed it. He then retreated to the woods, the enemy following him closely and forming a line from O. C. Brown's house to William Chestnut's premises—the high ground west of where the "John Brown monument" now stands. They then fired three guns, as they afterwards stated to Robert Reynolds, one of the prisoners whom they took, as a signal to the State forces to surrender. Capt. Brown had given orders to his men not to fire a shot until he gave orders, but when these alleged signal guns were heard, the men became so impatient, believing the enemy had opened fire upon them, that they could not be restrained. Jason Brown raised his gun to fire, and the rest under Capt. Brown's immediate command did the same, although as one of the number states, "they knew it was contrary to orders." This first attack, which was made on the right wing of the Free-state line, was partially repulsed, when the enemy brought up their cannon and placed it in position within about 400 yards of the timber where Capt. Brown's men were stationed, at each successive shot moving it farther east to scour the timber. The cannon was loaded with grape-shot, but did no damage, the missiles passing over the heads of the men. During this time the Free-state forces kept moving east and returning the fire of the enemy, who finally ceased firing the cannon, dismounted and made a charge into the timber, when the main body of the Free-state men, having gallantly held their ground for an hour against ten times their number, were compelled to surrender or retreat. Most of them escaped across the Marais des Cygnes, some swimming and others in a skiff. Robert Reynolds, H. K. Thomas and Charley Keiser were taken prisoners by Capt. Warren Harris, of Platte County, Mo., and taken under guard to the town. While attempting to swim his horse across the river, George Partridge was shot. Samuel Wright sprang into the river on the same horse, swam across, and, by means of the bushes, climbed the steep bank on the north side of the river and escaped. The Missourians, on entering the town, commenced to pillage and burn it, first firing on the block-house, in which were stationed several men, who escaped before the cannon was brought up. There were no women in town except those belonging to the families of Messrs. Chestnut and Sears. Every house but four was burned—Mr. Starkey's, Mr. Woodbury's and two small cabins. The invaders left town with twelve covered wagons, two filled with wounded men and a large part of the remainder with plunder.

As General Reid's command approached the town in the morning, David R. Garrison and George Cutter, who had remained in the house of Mr. Carr over night, attempted to escape to the timber along the Pottawatomie, and give the alarm to the town. A detail of Missourians was made to pursue them, Garrison was killed, and Cutter seriously wounded and left for dead. The invading force retired from the town about 10 o'clock A. M., taking with them as prisoners William Bainbridge Fuller, Robert Reynolds, Charley Keiser, H. K. Thomas, Mr. Morey, young Spencer Brown, who was taken prisoner at the burning of his father's house, and William Williams, from Miami Village. Of these prisoners, Williams, formerly of Westport, Mo., which place he had been forced to leave on account of his Free-state proclivities, was taken to the edge of the town site and there shot; Charley Keiser was shot September 1—the second day following. Keiser was one of the party under Captain John Brown who captured F. N. Coleman, the murderer of Charles W. Dow, at the battle of Black Jack, and Coleman had then made threats against him. When, therefore, Keiser found that Coleman was among his captors, he declared to his companions his belief that he would be killed. The party encamped, Sunday night, on the east side of Cedar Creek, on the old Santa Fe road, and Keiser was taken out on Monday morning to a guard of Kickapoo rangers, and shot. Besides the Free state losses mentioned, must be added Theron P. Powers, who was, at the time of the invasion, lying sick in a house near the timber. He crawled out of the house and into the woods for protection, and was lying there completely exhausted, when he was found by the ruffians and shot. Among those who participated in the defence of Osawatomie were John Brown, Sr., Captain; Dr. W. W. Updegraff, Captain; —— Cline, Captain; Harrison Updegraff, Charley Keiser, Cyrus Tator, George Ferris, August Bondi, Robert Shearer, John Staats, Jason Brown, Samuel Kilbourn, Robert Reynolds, Charles Eaton, George Grant, George Partridge, William Partridge, Samuel Wright, J. M. Anthony, William Quick, Hugh Kilbourn, William A. Sears, —— Mills, R. W. Wood, D. W. Collis, Capt. Holmes, H. K. Thomas, James Clark, J. J. Holbrook, Jacob Benjamin, Caleb Shearer, —— Baker, —— Woodbury, Henry Kilbourn, Freeman Austin, Luke Parsons. As before stated, Frederick Brown and David Garrison were killed on the approach to the town, and George Cutter badly wounded; George Partridge and T. P. Powers were killed during the progress of the battle and the retreat; William Williams on the outskirts of the town, and Charley Keiser at Cedar Creek. Dr. Updegraff and D. W. Collis were wounded. The Freeman Austin, or "Pap Austin," alluded to, was encountered on the return march of the Missourians. After burning and sacking the town, they started eastward, with the purpose of crossing the Marais des Cygnes, in the vicinity of the Emigrant Aid Company's mill. Here they encountered Austin and the "kill devil." Austin opened fire upon them, calling out, "Come on, boys, plenty of men here," loading and firing as rapidly as possible. Not anxious to encounter "plenty of men," Reid faced about and left Osawatomie by the way he came, crossing the Marais des Cygnes at Bundy's Ford, four miles above.

The Free-state men who escaped re-assembled at a log house north of the river, Brown and Updegraff among them. The next day they removed to the south side, and commenced fortifying another camp, but were prevented by sickness from carrying out their design.

The losses of the Missourians are not generally known — probably not much greater than those of the Free-state men. There are numerous surmises and guesses as to what those losses were; but, according to Reid's own statement, it was two killed and a few wounded. The disparagement in number—ten to one—and with but eighteen of the number armed with Sharpe's rifles, was too great for Capt. Brown or any of his men to reasonably expect to win a victory, even if they had had plenty of ammunition. The most that could be done under the circumstances was to make a show of resistance, and to retreat across the Marais des Cygnes when their ammunition was exhausted, which they did.

Nothing was ever done by the Free-state forces to punish Gen. Reid for thus attacking and destroying a defenseless town, or to intercept his return march to Missouri, except a faint feint by Gen. Lane, at which he was an adept.*

QUANTRILL, THE GUERRILLA LEADER.

William Clark Quantrill was born at Canal Dover, Ohio, July 19, 1837. His father was Thomas Quantrill, of Hagarstown, Md. His mother was a native of Chambersburg, Pa., her maiden name being Caroline Clark. These two people were married October 11, 1836, and moved to Canal Dover, in the following December. Thomas Quantrill died December 7, 1854, being at the time Principal of the Canal Dover Union Schools. Mrs. Caroline Quantrill is still living at Canal Dover, and is respected by all.

William C. Quantrill was educated at Canal Dover Union Schools, of which his father was a Director and afterwards Superintendent. William C. himself became a teacher in one of the lower grades of the school in the fall of 1853. He then went to Fort Wayne and studied Latin, trigonometry, philosophy and surveying. Early in 1856 he returned to Canal Dover, and on the 25th of February, 1857, started to Kansas with H. V. Beeson, who paid his fare to St. Louis. Here Mr. Beeson waited for Mr. Torrey, who leaving Canal Dover on the 23d of February, had started to Kansas via New York City. Upon Mr. Torrey's arrival at St. Louis the party proceeded on their way to Kansas, Mr. Torrey paying Quantrill's fare the balance of the way. They arrived in Lykins County, and settled near Stanton on the 22d of March, each one of the three taking a claim, or rather buying a pre-emption right of a squatter, Beeson and Torrey each paying $500 for their claims, and also paying $250 for the claim standing in Quantrill's name. Some time afterwards Quantrill desired to sell out his interest in the claim; and as he and Mr. Torrey could not agree as to what was rightly due Quantrill, the matter was submitted to a "squatter's court" for arbitration. The court decided that Beeson and Torrey owed Quantrill $63. The financial relations between Messrs. Beeson and Torrey were such that the understanding was reached between them that the latter should pay Quantrill the $63. Torrey had no money to pay with, and in order to raise the money it was necessary for him to go to Lecompton to sell some land warrants he held. On account of sickness he was unable to go to Lecompton. In consequence of this delay Quantrill became impatient, and in order to get his pay, stole a yoke of cattle belonging to Mr. Beeson. Some few days thereafter Beeson met Quantrill about sunrise on the prairie. Quantrill turned to avoid Beeson, when the latter, bringing his rifle to bear upon the former, who was about ten rods distant, hailed him with, "Bill, stop! I want to see you." Quantrill turned towards Beeson, when the latter again commanded, "Lay your gun down in the grass!" This order was also obeyed, when Beeson said, "You must bring my oxen back by three o'clock this afternoon, or I shall shoot you on sight!" Quantrill promised to return the oxen, and did so about four o'clock that day.

In the winter of 1857–58, he taught school in Judge Robert's district in Stanton Township, and in the following spring went to Salt Lake City. In 1860, he returned to Kansas, making Lawrence his headquarters, and going by the name of "Charlie Hart." While here he made frequent incursions into the country, kept bad company, gambled somewhat, and became a suspicious character. This drew upon him the surveillance of the civil authorities. Up to this time his sympathies had been with the Free-state men; but his downward course which drew upon him suspicion and surveillance, as naturally led him toward the Missourians. In order to ingratiate himself into their affections and confidence, he conceived and carried out one of the basest betrayals of confidence known to the annals of history. He induced three or four young men, one of them a distant relative of Capt. Snyder, of Marais des Cygnes Massacre fame, to join him in robbing a Mr. Walker's house, in Jackson County, Mo. Having completed his plan for the attack, he next informed Walker that he had discovered a plot among certain parties in Kansas to rob him (Walker) of his money and slaves, and that he had joined the party for the purpose of defeating its object. Upon approaching Walker's house at the head of his little company of dupes,they with the real purpose,he,with the pretended purpose, of robbing it, he went on ahead to "enter the house and get matters properly arranged for the attack." Upon the attack being made, he stepped to the porch and shot one of the attacking party with his own hands. All were killed but one, who, severely wounded, crawled away and recovered. As a reward for this enterprise, undertaken to gain the confidence of the slaveholders of Missouri, he was presented by Walker with a magnificent horse and saddle.

Soon after this affair he came to Miami County, and stopped at the house of John Benning, near Stanton. Capt. Snyder, with a company of men surrounded Benning's house, with the purpose of taking Quantrill out and killing him for the part he had played in betraying the above mentioned young men to their death, but failed to accomplish his purpose. Snyder, however, did succeed in arresting him on a charge of grand larceny, and having him confined in the Paola jail for a time. Being furnished by his friends with his pistols and bowie-knives, he made an attempt on the life of his jailor. April 2, 1861, he was released on a writ of habeas corpus. At the court house door he found his horse awaiting him, and in a few hours he was safe among his friends in Jackson County, Mo.

Accounts of his raids upon Aubrey, Olathe, Lawrence and Baxter Springs, will be found in their proper connections. This sketch may properly close with an account of his death, copied from a Louisville, Ky., paper:

"On the 1st of March, 1865, Quantrill stopped at Wakefield's barn, near Fairfield, in Nelson County, in order to find shelter from the rain, which was pouring down. His command was then reduced to fifteen men. While in the barn, and not suspecting the enemy, Capt. Ed. Terrell, at the head of forty-five Federal guerrillas charged down upon him, which took the whole party completely by surprise. Just as Quantrill was coming out of the door he received a mortal wound. Richard Glassock, who had rejoined him after making his escape from Louisville, and Clark Hockersmith, while attempting to put Quantrill on his horse, were killed. All the balance of the guerrillas succeeded in getting away. Quantrill was left at a farm house close by, and his wounds were considered of such dangerous character, that Terrell left no guard over him. He was afterward visited by one of his own men, who endeavored to get him to escape; but he declined, saying that he knew he was mortally wounded, and desired to be left quiet. He was soon after removed to Louisville, and in about a month died of his wounds. He was generally known here in Kentucky as 'Captain Clark,' and that was the name he gave when captured. His men also created that impression through the country until after his death, when they acknowledged that 'Captain Clark' was none other than Quantrill, the famous guerrilla of Missouri."

The following letter is introduced as showing that at the time it was written the writer had in him somewhat of a noble ambition.

STANTON, KANSAS TERRITORY, February 8, 1860

My Dear Mother:

It is a pleasant morning, this; the sun is just rising, its light causing the trees, bushes and grass to glitter like brilliants, while the hanging sheets of frost drop from them, announcing his warmth, then silently melting away. I stood in my schoolroom door alone, and viewing this it made me feel a new life, and merry as the birds. But these feelings and thoughts are soon changed and forgotten, by the arrival of eight or ten of my scholars, who come laughing and tripping along as though their lives would always be like this beautiful morning, calm and serene. And I wish that I could always be as these children. But I have been so no doubt, and I have no reason to expect it a second time. Every year brings its changes and no two are alike.

* The details of the defense of Osawatomie are gathered partly from living survivors and partly from the testimony of Dr. Updegraff, Robert Reynolds, Wm. Chestnut and others, given before the Commissioners appointed to investigate the "Kansas Claims" of the sufferers of 1856.

. . . .

School is now closed for the day, and I am again left alone with my thoughts. I am thinking of home and all the happy days I spent there; and then of the unhappy days I have spent since and those you have spent. In a few days it will be three years, though it only seems like a few months. The sun is shedding its last rays, and the chill air of evening still declares that summer has not yet arrived. Every now and then a blast from the north holds all nature in check, in spite of the warming influences of the sun to revive it.

How different now to me it is from one year ago, when I was amidst the snow-covered mountains of Utah. It seemed that a summer of sunshine would not be sufficient to break the icy fetters of winter. We should have died of ennui in the Mormon society if it had not been for the excitement attendant upon a camp of soldiers.

You perceive, I suppose, that I am writing at different times between my school hours, which causes my letter to be somewhat broken.

It is now noon, and the sun shines warm, with a pleasant south wind; and my scholars are enjoying themselves as scholars did when I was one. And they, like all children, are enjoying more happiness now than they will at any other period of their lives. I sometimes wish that I was again a scholar in the old brick schoolhouse at Dover; and again with my companions on the playground. But scholars and companions are all far from me now, and I am left alone to contemplate. It all seems to me but a dream, a very little of which I ever realized; or, more like a sheet of paper on the first page of which there are a few signs, showing that something has been commenced, and then all the rest left blank, telling you not what was the purpose of the writer, and leaving you to surmise; though if it had been continued it might have been of benefit to some one. Thus my mind is ever recalling the past, and my conscience tells me that if something noble is not done in the future to fill up this blank, then it had better be destroyed, so that none may take it for an example.

But as this is leap year, I think it advisable for those who intend to turn over a new leaf, to take their leap with the year, and then keep moving with it, and then probably they may have something more than a blank. I think I can insure it if there is a firm resolution.

I can now see more clearly than ever in my life before, that I have been striving and working really without any end in view. And now since I am satisfied that such a course must end in nothing, it must be changed, and that soon, or it will be too late. All the benefit that I can see I have derived from my past course, is that I have improved my health materially, which was none of the best when I came here. I have also learned to do almost any kind of outdoor work, which experience will serve in future to preserve my health, and also enable me to get along much better than if I was only fitted for the schoolroom or other indoor business.

When my school is finished, I will be able to tell you better what my plans are for the coming year. One thing is certain: I am done roving around seeking a fortune, for I have found where it may be obtained by being steady and industrious. And now that I have sown wild oats so long, I think it is time to begin harvesting; which will only be accomplished by putting in a different crop in different soil.

There is no news here but hard times, and harder still coming, for I see their shadows; and "coming events cast their shadows before," is an old proverb. But I do not fear that my destiny is fixed in this country, nor do I wish to be compelled to stay in it any longer than possible, for the devil has got unlimited sway over this territory, and will hold it until we have a better set of men and society generally. The only cry is, "What is best for ourselves and our dear friends."

I suppose Dover has changed a great deal since I was there, but no more than I have, and probably not as much; for I think there are few there who would know me if I were to come unexpectedly. I suppose the boys have grown to be almost men, and likely I should hardly recognize them if I were to see them any place but at home. Well, surely I have changed around a great deal the last three years, and have seen a great many people and countries, and enough incidents to make a novel of adventures.

When I get a letter from you, and some of the others, I will write again, but now I must close, by hoping that this bit of scribbling may find you in as good health as the one who is writing. My love to you all, and respects to those who inquire of me.

Your Son,

Wm. C. Quantrill.

To Mrs. Caroline Quantrill, Dover, Tuscarawas County, Ohio.

JAYHAWKERS.

The Origin of the Name.—Since this epithet has become synonymous with Kansan, its origin is a question in which all Kansans are interested. The following is the true story of its origin: Before sunrise, one morning in the autumn of 1856, during the existence of the troubles throughout the State, Pat Devlin, a noted character of those times, was seen entering the village of Osawatomie, riding a horse or mule laden with no inconsiderable amount of articles of various kinds, and of different degrees of value. The animal Pat bestrode was almost hidden from sight by the load. A neighbor meeting him, said:

"Good morning, Pat; you look as if you had been out on some kind of a foraging expedition."

"Yes," said Pat. "I've been out jayhawking."

"What do you mean by 'jayhawking,' Pat? I never heard that word before."

Pat, who was a bold Free-state Irishman, at once developed into an etymological neologist, and replied:

"I have been out foraging off the enemy," meaning the Pro-slavery party, "and while riding home on me baste, I bethought me of the bird we have in Ireland, we call the jayhawk, which takes delight in worryin' its prey before devouring it, and I thought 'jayhawking' a good name for the business I was in meself."

The word became generally known during the War of the Rebellion from the application of it to himself and his soldiers by Col. Jennison of the Seventh Kansas. From his regiment it passed to all Kansas soldiers, and finally was applied to the inhabitants of Kansas themselves.

Pat Devlin, the originator of the term "jayhawking," was killed in the fall of 1860, in Aurora, Col. And it is a remarkable coincidence that "Marshall Cleveland," the last and by no means the least of the "jayhawkers," should have been killed on almost the exact spot where the name originated. Marshall Cleveland was known at different times by different aliases. His real name was Metz, and he came to Kansas from Ohio. He was a man of commanding stature, tall and muscular, and brave to a fault. He first made his appearance on the border in 1861, as one of Jennison's jayhawkers. On the 14th of October, he was mustered in as Captain of Company H, Seventh Cavalry, but unable to bear the restraints of army life, he resigned his commission November 1st. Gathering about him a number of men of his own class, he commenced a course of robbery and plunder in the name of "Liberty." Having stolen $125 from H. L. Lyons and considerable property from Joseph and John Beets, himself and two of his confederates, named respectively "Buckskin" and "Rabbit Ear," were indicted for robbery at the March term of the district court. A State warrant was issued for Cleveland, and the Sheriff made several ineffectual attempts to arrest him. He laughed at the civil authorities and defied the military. He was declared an outlaw, and Capt. H. S Greeno, Company C, Sixth Kansas Cavalry, in command at Paola, sent out two soldiers in citizens' clothing, to ascertain his whereabouts. On the 10th of May they found him at the Geer Hotel in Osawatomie. On the same day the Sheriff attempted to arrest him, but failed to procure a posse equal to the task. Capt. Greeno proceeded to Osawatomie in the night. Approaching the town he picketed the roads with a portion of his forces under Sergeant Morris. As daylight approached Sergeant Morris drew in his men, surrounded the Geer Hotel, and, before Capt. Greeno reached the hotel, had received Cleveland's surrender. Cleveland being allowed to dress and come out of the house, sprang upon his horse, which some friend had brought him, broke through the guards and dashed off in the direction of the Pottawatomie, followed by the whole command. Capt. Greeno and Private John Johnson, being finely mounted, rapidly gained upon the outlaw, and when within range were fired upon by him several times. On arriving at the bank of the creek he dismounted and ran down the steep bank. Johnson also dismounted and approaching the bank, fired a fatal shot at Cleveland from above. He was buried in the Osawatomie cemetery, and some time afterwards his "wife" caused to be erected at the head of his grave a monument bearing the following inscription:

"MARSHALL L. CLEVELAND
MAY 11, 1862.
Earth counts a mortal less
Heaven an angel more."

This is not so much "a new departure in gravestone literature," as it is considered by an excellent local historian, as it is an apotheosis inspired by a woman's love.

The following extract from our History of Nebraska, published in 1882, will interest at least all those citizens of Miami County who remember Cyrus Tator as an early Probate Judge. It gives the facts regarding his trial and execution:

THE EXECUTION OF TATOR.

Early in the summer of 1863, a tragedy was enacted below the city (Omaha), the facts of which are as follows: On Friday, June 19, the dead body of an unknown man was found in the bend of the river opposite Sulphur Springs, about three miles below Omaha. He had evidently been murdered and thrown into the river, and for some days no one could be found to identify the deceased. Finally he was recognized as Isaac H. Neff, an emigrant who, in company with Cyrus Tator, was journeying West, and had encamped near a place known as the "Saratoga Spring," in the vicinity of which his remains were discovered. A combination of circumstances led the authorities to suspect Cyrus Tator of the murder, and resulted in his arrest, while he was making preparations to escape. He was arraigned for trial before W. P. Kellogg, Judge of the District Court, at the June term thereof. Charles H. Brown, Prosecuting Attorney, with W. A. Little and A. G. Poppleton, counsel for the defense. The examination continued several days, resulting in the conviction of Tator of murder, and his sentence to be hanged, the latter event fixed for August 21, 1863, or two months almost to a day, from the date of the commission of the crime. Exceptions were taken to the rulings of the Court during the trial, which were over-ruled, a writ of error denied by the Supreme Courts, and the accused hanged on Friday, August 21, 1863, on the very spot where his crime had been committed. Before the fatal knot was adjusted, Tator called God to witness that he was an innocent man; that he had not murdered Isaac H. Neff, and was ignorant of the author of the deed. The trap-door of the scaffold was sprung at 1 o'clock precisely, and Tator was launched into eternity. He died almost immediately, and after hanging twenty-two minutes, his body was lowered, placed in a coffin, and awaited the demands of his friends. He left a wife and child.

AN ATTEMPT TO RESCUE A FUGITIVE SLAVE.

The following incident is given as illustrative of the attitude the Free state men assumed toward Slavery and the laws designed for its protection. It was in the fall of 1858. The postoffice at Mound City, Linn County, had been robbed, and Cyrus Shaw, of Paola, was requested by the postmaster at Westport to go down to Mound City, with the necessary blanks, affidavits, etc., for the postmaster there to sign in order to satisfy the Department it was a case of robbery. On his way down, when in the northern part of Linn County, he met three Missourians. As was customary with them in those days, they inquired of him where he was going, and what his business was. Mr. Shaw gave such answers as seemed to him to suit the occasion, and at last took a small flask of whisky out of an inside pocket, of which he invited his Missouri friends to partake. Up to this time they suspected Mr. Shaw of being a Free-state man, which he in fact was; but at sight of the whisky they were instantly reassured, and one of them, swinging his arm, shouted out: "Oh! by G–d, boys, he's all right, he's all right," thus unwittingly paying a very handsome compliment to Free-state men. To drink whisky was one of the characteristic virtues of a Border Ruffian. They then informed Mr. Shaw of the object of their visit to Kansas. One of them had lost a slave, and the slave was supposed to be near Osawatomie. Mr. Shaw, desirous of closing the interview as early as practicable, assented to the possibility of their surmise being correct, and soon each party was pursuing its respective journey.

The slave-hunting party upon arriving in the neighborhood of Osawatomie, discovered the hiding-place of the fugitive, and informed an old and trusted Missouri friend residing there, of the object of their mission. Suspicion was in some way excited in the minds of Free-state men as to what that object was. Several members of the Underground Railway Company were immediately notified of the interesting condition of affairs. They promptly rallied their forces, proceeded at once to where the fugitive slave was staying, and took him directly to his master at the house of the latter's Missouri friend.

To the great surprise of the master, the slave was brought in and introduced to him. The object of the call and introduction was not, however, for the purpose of surrendering up the fugitive, as the master, his companions from Missouri and his resident Missouri friend very quickly discovered; but it was to inform them in the first place that the Dred Scott decision was null and void in Kansas, and that the soil of Kansas should not be made the hunting-ground for the slave owner; and in the second place, that the owner of this slave should aid him on his way to Canada instead of taking him back to Missouri. Accordingly the master was compelled to hand over to his former "chattel," his overcoat, undercoat and vest, next his pocket-book, from which about $300 was taken, then he was obliged to exchange his pantaloons for those of the negro, and then off came a fine pair of boots, which were also involuntarily exchanged for an old pair the negro had on. The negro was then asked by Captain Snyder who was in charge of the affairs of the Underground Railway Company just at this time, if there was anything else he would need on his trip to Canada, to which "Washington" replied that his old hat did not correspond well with the rest of his suit, and upon being instructed by his liberators to do so, he selected from the head of one of his pursuers a fine silk stove-pipe hat, which added very much to the dignity of his person. He was then told to go to the stable and select a horse, saddle and bridle belonging to the slave-hunters, with which he could pursue his journey to Canada with celerity and comfort. Thus equipped, thanking his friends for their timely and kind assistance, he resumed his journey toward Freedom, while his pursuers, crest-fallen, poorer and much wiser men, retraced their steps to Missouri to relate the story of their wrongs, and to dilate upon the utter disregard of the rights of property manifested by the "jayhawkers" of Kansas.

POLITICAL HISTORY.

On the 16th of April, 1856, a meeting was held at Osawatomie, at which resolutions were adopted against the payment of taxes assessed under the Bogus Laws. At this meeting, John Brown, Sr., made a speech. At the term of court for the Second Judicial District which began at Paola on the 27th of May, a grand jury was impanelled and an indictment found against John Brown, Sr., John Brown, Jr., O. C. Brown, O. V. Dayton, Alexander Gardner, Richard Mendenhall, Charles A. Foster, Charles H. Crane, William Partridge, and William Chestnut, in which it was charged that they "did unlawfully, and wickedly conspire, combine, confederate and agree together to resist the enforcement of the laws passed by the Legislature for the collection of taxes." After the Pottawatomie tragedy, companies of militia from Lykins and Linn counties, under command of Maj. Gen. Coffey, went to the scene of the murders and gave the bodies of the victims as decent interment as was possible under the circumstances. On the return march a number of prominent Free-state men, were taken prisoners. Against none of them, however, was made any charge of participation in the massacre, with the possible exception of John Brown, Jr., and it is certain that he was with his company in camp near Capt. Shore's in the northern part of Franklin County at the time. The prisoners arrested were taken to Paola during the term of court mentioned above, and all but eight discharged. Among these eight were: John Brown, Jr., Jason Brown, H. H. Williams, William Partridge, Hugh Kilbourn and James Townsley. They were taken from Paola to Osawatomie and placed in the custody of a company of United States dragoons, who treated them with considerable severity. The charge against them was that they were guilty of "high treason." After having been alternately in the hands of the United States troops and the Marshal's posse, until November, most of them were discharged at Lecompton by Judge Lecompte. As showing what was required to constitute "high treason" in Kansas in those days, it may be stated that the basis of the charge against H. H. Williams consisted in his having been elected a member of the Free state Legislature, and Captain of the Pottawatomie Rifle Company.

Partridge, Townsley, and Kilbourn were held for some time after the others were released. Kilbourn had been sentenced to twelve months confinement for stealing a horse or two from a band of Missourians who a few days before had burned his house and robbed him of all he possessed. Townsley was charged with having participated in the Pottawatomie tragedy. Partridge was charged with having bought a stolen wagon, with grand larceny, and with conspiracy against the Territorial laws. He had a trial on the second charge on the 16th of December before Judge Cato. His lawyer was Johnson of Leavenworth, commonly called "red-eyed Johnson," a strict Pro slavery man. Johnson told the prosecuting attorney all the points in Partridge's defense, and then left his client and the town. Judge Cato forced Partridge to an immediate trial, giving him no time to produce witnesses or to procure other counsel. The jury was packed to suit the judge, as many Free-state men put on as could be thrown off by peremptory challenges, and several Pro-slavery men kept on who admitted in court that they had already formed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. About this time Col. Johnson, of Kansas City, and M. J. Parrott happened to come into the court room. Several witnesses were introduced, but, with one exception none of them knew of Partridge ever having committed any crime. This one, a Mrs. Totten, testified that he had once passed her house, stopping in the road to view it a moment, then going on; and that at another time he had come into the house at night and inquired for Mr. Totten. Upon being informed that Mr. Totten was not at home he remarked that it was d—d strange. This was the sum total of the evidence adduced against him; yet it was sufficient to prove to the unbiased and intelligent jury before which he was tried the guilt of grand larceny; and of grand larceny he was convicted. The astute and righteous judge as a fitting climax to the farce of a trial, sentenced him to ten years' imprisonment! So enraged at this result was Col. Johnson that he commenced cursing the court, jury and all concerned, declaring that all had been done through bribery from beginning to end. Even "Postscript Donaldson" declared it a "damnable outrage and deserving of severe punishment."

Below is a copy of the indictment against Partridge for "conspiracy." It is a great document and shows what a man can do when he "combines, confederates and agrees together," and aids himself with

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, }

"In the United States Court of the Second Judicial District setting in and for the county of Lykins and Territory of Kansas, May term, A. D., 1856, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six.

(Signed) WILLIAM BARBEE,
Pros. Atty. Pro Tem."

After receiving his sentence, Partridge was taken from the Tecumseh jail and turned over to the master of convicts, Capt. Hampton, at Lecompton. On the 15th of January following, he, together with Cushing and another Free-state convict, made good their escape.

Gov. Geary had said that Partridge "was one of the worst men and one of the principal agitators in Kansas, and should receive no sympathy from him;" but afterwards saw cause to change his opinion, and was very desirous to have him return that he might be reprieved and "be at liberty with none to molest him." He was a brother of George Partridge, killed at the battle of Osawatomie.

With regard to young Kilbourn, it may be added, in explanation of the charge against him of horse-stealing:—During the latter part of August, 1856, the Missourians burned the house and barn of Hugh Kilbourn, among others, on Pottawatomie Creek, destroying and driving off everything he had. In company with several others, Henry Kilbourn, son of Hugh, followed the invaders to the west line of Missouri, and took property enough from them to partially cover his father's loss. He was arrested, brought into court and sentenced to one year's solitary confinement in the county jail.

The organization of the Republican party in Kansas, occurred on the 18th of May, 1859, at Osawatomie. It was the most notable and important political event of the year. The Convention was called to order by T. D. Thacher of Lawrence; Henry Fox, of Shawnee County was elected temporary chairman, and T. D. Thacher, Secretary. The following was the Committee on Credentials: E. Heath, A. Danford, P. Shepherd, James L. McDowell, John A. Martin, William Spriggs and A. J. Shannon. The Committee on permanent organization, consisting of Branscomb, Fearl, Lawrence, Fletcher, Delahay, McKay, Larzelere, Rapp, Burnett, Pomeroy, Gilpatrick and Shannon, reported as follows: President, O. E. Learnard; Vice-Presidents Nathan Price, S. C. Pomeroy, Thomas Ewing, Jr., Joseph Speck, E. Heath, Henry Fox, D. W. Houston and E. G. Jewell: Secretaries, D. W. Wilder, T. D. Thacher, J. F. Cummings and John A. Martin. After the organization was effected, the Convention was addressed by Horace Greeley, one of the purest and noblest of American statesmen. In the course of his address, Mr. Greeley made the following allusion to the first martyr President: "The able and gallant Lincoln, of Illinois, whom we had hoped to meet and hear to-day, has happily illustrated the Squatter Sovereignty principle, thus: If A. wants to make B. a slave, C. must not interfere to prevent him." Mr. Greeley, closed with the following grand and prophetic peroration: "Freemen of Kansas! I would inspire you with no unwarranted, no overweening confidence of success in the great struggle directly before us. I have passed the age of illusions, and no longer presume a party or cause destined to triumph merely because I know it should. On the contrary, when I consider how vast are the interests and influences combined to defeat us—the Three Thousand Millions of property in human flesh and blood—the subserviency of commerce to this great source of custom and profit—the prevalence of ignorance and of selfishness affecting the many millions prodigally lavished by the wielders of Federal authority—the lust of office and the prevalence of corruption—I often regard the struggle of 1860, with less of hope than of apprehension. Yet, when I think of the steady diffusion of intelligence, the manifest antagonism between the Slavery Extensionists and the interests of Free Labor—when I consider how vital and imminent is the necessity for the passage of the Free Land bill—when I feel how the very air of the Nineteenth Century vibrates to the pulsations of the great heart of Humanity, beating higher and higher with aspirations for Universal Freedom, until even barbarous Russia is intent on striking off the shackles of her fettered millions. I cannot repress the hope that we are on the eve of a grand, beneficent victory. But whether destined to be waved in triumph over our next great battle-field, or trodden into the mire through our defeat, I entreat you to keep the Republican flag flying in Kansas, so long as one man can anywhere be rallied to defend it. Defile not the glorious dust of the martyred dead whose freshly grassed graves lie thickly around us, by trailing that flag in dishonor or folding it in cowardly despair on this soil so lately reddened by their patriotic blood. If it be destined in the mysterious Providence of God, to go down, let the sunlight which falls lovingly on their graves catch the last defiant wave of its folds in the free breeze which sweeps over these prairies; let it be burned, not surrendered, when no one remains to uphold it, and let its ashes rest forever with theirs by the banks of the Marais des Cygnes."

WAR RECORD.

Company D, of the Tenth Regiment, was raised mainly in Miami County. Of this company Eli Snyder, of Osawatomie, was mustered in as Captain, and resigned May 27, 1862. He was followed by John Downing, of New Lancaster, George D. Brooks, of Kansas City, and F. A. Smalley, of Osawatomie, were successively, First Lieutenants, and F. A. Smalley and R. W. Wood, of Osawatomie, Second Lieutenants.

The Twelfth Regiment of Infantry was mustered in at Paola, September 30, 1862, and mustered out at Little Rock, Ark., June 30, 1865. Its Colonel was Charles W. Adams, of Lawrence, who was promoted Brevet Brigadier General, February 13, 1865; Lieutenant Colonel, Josiah E. Hayes, Olathe. Companies C and D were recruited principally in Miami

County. Nick L. Beuter, of Osage, was Captain of Company C. After the assassination of Captain Beuter, April 2, 1864, at Hot Springs, Ark., by bushwhackers, First Lieutenant, William O. Hubbell, of Paola, was promoted Captain, July 19. After William O. Hubbell, William R. Nichols, of Stanton, and William A. Wells, of Osage, were successively, First Lieutenants of Company C, and William B. Nichols, and Samuel S. Kirkham, of Paola, Second Lieutenants.

Of Company D, George W. Ashby, of Prairie City, was Captain, mustered in September 25, 1862, and resigned May 29, 1865. Henry Shively, of Stanton, and Alfred Johnson, of Peoria, were successively, First Lieutenants; and Alfred Johnson, and William H. Baker, of Berea, Second Lieutenants.

Company F, of the Fourteenth Regiment Cavalry, was raised mainly in Miami County. Of this company, Albert J. Briggs, of Paola, was mustered in as Captain, August 26, 1863, and promoted Major, June 3, 1865. The next day John A. Huff, of Paola, who was mustered in as First Lieutenant, August 26, 1863, was promoted Captain, and William D. Parish, Second Lieutenant, was promoted First Lieutenant, June 7.

Company C, Fifteenth Regiment Cavalry, was raised partly in Miami County. Benjamin F. Simpson, of Paola, was mustered in as Captain of this company, October 6, 1863, and promoted Major June 7, 1865. James H. Young, of Olathe, succeeded as Captain. Joseph Phillips, of Paola, and John Murphy were successively First Lieutenants of this company, and Isom Smith, of Rising Sun, and Ralph J. Farnsworth, of Paola, Second Lieutenants.

Miami County suffered, perhaps, less than some other border counties from rebel raids during the war. The most important incident was the passing of Quantrill through the county within two miles of Paola on the afternoon and night of the 21st of August, after the massacre at and burning of Lawrence. Upon learning of his approach, measures for defense were speedily taken. A force was speedily organized under command of Major B. F. Simpson, afterwards of the famous Fifteenth Regiment who, at the time, was at home, recruiting soldiers, and stationed in ambuscade on the Stanton road, to await the approach of Quantrill and his men. Quantrill, becoming aware of the preparations for his reception, turned northward, when two miles west of town, crossed Walnut Creek, and, proceeding northeastwardly, camped on the west side of Bull Creek, near Rock Ford, five miles north of Paola. Col. Plumb had been following Quantrill from the vicinity of Lawrence, all day, and, missing his trail, came upon Major Simpson's ambuscade about dusk, his horses, upon reaching Bull Creek, rushing down into it to quench their famishing thirst. Had not Major Simpson fortunately recognized Col. Plumb's voice, it is probable that the latter's men would have been badly cut to pieces, by the former's mistaking them for Quantrill's. Quantrill's camp was discovered some time before midnight. A plan of attack was drawn up and men and officers were eager to carry it into effect, but Col. Clark, the ranking officer, declined to give the order to advance. Capt. Nick L. Beuter, Company C, Twelfth Kansas Infantry, arrived at Paola about midnight, by forced march from West Point, Mo. He immediately reported to Col. Clark, and, with Major Simpson, asked for orders to advance on Quantrill. Such orders being withheld, he then asked permission to take his own Company, C, and make the attack without other aid, proffering to assume all responsibility for the success of the attack. This being also refused, no further attempt was made, until Quantrill had left his camp on Bull Creek and taken up his march for Missouri. Then only a few of his stragglers were overtaken and killed.

It is safe to assume that had a brave and efficient officer been in command at Paola on the night of the 21st of August, 1863, and one having his heart in his work, Quantrill and his whole band of murderous ruffians would have been intercepted and slain, with "no quarter" for the battle cry, and thus been made to pay the just penalty of their diabolism in Lawrence in the morning of that ever-memorable day. Had Capt. Beuter been in command this consummation, then so devoutly to be wished, would have been accomplished. E. W. Robinson, in his history of Miami County, pays the following just tribute to brave Capt. Beuter: "He was the very man to fight Quantrill. * * * He was a 'model soldier of the Republic,' and the brave men he commanded, many of whom are yet residents of the county, hold dear the memory and deeds of their vigilant, active and faithful Captain, who sleeps well his last sleep in ground returned to and retained in the Union by the patriotic self-sacrifice of Nick L. Beuter, and the thousands who, like him, fought treason to its overthrow, and re-established the authority of the Government at the expense of life itself. Capt. Beuter, while acting in the capacity of Assistant Adjutant-General, Second Brigade, Seventh Army Corps, was assassinated while in the discharge of his official duty. He died a hero, with his armor on. His remains were buried on a round mound, six miles north of Hot Springs, Arkansas, on the 3rd of April, 1864."

On account of what seemed to many citizens of Kansas, inefficiency on the part of the Generals commanding on the Border at the time, and smarting under the escape of Quantrill, a convention assembled at Paola, of which T. A. Osborn was President, which adopted resolutions asking for the removal of Generals Schofield and Ewing, and the establishment of a new military department. It would appear, however, that this convention were in a predicament very similar to that occupied by Mr. Lincoln, as described by himself, when he apologized to an applicant for a pass through the lines, for not granting the pass, by saying that he "had very little influence with the administration."

COUNTY ORGANIZATION AND BUILDINGS.

Lykins County (now Miami) was organized by the Legislature, elected March 30, 1855, and named in honor of Dr. Lykins, the oldest white resident of the county. At that election, Dr. Lykins and A. M. Coffey were elected to the Council, and W. A. Heiskell, Allen Wilkinson, Henry Younger and Samuel Scott, all Pro-slavery, were elected to the House of Representatives. Dr. Lykins was a well educated physician, and from 1844 to 1861, had charge of the Mission School, one mile east of Paola. In the latter year he removed to Colorado, and died on his arrival at Denver.

Court House.—The first steps looking towards the erection of a court house were taken July 29, 1857, when it was ordered by the Commissioners that "the sum of $15,000 be appropriated to build a court house at Paola, that the bonds of the county bearing ten per cent. interest be issued and that they shall not be sold at less than par." The bonds were not issued, nor has the court house been built. On the 10th of April, 1862, the Board paid $800 for "Union Hall," to be used as a court house. After using the second story of the "Rainey Block" some years for county offices, the Commissioners, on May 8, 1876, leased the old "Paola school building" for a court house, and on the 7th of November following, a vote was had on the purchase of the building, which resulted in the casting of 1,872 votes in favor of the purchase, to 307 against it. Total amount paid for the building $9,200.

ELECTIONS AND LAND SALES.

The first election held in the county was for members of the Council and House of Representatives, March 30, 1855. Most of Lykins County was included in Bull Creek precinct, of the Fifth District, and the election was held at the house of Baptiste Peoria, about twenty rods west of the present location of the Normal school, Paola. The judges of election, appointed by Gov. Reeder, were: John J. Parks, J. J. Clark and Stephen White; those who acted were Parks, Payne and B. C. Westfall, and they were not sworn. Most of the voters came from Missouri the few days before for the purpose of voting. They were all heavily armed, and asserted that if any one attempted to prevent them from voting, they would "assert their rights and vote anyhow." Samuel Wade, from near New Santa Fe, Mo., after voting for himself, voted for his son, Jim Wade, a boy about ten years old, saying, in explanation, that he had taken a claim for him, on Bull Creek, and that he expected Jimmy would become a resident of the Territory and a voter. For the sake of effect the judges asked several persons if they were willing to be sworn that they were residents of the Territory, at which they would pretend to get angry, threaten to whip the judges and refuse to be sworn. The matter, however, was understood and arranged beforehand. The result of the election was that the Pro-slavery candidates were elected by a vote of 377, to nine for the Free state candidates. At the time there were twenty* legal voters in the precinct, but as the Missourians were well armed, under the influence of whisky all day and very threatening, some of the Free-state men did not vote. The Free-State candidates for the Council were M. G. Morris and James P. Fox; for the House, John Serpell, Adam Pore, S. H. Houser and Samuel Jennings.

On October 1, 1855, an election was held for a delegate to Congress. J. W. Whitfield was the Pro-slavery candidate, and in the Paola precinct received 220 votes. At the time there were seventy legal voters residing in the precinct, hence 150 illegal votes were cast. The Free-state men took no part in the election.

On the 9th of the same month an election was held for delegates to the Topeka Constitutional Convention, and for a delegate to Congress. Osawatomie precinct cast 67 votes and Stanton 35. The delegates elected from the Fifth District, of which Lykins County formed a part, were William Turner, James M. Arthur, W. T. Morris, Orville C. Brown, Richard Knight, Fred Brown, H. Smith, and Wm. S. Nichols. A. H. Reeder received 44 votes in Stanton and 74 in Osawatomie. At this election the Pro-slavery men took no part.

On the 15th of December an election was held on the adoption of the Topeka Constitution. Stanton cast 32 votes for the Constitution; Osawatomie 56 for and 1 against it. At the same time Stanton cast 33 votes for, to 5 against, and Osawatomie 38 for to 17 against the exclusion of negroes and mulattoes.

On the 15th of January, 1856, an election was held for the election of State officers and members of the general assembly of the State. Osawatomie cast 82, and Stanton 31 votes.

At the election of October 6, 1856, for delegate to Congress, J. W. Whitfield received 133 votes in Lykins County, Martin White and J. P. Fox receiving, respectively, 127 and 105 votes for representatives in the Territorial Legislature. The Free-State men did not vote.

At the election of June 15, the next year, Lykins County cast 58 votes for delegates to the Lecompton Constitutional Convention, electing David Lykins, Wm. A. Heiskell, Henry T. Lyons and J. T. Bradford as members. According to the census taken prior to this election, the county contained 1,332 inhabitants, and 413 legal voters.

August 9, 1857, at the election for officers under the Topeka Constitution, there were cast in Lykins County for Rev. S. L. Adair, for Senator, 201 votes; for representatives J. W. Stewart received 427 votes and E. W. Robinson 417. At the election of October 5, when the two parties in Kansas for the first time measured their strength, Lykins County cast for the Free-state candidates for the Territorial Legislature, 348 votes; for the Democratic, 59, electing A. J. Shannon and John Hanna to the House, and H. B. Standiford to the Council.

A vote was taken on the Lecompton Constitution, and for officers under it, December 21, 1857. Lykins County cast 81 votes for the Constitution with slavery, and 12 for it without slavery; and 517 votes on Governor. H. H. Williams was elected Senator, and Charles A. Foster, Representative. A second election was held January 4, 1858, on the Lecompton Constitution, at which time Lykins County cast 358 votes against it, 1 vote for it with slavery, and 1 for it without slavery. On January 26, David Sibbett was elected to the Council to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. H. B. Standiford, which occurred January 3. On the 15th of February, Charles A. Foster, G. A. Colton, Thomas Roberts and A. Knapp were elected delegates to the Leavenworth Constitutional Convention. This convention met at Minneola, March 23, and adjourned to Leavenworth on the 24th.

August 2, a vote was taken on the English Bill. Lykins gave 99 votes for it, and 440 against it. At the Territorial election held October 4, M. F. Holladay and Abram Ellis were elected to the House, the former receiving 363 votes, the latter 273.

The first election under the Wyandotte Constitution movement was held March 28, 1859. Lykins cast 460 votes for a convention, and 64 against it, but as only the votes of Marysville reached the capital, and as they were sent to the Governor instead of to the County Board, they were not counted. The second election under this movement, held June 4, for delegates to the Wyandotte Constitutional Convention, resulted in electing B. F. Simpson by 443 votes, and W. P. Dutton by 431. The third election was on the adoption of the constitution, held October 4, 1858. According to the proclamation of Gov. Medary, Lykins County cast 492 votes for the constitution, and 295 against it; and for the exemption of a homestead from forced sale, 455 for, to 225 against. The fourth election, held November 8, was for officers under the Constitution. Marcus J. Parrott, the Republican candidate for delegate to Congress, received 453 votes, to 355 for Saunders W. Johnston, the Democratic nominee. W. W. Updegraff was elected to the Council, receiving 994 votes, and W. R. Wagstaff to the House. The fifth election was held December 6, for State officers. Charles Robinson received 312 votes for Governor, to 200 for Samuel Medary, in Lykins County. James A. Phillips was elected to the Senate, and Abram Ellis, G. A. Colton and Cyrus Tator to the House.

Public Land Sales.—The public sales of Indian trust lands took place, June 24, 1857, at Paola. These lands were of the finest and best in the Territory, and the sale of them was largely attended. It was the design to sell only to actual settlers, and while the regulations governing the sales were in some cases evaded, as a general thing the land sold fell into the possession of those who desired it for purposes of settlement instead of speculation. The result of the sale was that Lykins County secured a large addition to its population of industrious, intelligent and prosperous citizens.

Hon. Robert J. Walker, who had, on May 9 previous, taken the oath of office as Governor of the Territory, Governor Bigler, Secretary Stanton, E. O. Perrine and others, were present, and made speeches on the political issues of the day. As a general thing, the speeches gave satisfaction to men of all parties. A portion of Mr. Perrine's speech, however, greatly offended the Free-state men. On the other hand, Charles A. Foster, of Osawatomie, in his reply to the addresses by the distinguished visitors, reflected severely on the policy of both the territorial and national governments, and was somewhat personal in his remarks upon the Pro-slavery leaders in the county. This stirred up considerable ill-feeling in both parties. Pistols and knives were drawn and serious trouble threatened several times, but fortunately the meeting adjourned without bloodshed.

On the life of Hon. H. B. Standiford, who, while a member of the Territorial Legislature, died at Lecompton, January 3, 1858, we quote from E. W. Robinson's History of Miami County, as follows: "By the death of Mr. Standiford, Lykins County lost one of her ablest and most widely respected citizens. He was a leader to be trusted, a friend warm and steadfast, and a citizen whose calm judgment, in public and private life, was consulted and relied upon by the entire community. In public life, he was an uncompromising Free-state man; firm, but not vindictive, active, but not revengeful. He had been an anti-slavery member of the Missouri Legislature, and came to Kansas in the spring of 1855, locating near the town of Stanton, where he took up his residence. He attended the special session of the Legislature which assembled at Lecompton, December 7, 1855, and died the day previous to the meeting of that body in regular session. His remains lie buried in the cemetery at Stanton."

RAILROADS.

Miami County is traversed by two railroads—the Missouri River, Fort Scott & Gulf, and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad. The former runs through the county from north to south, the latter enters it from Missouri on the east, and after reaching Paola turns southwest and runs into Anderson County. The first vote on issuing bonds was cast November 7, 1865, and resulted in favor of the proposition to subscribe for $150,000 of the capital stock of the Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad Company, and to pay for the same with $150,000 in county bonds, by a vote of 488 to 248. On August 5, 1869, an election was held on the proposition to subscribe $100,000 to the capital stock of the Paola & Fall River Railroad, and $125,000 to that of the Paola & State Line Railroad, issuing to each road an amount of county bonds equal to the county's subscription to its stock, upon the condition that the roads be constructed by January 1, 1871. The vote stood 1,061 in favor of the proposition, and 305 against it. The name "Paola & State Line Railroad" was subsequently changed to the "Missouri, Kansas & Texas." On July 27, 1870, a contract was made between the county and this company by which $75,000 in stock and bonds were to be exchanged when the railroad should be constructed from the east line of the State to Paola, and $50,000 when the road should reach the west line of the county. On October 4, a vote was taken on extending the time for the completion of the road from January 1, 1871, to October 1, for its completion to Paola, and to July 1, 1872, for its completion to the west line of the county. On August 1, preceding this election, the $75,000 in the stock of this road issued to the county was sold back to the company for $5. The $150,000 in the stock of the Kansas & Neosho Valley Road (now the Missouri River, Fort Scott & Gulf), had been previously sold for a like sum, $5. On the 21st of June, 1871, a contract was made with the Paola & Fall River Railroad by which the road was to be completed by July 1, 1872. The company failing to complete its road before the expiration of the time, the $100,000 in bonds, hitherto issued, were called in, cancelled and destroyed, July 3, 1872; as were likewise, at the same time, $50,000 issued to the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, that company having failed to complete its proposed extension west of Paola. The sum total of county bonds issued to railroads, and not called in, comprises $150,000 to the Missouri, Fort Scott & Gulf Road, and $75,000 to the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Road, in all, $225,000. Of this amount $7,200 was paid in July, 1882, leaving outstanding $117,800, the annual interest of which, at seven per cent., is $15,246. The assessed value of all railroad property is $450,742, the taxes upon which, at three per cent., amount to $13,522.26, nearly enough to pay the interest on the bonds.

This is, however, slightly modified by the fact that Osawatomie Township issued $15,000 in bonds to the St. Louis, Arizona & Texas, the successor of the Paola & Fall River Railroad, the company fulfilling the conditions of the grant by completing its road by January 1, 1880. This road is now a part of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas.

PAOLA

Paola is situated two miles west of the geographical center of the county, on somewhat elevated rolling land, between Bull Creek on the west and south, and Wea on the east. The valleys of these creeks have considerable timber, and this, with high land across the valleys, render the surroundings quite beautiful and pleasant.

The town of Paola was laid out in the spring of 1855, and incorporated by the Legislature during the session of that year, its limits comprising all that tract of country "set forth and defined in the plat of said town." The Paola Town Company was incorporated about the same time, the corporators being Baptiste Peoria, Isaac Jacobs, A. M. Coffey, and David Lykins. This company was authorized to acquire title to any quantity of land not exceeding 600 acres. The Board of Trustees appointed consisted of William A. Heiskell, Isaac Jacobs, William H. Lebow, B. P. Campbell and Peter Potts. The name of the town was selected in honor of Baptiste Peoria, and is derived from the Indian pronunciation of the word "Peoria." The streets were laid out at an angle with the points of the compass, of eleven and one-half degrees to the east of north, south of east, etc., and all those streets running nearly east and west named after various tribes of Indians having reservations in this part of the Territory. The corporators, after organizing and acquiring title to about 400 acres of land, fixed the value of the land, assets, rights, credits and effects at $36,000, and divided the same into seventy-two shares, of which Baptiste Peoria, William G. Krutz, T. J. Anderson and W. R. Wagstaff each held twelve shares, and William E. Ide, A. J. Shannon and Ezra T. Nye each held six.

In June, 1857, Baptiste Peoria was elected President of the Paola Town Company, and A. J. Shannon Agent and Secretary. On the 29th of June, 1858, Baptiste Peoria was re-elected President, Allen T. Ward, Treasurer, and W. R. Wagstaff Agent and Secretary. From this time until after the expiration by limitation of the Charter of the Paola Town Company, granted in 1855 and continuing ten years, no further meeting of the Company was held, and no other officers chosen during its corporate existence. Allen T. Ward, Treasurer, died in June, 1862, and the vacancy caused by his death was not filled. Under the law applicable to the dissolution of corporations, W. R. Wagstaff, as Agent and Secretary, became Trustee, with full power to settle its affairs. He continued to manage its affairs until its property was finally disposed of.

On the 10th day of August, 1868, Wagstaff as agent sold to William G. Krutz 142 lots of the Town Company's property, upon promise of payment of $4,000, and of the erection on lot 6 of a hotel not less than 55x60 feet, and three stories high, said hotel to be completed by August 10, 1869. In March, 1869, the construction of the hotel was commenced, in the meantime Mr. Krutz was selling lots to any and all purchasers, until he had received $12,895.86 on such sales, and had paid no part of the $4 000. The hotel was completed about November 1, 1869, at a cost of $25,000. Up to the 6th of August, 1874, Krutz had received as rents for the hotel about $13.000, at which time the building was destroyed by fire. It was insured for $12,000, and the insurance paid to Mr. Krutz. During 1869 and 1870, Krutz, as voluntary and trusted agent of the company, sold town lots to the aggregate value of $18,000. On May 28, 1873, being pressed by creditors, Krutz conveyed by deed large and valuable tracts of land in Miami County to his son-in-law, Charles E. Hedges, of Sioux City, Iowa. In 1874, the property was re-conveyed to Mr. Krutz. A suit was brought against Krutz, September 1, 1874, for $22,000 and interest, and on January 15, 1881, a judgment obtained for $16,763.47.

The first house in Paola was built by S. P. Boone for Isaac Jacobs, the second by a Mr. White, just east of the present location of the Baptist Church, the third by the Town Company, on the site afterwards occupied by the St. Charles Hotel, and the fourth by Knowles and Cyrus Shaw. Cyrus Shaw opened a store in this building December 25, 1855. The Town Company afterwards built a hotel on the site of their first building. The first school was taught by Mrs. May Williams, now Mrs. Cyrus Shaw, in the fall of 1856. The first birth was that of Sue Heiskell, daughter of W. A. and Mrs. Heiskell, May 31, 1857; the first marriage that of George Tomlinson to Mary Mead, in the spring of 1856, and the first death, that of an infant son of Dr. Coffee, in the Spring of 1857.

At the time of the land sales Paola contained about thirty inhabitants. In the early years, border troubles retarded its growth, in 1860, the town suffered in common with the whole Territory, in consequence of the drouth, and in 1861, the war of the rebellion came lasting four years. During this time neither person nor property was considered safe, and few were added to the population; but after the war, and especially when the prospect of railroad communication became certain, people came in and prices of property became more steady. The city has since that time steadily improved. It now contains a population of about 3,000, and is one of the prettiest towns in the eastern part of the State.

In 1860, a special charter was granted by the Legislature under which the town was organized as a city of the third class. This form of government continued until 1862, when Paola became a city of the second class. The following is a list of its Mayors: Allen T. Ward, G. W. Brown, E. W. Robinson, A. G. McKinzie, B. F. Simpson, J. Stoddard, J. H. Smith, William Crowell, J. B. Hobson, J. W. Sponable, B. Miller and W. B. Brayman.

Paola has one of the finest school buildings in eastern Kansas, erected in 1872, at a cost of $65,000. It is a three story brick, with stone basement, beautifully situated on an elevation northeast of the town. The Kansas Normal School and Business Institute are located in the building.

Paola has always been the county-seat. But one election has been held on this question, at which time, in 1858, Osawatomie was the principal competitor. In this election Indianapolis cast its vote in favor of Paola, thus defeating Osawatomie, the citizens of Indianapolis not desiring the capital of the county "so near and yet so far."

J. Hoeckin. He remained until 1853, when he was succeeded by Father P. M. Ponziglione, who was followed in 1859 by father J. Schacht. Father S. Favre came in 1862, and was succeeded by Father F. J. In 1859 the society commenced the erection of a stone church, completing it, with the exception of floor, door and windows, in 1860. The first years of the war interfered materially with religious affairs in this part of Kansas, and the church was used until 1863, for a stable. At this time the church was finished and devoted to legitimate uses. In 1881 a large brick church building was completed, 40x70 feet in size, and costing $7,000. Baptiste Peoria gave the church five lots, and five acres of land for a cemetery. The present membership of the church is 250, with a Sunday school of fifty scholars.

He served a regular apprenticeship of five years at the carriage making trade—three years at Tiffin and two years at Cincinnati, Ohio, and became proficient in the business. In 1854 he engaged in the brewing business near Cincinnati, Ohio, and continued in that line a year and a half. He next worked in various places as journeyman carriage maker until 1860, when he engaged in carriage making at Kansas City, Mo.; not being in sympathy with the secession element of that city, he closed out his business the next spring and moved to Stanton, Miami Co., Kas., and established himself in business in the same line. In August, 1862, he enlisted in the Twelfth Kansas Infantry, and served until the close of the war. He then settled in Paola, and in July, 1865, organized a company for the purpose of doing a general wagon and carriage making business. The company was composed of B. Miller, Max. Miller, Isaac Rowcraft and E. C. Canfield, under the firm name of B. Miller, Bro., & Co. Mr. Canfield retired from the same on account of failing health. Mr. Rowcraft died in September, 1866, which left the firm B. Miller & Bro. Early in 1868 the firm erected the substantial brick buildings now in use by Mr. B. Miller. In the spring of 1869 the firm was operating in the new works with eighteen men. Their reputation for good work has brought them more work than they could handle. And here we want to say that Mr. Miller claims the honor of making the first wagon and the first buggy made south of the Kansas River, for which he chopped down the trees on his own land and spliced out the axles, tongue, bolster, and every piece pertaining to the wagon; hauled the logs to the sawmill with an ox team for the plank for the bed and felloes; built his own forge, dug and hauled his own coal, made the woodwork, ironed and painted the wagon, complete with his own hands—and as good a job as was ever completed and put on the road, in four months after cutting the trees. The wagon was sold to Dan. Shipman, and the buggy to ex-Sheriff W. P. Dutton, of Miami County; this work was done near Stanton. In 1861, the firm of B. Miller & Bro., also put the first carload of wagons across the Red River bridge into Texas on the M., K. & T. R. R. Mr. Max Miller retired from the business on account of failing health in the fall of 1874; he afterwards died on his farm in the county. Mr. B. Miller was then left alone in the business. He then dropped the wagon business and devoted his attention to the manufacture of carriages. His business prospered, and in the spring of the long-to-be-remembered 1875, he erected five brick business rooms in one block in Paola that have many millions of the sprightly young grasshoppers embalmed in the mortar used in construction. The buildings were completed, and proved a business success in spite of the threatened disaster. He has since enlarged his works, and now has the largest exclusive carriage factory west of St. Louis, Mo. Has a repository in Kansas City, a traveler on the road, and some thirty hands employed in his works and upwards of 300 carriages in his shop and warerooms, either finished or in process of construction. He is prepared to supply any reasonable demand in his line. Mr. Miller has long been recognized as one of the foremost men in Paola. He has held various public positions, served as Mayor in 1876-77-78. He aided in founding the First National Bank of Paola, and was president of the Citizens' Building and Savings Association. Aided in founding the Bank of Paola, in which he is now a Director. He is also a charter member of the Commercial Mutual Insurance Company of Paola, and its vice-president. Mr. B. Miller is widely known throughout Kansas as one of the pluckiest, energetic and most honest business men of the State, and enjoys as pleasant a home as there is in the State, surrounded by a large and healthy family, and his future ought to be bright.

His was the second mercantile establishment at that point. Mr. Mitchler was born in Butler County, Ohio. When fifteen years of age he accompanied his father to Iowa. His father, being a merchant, brought him up to a thorough knowledge of the business. In March, 1855, he established himself in business at Leavenworth, Kas. Two years later he moved to a claim; sold out after one and a half years' residence and moved to Westport, Mo.; spent two years at that place and then came to Paola, Kas., in 1859, and established a general store, and has carried on business continuously at this point to date—1883. He gradually enlarged his business as his circumstances would permit, and by always adopting a conservative policy has weathered the several commercial storms that have wrecked so many Western merchants. In 1866 he changed the plan of his trade from a general store to strictly dry goods, clothing, boots and shoes, hats and caps. In 1878 he admitted his four sons into the business—Frank, Alvin, Edwin, and Charles—and formed the firm of G. W. Mitchler & Sons. When not quite eighteen years of age he enlisted as a private soldier at Oshkosh, Wis., in Captain Bouck's Company E, Second Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, which afterwards was a portion of the famous "Iron Brigade" in the Army of the Potomac. At the disastrous battle of Bull Run, on the 21st of July, 1861, he was taken prisoner with about sixty others of his regiment, and remained a prisoner in the hands of the rebels for eleven months in the Richmond tobacco factories at Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Salisbury, N. C. After being paroled and finally exchanged, he rejoined his regiment shortly after Chancellorsville, and participated in the battle of Gettysburg, where he was slightly wounded in the knee. He also participated in General Meade's Mine Run campaign, in November, 1863. In the winter of 1864 he re-enlisted as a veteran volunteer in Company D, Second Regiment Wisconsin Infantry, and was with his regiment at the battle of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna, Cold Harbor, and in the first battles around Petersburg. With a small detachment of his brigade sent out in June, 1864, under Lieutenant Brooks, of the Sixth Wisconsin Infantry to burn the railroad bridge over the Staunton River, he was again made prisoner and held for nearly nine months in the terrible prison pens of Andersonville, Ga., and at Charleston and Florence,

S. C. His regiment took part in the grand review of the armies at Washington in May, 1865, after the close of the war, and Captain Perry was mustered out of the service on the 6th day of July, 1865, having served four years and three months, having taken part in the first and last battles of the war in the Army of the Potomac. He was complimented by Governor Lucius Fairchild with a brevet as Captain for "distinguished gallantry at the battles of the Wilderness and again at Spottsylvania." The first number of the Spirit was issued June 8, 1871, from the basement of the Rainey Block. Angell Matthewson. He then came to Paola, purchased the interest of his partners in the Spirit and assumed personal control of the paper, which he continued to own and manage until May, 1878, when he sold out to Messrs. Carroll, Clarke & Highley, and went into the patent outside publishing business in Kansas City. Through lack of sufficient means Captain Perry failed in his Kansas City enterprise, losing all his capital, and in 1879 he returned to Paola to begin life over again. He purchased of Colonel Colton the Republican Citizen, a paper which had been started in his absence at Kansas City, and continued to run it until the spring of 1880, when he purchased the Miami Republican of J. H. Rice & Sons, and consolidated the two papers, taking as a partner R. P. Rice, of which paper he is still half owner and editor. In 1882 W. D. Greason bought out Rice, and the Republican firm is now Perry & Greason. Captain Perry has always been a Republican, and prominently identified with politics since coming to Kansas. He continued this connection one year, when he purchased the Guernsey Jeffersonian, a Democratic paper, which he conducted with marked success, two years. He then sold out and resumed the practice of his profession in company with Mr. Mathew Gaston at Cambridge. He continued this connection till 1857, when he sold out and immigrated to Kansas, then a sparsely settled territory, whose people were agitated and turbulent over the question of the extension or non-extension of slavery into the Territories. He arrived here in January, 1857, and spent the first year in travel throughout the Territory. OSAWATOMIE.

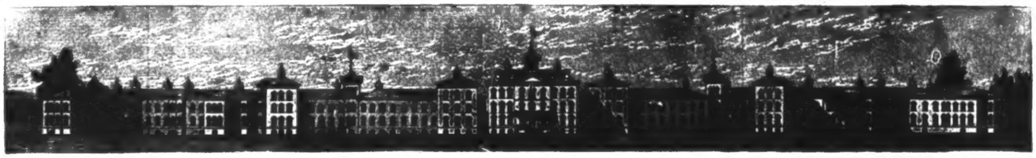
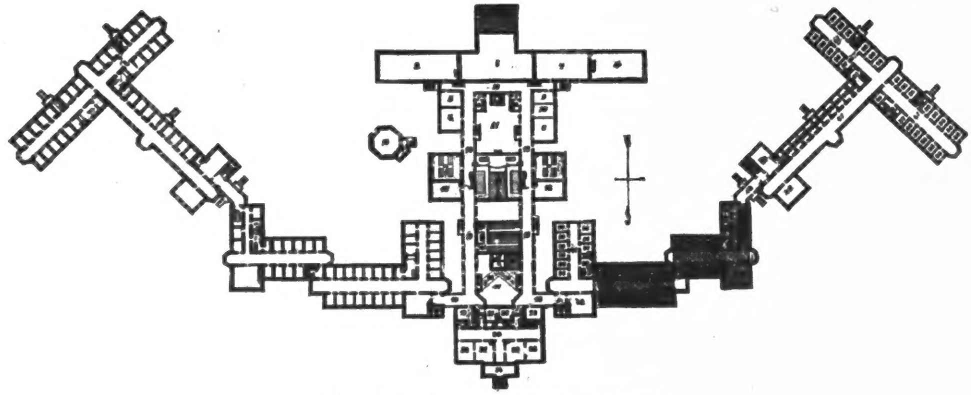
This historic town is located in the southwest part of Miami County, on the Marais des Cygnes, about one mile above the mouth of the Pottawatomie Creek. The surrounding country is partly timber, partly open, rolling prairie, and quite picturesque. A high railroad bridge crosses the Marais des Cygnes from the north side of the town, and about one half mile below, an iron bridge with about two hundred feet span crosses the same river.

The original town company was composed of Orville C. Brown, President; S. C. Pomeroy and Mr. Ward, of New York. The town site was surveyed in February, 1855, by A. D. Searl. The name, Osawatomie, was formed by combining Osa, of Osage, with 'watomie,' of Pottawatomie, the creek by the latter name uniting just below with the Marais des Cygnes, and forming the Osage River (according to early chroniclers).

The first building on the town site was erected by Samuel Geer. It was used by him for a dwelling and boarding house. The first blacksmith was Mr. Holdridge, in 1855, and the same year Dr. Darr opened a drug store. The first child born was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Foster, in December, 1854. The first marriage was that of Andrew Doler to Miss Hughes, in the fall of 1854, and the first natural death that of a child of John R. Everett, early in 1855. During the same year John Serpell, who lived near Osawatomie, was accidentally drowned in the Marais des Cygnes while bathing. The first lawyer in the town was C. H. Crane. Samuel Geer opened the first store in 1855, and also kept the first hotel, which was burned at the sacking of Osawatomie in 1856. He was also the first Postmaster, being appointed December 21, 1855, when the postoffice was first established. In 1858 he built a two story frame hotel 40x50 feet, costing $3,000. It was in this hotel that Horace Greeley made a speech to an assembly of about 5,000 people in the spring of 1859, at the organization of the Republican party in Kansas.



KANSAS STATE INSANE ASYLUM, OSAWATOMIE, KAN.



PLAT OF GROUND, WITH LOCATION OF BUILDING.

The first school was taught in the winter of 1857-58 by Mr. Squires, in a frame schoolhouse. The present schoolhouse is composed of two parts, one stone, the other frame; total cost, $4,000.

The first church organized was the Congregational, in April, 1856, by Rev. S. L. Adair. Until 1861 the society held services in private houses and the schoolhouse, when they built their present stone church edifice at a cost of $2,150. Membership at the time of organization, 7; present membership 18. Mr. Adair has, with the exception of three years, been pastor of this church since its organization.

The Methodist Church was organized in 1856. Their present frame church building was erected in 1881, at a cost of $1,500.

The Emigrant Aid Company, which selected the location for the town, sent out a saw-mill in 1855, and Barker to one set it up and manage it. It was a circular mill, propelled by steam and of great use to the early settlers. It was located on the south bank of the Marais des Cygnes, about a half mile below the town site.

The "First Battle of Osawatomie" occurred June 7, 1856, when John W. Whitfield, with about 170 Missourians, plundered it. At this time there was no killing of the inhabitants nor burning of their dwellings. The town was almost entirely defenceless, of which fact Whitfield had been informed by a young man, a stranger, who had for a week previously been boarding at Mr. Geer's, and who acted as guide to Whitfield's forces. Several dwellings and stores were plundered, and horses carried off. The village, at this time, consisted of about thirty buildings, actual population about 200.

The "Second Battle of Osawatomie" occurred August 30, 1856, a full account of which is given in the general history of the county. Notwithstanding these battles and the general troubles of the times, Osawatomie grew and prospered, and in 1857 was a town of considerable importance, having a population of about 800, 200 of whom were voters. Since this time it has made but little progress, has rather declined. At the present time it contains two general stores, two groceries, two hardware, one drug and one furniture store, one lumber yard, two hotels, three blacksmith shops, one wagon shop, two churches, and about 600 inhabitants.

THE INSANE ASYLUM.

This institution was established for the benefit of the insane of Kansas. It is located about one mile northeast of Osawatomie, on high ground overlooking the surrounding country. By an act of the Legislature, approved March 2, 1863, William Chestnut, of Miami County; I. Hiner, of Anderson, and James Hanway, of Franklin, were appointed commissioners to locate the Asylum, and instructed to locate it in Osawatomie Township, on a tract of not less than 160 acres of land, affording practicable building stone, water and other facilities for the erection of suitable buildings, title to the land to be secured in fee simple to the State by donation.

By an act approved February 14, 1865, a board of three trustees was to be appointed by the Governor, each to hold office six years, one of whom was to be appointed every two years. Under this act, Hon. James Hanway, Rev. L. S. Adair and A. Gove were appointed the first Board of Trustees. Under the law approved March 6, 1873, the number of trustees was changed to six, each holding office for three years, two being appointed each year. By an act approved March 4, 1876, and which took effect March 10, the asylums for the blind, for the deaf and dumb, and for the insane were all placed in control of one board of five trustees, called the State Board of Charitable Institutions. The first board under this law consisted of Thomas T. Taylor, W. B. Slosson, John T. Lanter. John H. Smith and Joseph P. Bauserman.

The resident officers of the asylum consist of a superintendent, steward and matron. The Superintendents, with the commencement of their terms of service, have been as follows: Drs. C. O. Gause, May. 1866; W. W. Updegraff, May, 1869; C. O. Gause, November, 1869; C. P. Lee. November, 1871; L, W. Jacobs, November, 1872; A. H. Knapp, November, 1873; S. B. West. spring of 1877; A. P. Tenney, November, 1877; A. H. Knapp, present incumbent, November, 1878.

The institution owns 160 acres of land and numerous buildings. The main building consists of the central part and two wings, erected at different times since 1866, and completed in 1881, at a total cost of $350,000. In addition there are a dwelling house, ice house, barn and cow stable.

Previously to 1874 each county supported its own insane in the asylum, but during the Legislative session of that year an act was passed by which the Insane Asylum was placed upon the same basis as to support with the other State institutions, and has since been supported by appropriations from the State Treasury.

The following table showing the annual appropriations for the support of the institution since 1866, the number of patients admitted, number discharged, etc., was compiled for this work by Dr. A. H. Knapp, Superintendent of the Asylum.

THE SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

The Osawatomie Monumental Association was organized August 6, 1872, the trustees being H. B. Smith, H. H. Williams and Rev. S. L. Adair. The Charter of the Association is dated November 4, 1872. The object was "to erect a monument to the martyrs who fell in the battle of Osawatomie, August 30, 1856." The bodies of these martyrs were removed from their original resting places, and re-interred in 1860, in a private cemetery in the west part of the town, donated for that special purpose by Charles A. Foster.

The monument which stands immediately over the graves of the martyrs, was prepared and erected by the Hanway Bros., of Lane. It was dedicated August 30, 1877, the twenty-first anniversary of the battle. Just previous to its erection, a suggestion was made to the association, that it would be appropriate to also place an inscription on it in commemoration of John Brown, Sr., who commanded at the battle. This suggestion was acted upon, and accordingly the monument bears the following inscriptions:

East Side—Theron Parker Powers, born October 1, 1832. Charley Keiser.

South Side—David R. Garrison, born December 4, 1826. George W. Partridge December 22, 1827.

West Side—Frederick Brown, son of Capt. John Brown, born December 21, 1830.

In commemoration of those who, on the 30th of August, 1856 gave up their lives at the battle of Osawatomie, in defense of freedom.

North Side—This inscription is also in commemoration of the heroism of Capt. John Brown, who commanded at the battle of Osawatomie, August 30, 1856; who died and conquered American Slavery on the scaffold at Charleston, Va., December 2, 1859.

Placing this inscription upon the monument, has caused the original and primary object of the association to be obscured. It gave color and tone to the dedicatory orations and exercises, quite different from what they would otherwise have been, and caused the monument itself to be called "John Brown's Monument," which it was not designed to be and is not, but is the Monument of the Martyrs who fell at the battle of Osawatomie, August 30, 1856.

The Dedication of the Monument.—The monument erected to commemorate the martyrs to liberty who were killed at the battle of Osawatomie, August 30, 1856, was dedicated August 30, 1877. Ex-Gov. Charles Robinson, presided, made a brief address, and introduced the orator of the day, Hon. John J. Ingalls. After the eloquent oration of Senator Ingalls had been delivered, addresses were made by Hon. Dudley C. Haskell, Judge James Hanway, Col. D. R. Anthony, John Ritchie, Ex-Gov. Charles Robinson and others.

The citizens of Osawatomie, on the day of the dedication, contributed money to build the white picket fence around the cemetery, and provided dinner for a large number of those present. The number in attendance was about 10,000.

The following extract from the Okolona States, published at Okolona, Miss., was published soon after the dedication of the monument:

"Paola, Kan., was the scene of one of the most shameful ceremonies, on the 30th ult., that has ever been recorded in the whole sum and round of history.

"In that town, on that day, a monument was dedicated to old John Brown, whose life in Kansas was the life of a red-handed assassin, robber and incendiary, and who crowned his crimes by sweeping down upon a defenceless hamlet in Virginia, with pike and torch, and bringing death and ruin to many an innocent family.

"And what was his fell purpose? He confessed it himself. He said it was his object to incite an insurrection that would have unleashed a barbarous race in our very midst and resulted in the most hellish carnival of blood, rapine and destruction that the world has ever known.

"He was hung and the world breathed freer, as it always does when a human devil is stopped in his career.

"And it was this fiend in the form of a man that was honored at Paola, Kan., on the 30th ult.

"Now let the criminals in our penitentiaries not despair, for the world has just witnessed the apotheosis of the worst villain that ever lived, and the day may be coming when each and all of them will be canonized by the people of the North."

At the age of seventeen years he was apprenticed to a wholesale wagon and blacksmithing shop, served his apprenticeship and continued in the establishment five years. He also took a regular course at the Congregational Theological College, graduated and was ordained a minister of the denomination in 1841. He began preaching at Sandyville, also at Bolivar, Ohio. Next went to Dundee, Mich., where he had a charge some two and a half years. In 1845, he went to Maumee City, where he spent nearly five years, during two of which he was Principal of the city schools. He next went to Lafayette, Ohio, where he preached four years. In the fall of 1854, he started for Kansas and spent the winter in Kansas City, and the following March, 1855, came to Osawatomie, where he purchased a claim, pre-empted the northeast quarter of Section 9, Township 18, Range 22. Seven children were born to them—two sons and five daughters, of whom only three are living. The eldest, Charles S., married and lives in Osawatomie Township; Henry M., died, aged three and a half years; Emma F., is the wife of J. B. Remington, of Osawatomie Township, two of their daughters died in infancy; Addie E., teaches under the New West Educational Society at Las Vegas, N. Mr. Adair resides in the old house, which he built in pioneer days and which is rich to him in memories of the turbulent times when his brother-in-law, John Brown, often enjoyed his hospitality and protection, and where he enjoyed the companionship of wife and children.

CALVIN BARNARD, farmer, Section 28, Township 18, Range 22, P. O. Osawatomie, is one of the very earliest settlers of this region, and one of the most respected citizens of Miami County. He was born in Guilford County, N. C., October 10, 1819. Although born in the South, he was of New England parentage, his father having immigrated to North Carolina from Massachusetts. Mr. Barnard was brought up a farmer, and in 1830, moved to Wayne County, Ind., thence to Rush County of the same State, in 1836, and to Kansas in 1856, by team, arriving in Osawatomie Township June 4th. Being a member of the Society of Friends, he took no part in the troubles of the early days nor later in the war between the States. He has held various civil offices. He was Township Trustee in 1868 and 69, and was elected County Commissioner in 1869, served two years, and was defeated on the railroad issue in the succeeding election. He was married in Indiana, October 31, 1844, to Miss Lucinda F. Macy, daughter of Thomas Macy, of Nantucket Island. Mrs. Barnard was born in North Carolina. Their family consists of three sons. Thomas E., is married and lives in Cherokee County, Kan.; Addison L., is married and lives in Osawatomie Township; the youngest, Horace G., is married and lives in this township. When three years of age moved to Osawatomie with his parents and has made this his home ever since. He began the battle of life working out by the month when only eight years of age, and has hoed his own row from that time out. Messrs. Harden & Birchard established their business at Osawatomie in 1877. They have a roomy, commodious stable, about twenty good horses, and a suitable lot of carriages. A tasty hearse is one important feature in the outfit.

DANIEL BRENEMAN, book-keeper of the Kansas State Asylum for the Insane, was born in Dauphin County, Pa., December 18, 1847. Received a common school and business education and engaged in book-keeping in a banking house. He came to Kansas in 1873 and located at Leavenworth, where he was employed as a book-keeper for four years. He held that position in the First National Bank of Leavenworth. He was appointed to his present position July 1, 1879. Mr. B., like the other officers and employes of the asylum, is capable and efficient in his department.

REV. DAVID H. BUNDY, farmer and Methodist minister, Section 1, Township 18, Range 22, P. O. Osawatomie, was one of the pioneers of Miami County (then Lykins), of 1855. He was born in Randolph County, Ind., March 19, 1834. Was brought up in his native State and in the spring of 1855 came to Kansas with his parents. Spent the summer at Lawrence, and in the fall of that year came to Miami County, and located in the south part of the township of Stanton, on the banks of the Marais des Cygnes River, at what is still known as Bundy's Ford. Mr. Bundy soon became acquainted with John Brown, and being an earnest Free-state man he joined Brown in some of his expeditions against the Pro-slavery men. When Reed marched on Osawatomie on the memorable 29th of August, 1856, Mr. Bundy witnessed the advance and return of the Pro-slavery forces but was unable to participate in the fight. He was an explorer and mission preacher for the Methodist mission, and while serving in that capacity traveled extensively in Kansas and Nebraska. At one time while he was holding service in the log cabin near Lane, known as John Brown's cabin, his congregation was composed principally of Pro-slavery men armed with revolvers and guns. While they listened with respectful attention and departed in peace, John Brown lay secreted in the loft, separated from his enemies by only a few loose boards. Mr. Bundy was married April 7, 1859, at Osawatomie, to Miss Mary A. Littlejohn, daughter of John Littlejohn, a Free-state pioneer of Kansas of 1855. They have five children, four sons and a daughter, Emma R., wife of Dr. S. A. Day of Osawatomie, William A., Henry D., Wesley L. and Ralph. Mr. Bundy moved to his present farm in 1869, returned to Stanton again, and came back to this place in 1879. He has served as Justice of the Peace in this county fourteen years.

JOHN C. CHESTNUT, senior partner of John C. Chestnut & Bro., merchants, was born in Scotland, in 1840. Came to America with his parents in 1842, resided in Connecticut till 1854. The family then immigrated to Miami County, Kas.; his father, Wm. Chestnut, located on the southwest quarter of Section 11, Township 18, Range 22, a portion of which is now embraced in the town plat of Osawatomie. A large portion of the father's original claim is now the property of the son, John C. John C. enlisted in the late war as a private of the Third Kansas Infantry, afterward consolidated into the Tenth. On his return from the army he engaged as merchant's clerk, and in 1874 in company with his brother William established their present extensive business. This firm carry a $15,000 stock of general merchandise at the old stand, and have recently purchased the extensive general store of Mr. H. B. Smith adjacent, which is carried on under the firm name of Wm. Chestnut & Co.

WILLIAM CHESTNUT, Sr., one of the early pioneers of Miami County, now a resident of California, was born in Paisley, Scotland, in 1816. He was a weaver by trade, and followed that business until 1842, when he immigrated with his family to America. On arriving in this country he made his home in Connecticut, where he worked at his trade till 1854. He then immigrated to Kansas Territory and located on the southwest quarter of Section 11, Township 18 south, Range 22 east; a portion of which tract was platted and is now a part of the village of Osawatomie, Miami County, and built the first frame house in that town. The greater part of the original claim is now the property of his son, John C. Mr. Chestnut although an earnest believer in the principles of the State's rights men did not take a conspicuous part in the struggles of his first years in Kansas. He was a lover of peace and was not in sympathy with the many violent scenes occurring about him. At the first election he was the only Free-state man on the Board of Election. As a great number of fraudulent votes were polled he refused to sign the returns. He was a member of the Free-state Military Company and twice elected a member of Lower House of the Kansas Legislature. His principal business was farming, but believing that the manufacture of salt could be profitably conducted here he engaged extensively in that business, being the first to undertake such an enterprise in this section of the State. The venture proved unprofitable and the business was abandoned after a trial of three years. In 1874 he moved to Chicago and from there to California in 1880.

WILLIAM CHESTNUT, Jr., of the firm of Wm. Chestnut & Co. and of J. C. Chestnut & Bro., general merchants, was born in Ulster County, N. Y., in 1844. His parents were from Scotland and had immigrated to America in 1842. In 1854 he in company with his family came to Kansas and located at Osawatomie. He witnessed the turbulent scenes of 1856 but was too young to participate in them. April, 1862, he enlisted as a private of Company K, Second Kansas Cavalry, and served three years and two months in the late war. He spent some years in the wilds of the Western territories. Returning to Osawatomie he engaged in mercantile business with his brother, J. C., in 1874, under the firm name of J. C. Chestnut & Bro. They have a large well stocked general store, carrying an average stock of $15,000. In October, 1882, they purchased the stock of general merchandise of Mr. H. B. Smith and organized the firm of Wm. Chestnut & Co. The latter business is conducted at the old Smith stand under the management of Wm. Chestnut. Their average stock in this store is about $10,000.

S. A. DAY, M. D., physician and surgeon, was born in Indiana, came to Kansas with his parents in the fall of 1866, and located in Miami County. He studied medicine at the medical college at Kansas City, from which he graduated in 1879. He at once established himself in practice at Osawatomie, and is gradually building up a satisfactory business.

HENRY M. DOWNS, M. D., Second-Assistant Physician to the Kansas State Asylum for the Insane at Osawatomie. Dr. Downs was born in Wyandotte County, Kan., in 1858. Was educated at Ann Arbor, Mich., at the Michigan State University. He took his degree at the medical department of the University in 1880, and began practice at Kansas City, Mo. He was appointed physician and surgeon of the Missouri Pacific Railway, and held that position one year, or until he was appointed to his present position in August, 1881. Dr. Downs is a promising young physician, whose career is only well begun. He is now serving his second year at the asylum, where his ability in his profession and general courteous bearing have won him many friends.

JOHN R. EVERETT, farmer, Section 22, Township 18, Range 22, P. O. Osawatomie, a pioneer of Kansas of 1854, was born in Wales; immigrated to America in childhood, made his home in Oneida County, N. Y., till 1854, when he came to Kansas, arriving in Osawatomie in June of that year. He made a claim on Section 22, and has resided in this township ever since. He now has a fine stock farm of 285 acres, situated in the bottoms. He was married in New York, in 1852, to Miss Sarah M. Colgrove, of Pennsylvania. He has one son living, John E., born in Kansas in 1863. Mrs. Everett died in 1864. Mr. Everett was elected the first Clerk of School District No. 57, and held that office till the fall of 1881.

W. D. GEAR, Supervisor of the Kansas State Asylum for the Insane, was born in Pennsylvania in 1851, was brought up in that State and engaged in teaching school. In 1870, he came to Kansas and located at Garnett. He pursued the occupation of teacher till July, 1874, when he was appointed Supervisor at the asylum. Mr. Gear has proven himself an efficient officer, the fact that he is now serving his ninth year as supervisor is conclusive evidence that he has discharged the duties of his position in a satisfactory manner.

COL. G. H. HUME, farmer and inventor, Section 19, Township 18, Range 22, P. O. Osawatomie, is a pioneer of Kansas of 1857. He was born of Scotch parentage, July 16, 1826. Removed to Buffalo while a child and was brought up in that city. He received a liberal education and engaged as salesman in a mercantile house. After following that vocation several years he emigrated to Davenport, Iowa, and engaged in steamboating on the Mississippi River. Spent four years in that business and during this time was master of the steamer Enterprise and of the Osceola. In 1857, he came to Kansas. He spent some time at Paola and then purchased a farm of 380 acres in Miami Township, where he made his home. On the breaking out of the late war he enlisted May 8, 1861. Organized Company E, of the Missouri Home Guards, and was mustered into the Kansas Volunteer service September 15, of the same year. He helped organize the Ninth Kansas Cavalry, and was commissioned First Lieutenant commanding company. The company was disbanded March, 1862. Lieut. Hume was then commissioned Lieutenant Colonel of the Kansas State Troops, still retaining his First Lieutenant commission in the United States service. He continued in active service until the close of the war. Col. Hume was an efficient officer, cool and determined. He won the respect and regard of his command during the war. As is well-known, the Kansas and Missouri border was the scene of many battles and outrages. Vicious men took advantage of the situation to plunder and to do violence, regardless of the politics of their victims. In dealing with this class Col. Hume exercised his authority to the utmost in behalf of decency and honorable warfare. In politics, always a Democrat, he was one of the few officers who while doing their duty as soldiers claimed the right to vote according to their convictions. Col. Hume was married in Kansas, December, 1858, to Miss Rebecca, daughter of Tilden Shipley. Mrs. Hume was born in Illinois. They have seven children, four sons and three daughters—Alexander H., Franklin G., Edgar G., John S., Rosa, Viola and Emma. After the close of the war, Col. Hume devoted his attention to farming until the spring of 1872. He then moved to Pennsylvania and engaged in the hardware business. In 1875, he sold out and purchased his present farm of 320 acres in Osawatomie Township, and has continued to make that his home. He has devoted considerable attention to mechanical inventions, and is the inventor and patentee of the celebrated Hume's Fire Escape.

L. W. JACOBS, M. D., physician and surgeon, was born in Virginia in 1844. He took a regular course at the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, from which he graduated in the spring of 1868. He continued to practice his profession at Paola till 1870; he then came to Osawatomie and has since practiced in this place and vicinity. He served a term as Superintendent of the State Asylum for the Insane at Osawatomie. Dr. Jacobs has a large and increasing practice, and is one of the popular physicians of Miami County.

DR. A. H. KNAPP, Superintendent of the Kansas State Asylum for the Insane. Dr. Knapp was born in Schoharie County, N.Y., in 1829. While quite young, he moved with his parents to Ulster County. He took a regular course at Rush Medical College, of Chicago, and graduated in 1852. He practiced his profession in the State of New York seventeen years and then moved to Ottawa, Kan., (1870). He practiced in that city until 1873, when he was appointed to the responsible position he now holds. In 1876, he resigned his position, but in the fall of 1878, he was re-elected, and has continued to serve as Superintendent to this date. Dr. Knapp is peculiarly well qualified for the position he holds, thoroughly skilled in his profession, he has made a special study of diseases of the brain. Cheerful and kind-hearted in his intercourse with every one, systematic and thorough in everything, it is only necessary to visit the asylum and inspect its workings to be satisfied that he is the right man in the right place, and that he is supported by a corps of competent assistants.

JOHN A. LESSENDEN, farmer, Section 27, Township 18, Range 22, P. O. Osawatomie, was born in England in 1834; immigrated to America in 1848; spent two years in New York, and moved to Illinois in 1850; then to Iowa in 1859; and from Iowa to Kansas in 1876. He came direct to Osawatomie Township and purchased the old Richard Mendenhall place on Section 27. This farm is historic, having been one of the earliest places settled in the township, and during John Brown's time was one of the stations of the Underground Railway. Mr. Lessenden now has a fine farm of 287 acres. He was elected Trustee of this township in 1882, and re-elected in 1883. He was married in Iowa, September 30, 1858, to Miss Olive Hanson, daughter of John E. Hanson. Mrs. Lessenden was born in Maine. They have four children, two sons and two daughters—Orin E., Ella J., Arthur and Olive A.

A. F. MEEK, druggist, was born and brought up in Indiana; came to Kansas in 1874; was engaged in teaching school for several years, making his home near Louisburg, Miami County. In October, 1879, he started in his present business at Osawatomie. He carries a general stock of drugs, medicines, books and stationery. He is the only dealer in Osawatomie who keeps a full line of school books.

HENRY PARKER, first engineer and master mechanic of the Kansas Asylum for the insane, was born in England in 1834; learned the trade of practical engineer in his native country; immigrated to America in 1868. He located in Illinois, and served four years as engineer at the Soldiers' Orphan's Home, at Normal. He then bought a farm in Kansas, and devoted his attention to agriculture until 1873, when he accepted the position he now holds. Mr. Parker is a thorough mechanic, and discharges the duties of his responsible position with ability and fidelity. He is now serving his tenth year at the asylum.

HENRY B. SMITH, dealer in stock and grain, senior member of the firm of H. B. Smith & Co. Mr. Smith was born in Tioga County, Pa., in 1832, where he was brought up. About 1855, he went to Iowa, where he spent some two or three years. Went from there to Illinois, and soon after came to Kansas, reaching this State in 1858. Soon after reaching this place (Osawatomie) he engaged in mercantile business. He opened the first hardware store in Miami County, which he located at Osawatomie. He also furnished the stock for the first hardware store at Paola. Mr. Smith has been in business continuously at Osawatomie since 1858 to this date. October, 1882, he sold out his stock of general merchandise to J. C. and William Chestnut, and is now engaged in the stock and grain trade. Mr. Smith was a member of the Kansas State Militia, and served during the Price raid. He has served two terms in the Lower House of the Kansas Legislature, 1866 and 1871.

CAPT. REUBEN SMITH, Steward of the Kansas State Asylum for the Insane, at Osawatomie. Capt. Smith was born in England; immigrated to America in 1853, and made his home in Iowa until 1857. He then came to Osawatomie, Kan., and engaged in farming. On the breaking out of the late war he enlisted in 1861, and was promoted to Captain in the Second Missouri Cavalry, and served until the close of the war. He was detailed at one time to capture the noted rebel Gen. J. W. Reed, who was in command of the party of Pro-slavery men who sacked Osawatomie in August, 1856, and was captured by another party and placed in the keeping of Capt. Smith, who had charge of him for some time. It was a singular turn in the course of events that Reed should be held a captive by a citizen of the town he had burned. In politics Capt. Smith is a Republican, and represented the Osawatomie district in the Legislature in 1870, 1871 and in 1873. In the same year he was commissioned by Gov. Osborne as a member of the Board of Trustees of the State Insane Asylum, and was chosen Secretary of the Board. After serving a few months he resigned, and was elected Steward of the Insane Asylum, and has held the position for ten years. He is not a member of any church, but he practices those Christian virtues which tend to make man happy in this world, and fit them for the next. He is a Royal Arch Mason.

JESSE B. WELLS, farmer, Section 23, Township 18, Range 21, P. O. Lane, Franklin County, is one of the early pioneers of this township. He was born in Monroe County, Ind., December 6, 1828; was brought up in that State, and emigrated to Iowa in 1848. Resided in Lucas County till May, 1856; he then came to Kansas, and located a claim on Section 24, Township 18, Range 21. The following year he moved to his present place of residence, on Section 23, still retaining the old place. He now has 160 acres, a large portion of which is rich bottom timber lands. Mr. Wells was a Free-state man, and was associated with John Brown in the time of the early strife between Freedom and Slavery. At the time of the attack on Osawatomie, in August, 1856, he rode to Garnett and notified a company of Free-state men at that point, and accompanied them to the scene of the fight, but too late to participate in it. During the late war he enlisted in Company C, Twelfth Kansas Infantry, and served three years, or till the close of the war. He was married in Indiana, February 24, 1848, to Miss Elizabeth A., daughter of Wesley Whitson. Mrs. Wells was born in Monroe County, Ind. They had ten children, of whom seven are living—Solon T., David T., died, aged twenty-three years; Mary L., died in childhood; Mamie E., Numa W., John P., Jessie B., Minnie, Elmer, Freddie, who died in childhood.

HON. HENRY H. WILLIAMS. The subject of this sketch was one of the ablest, most courageous and useful of the Free-state men in Kansas' early days. He was born in Hudson, Columbia Co., N. Y., September 26, 1828. His father, James Williams, was a native of Rhode Island, and his mother, whose maiden name was Esther Tracy, was born in Connecticut. She was a sister of Lieut.-Gov. John Tracy, of New York. James Williams was of Welsh extraction; Esther (Tracy) Williams was descended from English parentage. Henry H., though born in Columbia County, spent most of his youthful days in Chautauqua County. His early education was obtained at the common school, but being of an inquiring mind, and being a patient student, he has acquired a large fund of useful information, which qualifies him to occupy and acceptably fill any office within the gift of the people of the State. After leaving school, he served a four years' apprenticeship to the carpenter and joiner's trade, and for several years thereafter, followed this occupation as a journeyman in Brooklyn, Peekskill and Hastings, N. Y. In the spring of 1855, against the advice of his father, he moved to Kansas. His father's advice was based upon the expectation that Kansas was the ground upon which the preliminary battle between slavery and freedom was to be fought, which was the very reason why Henry H. determined to go. Upon arriving in the Territory, he at first located on Pottawatomie Creek, in Anderson County, being the third settler in the county. Previously to his arrival, the Pro-slavery men in the vicinity had formed an organization, and adopted a "squatter-law," under which each man was entitled to two quarter sections of land. Soon after his arrival at a meeting held by them, the Free-state men assembled, took possession of the meeting, organized it by electing John Brown, Jr., president, and H. H. Williams, secretary, and promptly repealed this and other laws obnoxious to themselves. In September, following, he was elected delegate to the Big Springs Convention, which met September 5, 1855. In November, hearing that Lawrence was besieged by twelve hundred Missourians, he, with four others, started for that place to assist in its defense. This little party overtook John Brown, his three sons and son-in-law, just after passing Blanton's bridge. All then proceeded to Lawrence, reaching there that night, and being assigned quarters in the Free-State Hotel. That night the Pottawatomie Rifle Company was organized, with John Brown, Captain, John Brown, Jr., First Lieutenant, and H. H. Williams, Second Lieutenant. John Brown proposed that the company make a night attack upon the enemy, four miles distant, without permitting Gen. Robinson, Gen. Lane, or any other parties outside of the company to know of the movement, but Lieut. Williams opposed the movement as impolitic, impracticable and insubordinate. After a treaty had been effected, and the enemy had retired to Missouri, the company was disbanded, and the men returned to their homes. In December, he was elected a delegate to the Free-state Convention, held at Lawrence, for the purpose of nominating State officers, under the Topeka Constitution. In January, 1856, he and John Brown, Jr., were elected, from the Pottawatomie precinct, to the House of Representatives, under the Topeka Constitution. He walked to Topeka to take his seat in that body, a distance of sixty-five miles. Upon the reorganization of the Pottawatomie Rifle Company, in May, 1856, John Brown, Jr., was elected Captain, and Mr. Williams declined to serve in any official capacity, preferring to act as a private, and perform duty as a scout. Shortly after the reorganization of the company, news of the threatened attack upon Lawrence, which was made May 21, reached the Pottawatomie settlement, and John Brown, Jr.'s company immediately set out to assist in its defense, accompanied a part of the way by John Brown, Sr., his other sons and son-in-law, Henry Thompson. Mr. Williams followed the company on its way, and on the morning of the 21st, the same day that Lawrence was sacked, saw Mr. Morse—who kept a store on Pottawatomie Creek, and who furnished ammunition to the Free-state men—frightened and pale from the threats made to him and against him by border ruffians the day before. After advising Mr. Morse what to do, Mr. Williams rode on, overtook the company, and to some of the members composing it, including Judge James Hanway and old John Brown, communicated the information with reference to the proposed programme of the border ruffians he had obtained from Mr. Morse. This news so stirred the soul of old John Brown, that he promptly organized his little family party, and returned to the Pottawatomie, with the terrible results now known to the world as the Pottawatomie Massacre, a detailed account of which is embodied in the history of Franklin County. Mr. Williams, as did likewise Judge Hanway, received, but declined, an invitation to accompany the little party on its then mysterious mission. About the first of June, 1856, Mr. Williams, with about fifteen others, was arrested by a party of about two hundred Pro-slavery men, and taken to Paola, where the Pro-slavery Grand Jury was in session. In a day or two, eight were discharged, and the remainder taken to Osawatomie and placed in charge of United States soldiers, in command of Capt. Wood. Here they were kept a week, with their hands firmly tied behind them until chains could be obtained, when they were chained together by the ankles, two and two, and marched to Prairie City. When about half the distance had been accomplished, Mr. Williams' companion was taken sick, and was released, Mr Williams walking the rest of the way with one end of the chain in his hand, the other still around his ankle. After being detained a few days at Prairie City, they were taken to Lecompton, and turned over to Marshal Donaldson. They were next taken to Tecumseh, examined by Commissioner Hoagland, and all set at liberty except John Brown, Jr., and Mr. Williams, who were held on a charge of high treason, as Commissioner Hoagland said, to prevent them from being murdered, as he believed they would be if released. These two were then taken to the camp of the United States troops, near Lecompton, and held as prisoners with Charles Robinson, G. W. Smith, G. W. Deitzler, Gaius Jenkins and G. W. Brown. It was during his imprisonment in this camp that the Topeka Legislature was to meet, and which Col. Sumner had been ordered to disperse in case it should convene. Mr. Williams fearing that some of the members elect of that Legislature would lack the nerve to meet with their fellow-members, and feeling the importance of as full an attendance as practicable, proposed to his fellow-prisoners that he should escape from the guards and take his seat in the Legislature. All consented to this proposition except G. W. Brown, who fearing that the safety of the prisoners remaining in camp would be thereby jeopardized, threatened to inform upon him if he should make the attempt, and so Mr. Williams was constrained to remain in camp. Mr. Williams was elected Sheriff of Miami County in 1857, and re-elected in 1859. In June, 1861, he entered the Third Kansas Volunteers, and was elected Major of that regiment. This regiment was afterward consolidated with the Fourth Regiment, and called the Tenth. Major Williams served in this capacity until the regiment was mustered out, commanding the regiment in the battles of Cane Hill, Prairie Grove, VanBuren, and Fort Wayne. He participated in the battle of Pilot Knob, on the staff of Gen. Ewing. As Provost-Marshal of the District of St. Louis, he had charge of the military prisoners for several months. Being honorably mustered out of service in February, 1865, he returned to Kansas City, where his family had resided since 1863, and was elected Sheriff of Jackson County, Mo., serving eighteen months. In April, 1867, he returned to Osawatomie, and engaged in business as a hardware merchant, in which business he is still engaged. In 1867, he was elected to the House of Representatives, and in 1868, to the State Senate. Major Williams is a member of the Congregational Church. He joined the Republican party at the time of its organization by Horace Greeley, at Osawatomie, in 1858, and has ever since been a strong and ardent supporter of Republican principles. Major Williams was married February 23, 1858, at Osawatomie, to Miss Mary A. Carr, daughter of John Carr, who moved to Kansas in 1854. Mr. and Mrs. Williams have had six children, of whom four are living—Minnie, Walter, Charles and Fannie. John, their eldest son, died at the age of eighteen, and George another son, was killed by the kick of a horse.

FONTANA.

This town is on the line of the Missouri River, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, ten miles south of Paola. It was surveyed September 7th, 1869, by J. B. Grinnell, who, in selling any of the land, introduced into each deed a contract that no alcoholic drinks should ever be sold on the property, by the purchaser.

This town took its name from "Old Fontana," which was laid out one-half mile west of the new town, at the cross roads, in 1858. Four farms cornered there, owned respectively by J. Ruble, Shipley, Bales and McCulloch, ten acres being taken from each farm for the town site; at the height of its prosperity "Old Fontana" contained one store and three dwellings. A postoffice was established some distance away, with Dr. Connery for Postmaster. When the railroad was projected and its construction assured, the new town was laid out, and the old town site abandoned, except for farming purposes. The first to build on the new town site was Joseph Johnson, who erected a residence. The second was Mr. Fields who built a trading house, the third was Peter Yoho, who put up a grocery. Thomas, John and Edward Toms erected a grist mill here in 1871, at the time one of the finest in the State.

The Methodists had an organization in the old town, effected in 1860, with eight members. In 1870 they erected a church building in the new town, at a cost of $1,200. The Baptists during the same year dedicated their new church edifice which had been erected at a cost of $1,500, and in 1872, the Christians organized themselves into a society with seven members, erecting a house of worship in 1878, at a cost of $1,000. Their membership is at present 120. The United Brethren and Presbyterians also each has an organization, the latter with thirty-six members, but neither has as yet erected a church.

The first birth in Fontana was that of John Yoho, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Yoho, in 1871; the first marriage, that of Mr. Henderson to Miss Lucinda Landers, in 1869, the first natural death, that of an infant child of B. Bashear; but the first burial in the cemetery was that of a man who had taken up and secreted, preparatory to running off, another man's horse. Being informed upon, he loaded his gun to shoot the informer, and upon going out, slipped and fell upon the frozen ground, and received the lead designed for the informer, in his own body, dying therefrom a few days thereafter.

At the present time Fontana contains two general stores, one grocery, one drug store, one hardware store, one agricultural implement dealer, two grain dealers, one lumber yard, one grist mill, one two story stone schoolhouse erected in 1871, at a cost of $3,500, and about 350 inhabitants.

On December 23, 1872, a fire broke out in the town which destroyed nine buildings. This was a severe blow to the embryo city, and for two or three years afterward it progressed backwards instead of forwards, but for the last four or five years, the town has made a steady and sure growth.

The first store was opened by Capt. Will Gicks, in 1871. Henry Post, the present Postmaster and principal merchant, started in business in the fall of 1872. A grist and sawmill was started by the town company in 1871. A postoffice was established the same year, with Peter A. Brokan for Postmaster. The town flourished for some years, but owing to the superior advantages and attractions of the neighboring cities of Paola and Louisburg, it has failed to meet the expectations of its founders.

It is located on the edge of the valley of the Wea, thus enjoying the advantages of valley and upland scenery, and is surrounded by an enterprising agricultural community. It now contains two general stores, a combined grist and sawmill, a postoffice, blacksmith shop, a church and schoolhouse, and about thirty inhabitants. A cave, spring, a burning-gas well, and two Indian cemeteries are the local attractions of the immediate neighborhood.

LOUISBURG.

This flourishing town is in Wea Township, on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad (recently changed to the Missouri Pacific), twelve miles east o Paola. The first settlements in the township were made as early as 1856, but Louisburg was not started until 1868, on November 10 of which year it was surveyed and laid out by Charles Sims, Dr. R. F. Steger and D. L. Peery. About a year before this survey a settlement was made a quarter of a mile east of the present site of Louisburg, a town started and called St. Louis, or Little St. Louis; but in order to avoid confounding the new town with St. Louis, Mo., it was given the name of Louisburg in 1870. Originally the town site consisted of eighty acres, but by various additions it has been increased to over 200 acres. Previous to 1867, when a postoffice was established and Dr. Steger made Postmaster, the people of this vicinity obtained their mail at Paola. After the town site was laid out E. M. Saxton erected the first building thereon, which was used for a dwelling and store. Charles Skinner erected the second store. Dr. Steger built the first residence in May, 1869, and started the first hotel. Daniel Martin built the second residence and John Richardson the third, all three being frame or "box" houses. About the same time three or four Indian dwellings were built, and James Newman erected a blacksmith shop. Dr. Odell built a drug store 12x20 feet in size. Some say that the first hotel was built in 1870 by Anthony Cott, an Indian. The present fine brick hotel was built in 1881 by W. H. Tawney at a cost of $5,000. It is called the "Clark House," is well furnished and can accommodate twenty-five guests.

The first school in Louisburg was taught by Miss Olivia Martin in 1871. The first preacher was J. P. Everett. Years before there had been preaching in the settlement by Rev. A. Meant, a Southern Methodist, in 1858; by Rev. Wm. Huffman, a United Brethren minister, in 1859, who held a protracted meeting; and in the same year by Rev. Garrett.

Louisburg was made a city of the third class November 3, 1882. The territory included within the city limits comprises the northeast quarter of Section 31, the south half of southeast quarter of Section 30, and the west half of the north half of the southeast quarter of Section 30, all in Township 16 south, Range 25 east. The first city election was held November 17, 1882; 141 votes being polled. Samuel W. Moore was elected Mayor, and the following gentlemen Councilmen: M. A. Fessenden, H. A. Williams, J. B. Plitcher, D. H. Ebbert and W. H. Tawney. Peter H. Goebel was elected Treasurer; Robert A. Wright, Clerk; R. W. Sanders, Marshal, and John McNilley, Police Judge. The population of the city is about 900 now, in January, 1883; and gives promise of a rapid and healthy growth. The city now has eight brick business buildings and three church buildings—Methodist, Baptist and Christian. The Presbyterians have an organized society but at present hold services in the Methodist church. There are four physicians—J. D. Bryan, J. B. Plitcher, E. W. Riley and D. W. Hayes.

Louisburg Council, No. 3, R. T. of T., a Temperance insurance organization, was established February 15, 1882. The first officers were, H. L. Phillips, select councilor; Vice Councilor, Nettie Bryan; Past Councilor, L. T. Brown; Secretary, R. A. Wright. The present officers are the same except the secretary, that officer now being Mrs. Sue A. Phillips. The Council is working successfully with a membership of eighteen.

Louisburg Lodge, No. 180, A. F. & A. M., was chartered October 16, 1879. First master was R. H. Hyatt. The lodge is in good, healthy, working condition, with a membership of thirty five. Peter Goebel is the present master, E. P. Short, secretary. The lodge meets on the first and third Friday of each month.

Louisburg at present contains four general stores, three drug stores, three groceries, two hardware stores, two harness shops, two shoe shops, one lumber yard, one bank, two blacksmith shops, two agricultural implement dealers, one grain dealer, one furniture store, two hotels, one fine two-story brick schoolhouse, 36x72 feet, erected in the fall of 1882 at a cost of $6,000, 272 scholars, and a population of about 900. It is a lively business town, one of the best shipping points in the county. The estimated shipments for 1882 are 175 cars of flax 250 cars of grain, and 200 cars of cattle.

The Louisville and Miami Herald.—This is a weekly newspaper, edited and published by Emanuel F. Heisler. It was established by him July 4, 1876. It is an eight column folio, patent inside, Greenback in politics, and has a circulation of 1,000 copies weekly.

Wea Post Office was established October 8, 1873, and is located at the southwest corner of Section 29, Township 15 Range 25. Joseph Vohs was the first postmaster. He served until April, 1876, when Eugene Vohs, the present encumbent was appointed. A general store was started at this place in 1872 by Honor Mayer, who conducted the business until March, 1876, when he sold out to Eugene Vohs, the present proprietor.

A Catholic church, called the Holy Rosary Church, was built just south and east of the postoffice, in 1869. It was a frame building, costing $3,500. Rev. Father Fabre held the first services in the new church. Father Meyer, from Eudora, was the regular pastor. The congregation is composed of sixty-two families, about 350 members. Rev. John Rideker was appointed to this charge November, 16, 1880, and remains the pastor.

The first actual settler in Township 15, Range 25, was George Wickline, now deceased, who settled in 1857, on Section 30. Anthony Vohs was the second on the same section in 1859. During this year William Schwartz settled on the same section and Jacob Schwartz came in 1860. Joseph Vohs came in 1863. This settlement is one of the healthiest in Miami County.

STANTON.

This town, one of the oldest in the county, is located in the western part of the county, on rolling prairie, close to timber. It was located by H. B. Standiford, in the summer of 1855, and named Stanton, in honor of Capt. Standiford and Hon. Thomas H. Benton. Among the earliest settlers in the vicinity of Stanton were S. H. Houser, Dr. Winans, B. E. Briant, C. B. Tipton, Charles Rice and others whose names may be found under the head, "Early Settlements." The postoffice was established in 1856, Mr. Ward being appointed first Postmaster. Mr. Ward also opened a store in the town the same year. In 1857 a steam saw-mill was erected by A. Houseman. During this year Capt. Standiford sold the land on which the town was located to an Indiana company, of which E. P. Hicks was president, and J. B. Hobson secretary. H. V. Beeson resurveyed and platted the town site for them.

The year 1860 was the year of the drought. During the previous winter but very little rain or snow fell. A light snow fell in February, after which there was neither snow nor rain until June 6, when a light rain fell, preceded by a heavy wind. No rain fell during the succeeding summer months, and the heat became almost intolerable. The crops on the uplands were an absolute failure; few farmers had supplies to meet their necessities, but faithful friends in the East furnished assistance and the county has since been free from serious drought.

The high wind mentioned as preceding the rain of June 6 became a cyclone as it passed over Stanton, Indianapolis and Osawatomie. The residence of D. C. Baker was blown down and himself, Newell Kinkaid and another person killed. The Masonic Lodge was also carried away and the records, regalia and fixtures utterly destroyed. At Indianapolis Mr. Holladay's house was blown away and Mrs. Holladay killed. At Osawatomie the brick residence of Mrs. Coleman was blown down, but no one injured. Stanton, at the height of its prosperity, had a saw-mill, several stores, blacksmith shop, etc., and about 100 inhabitants, but at the present time there are not over twenty-five people there.

One of the noted characters who settled early in the vicinity of Stanton was Rev. Martin White. He came to Kansas from Christian County, Ill., was a well-educated Baptist minister and one of the most extreme Pro-slavery man. At the meeting of April 16, 1856, at which resolutions were adopted against the payment of taxes, and at which John Brown made an abolition speech, Rev. White several times offensively interrupted the speaker. As the Rev. gentleman was generally exceedingly obnoxious to the Free-state men, a few nights after the above-mentioned meeting occurred, a party of twelve of them attacked his house, opening fire upon it. The firing was vigorously replied to by those inside. The attacking party soon retired, taking White's horses with them. On the next day White moved to Missouri, settling permanently in Bates County. After having served in the Confederate army through the war, Mr. White returned to his home in Bates County and died of wounds received in the service.

He was urged by Brown to join his expedition to Harper's Ferry, and one day, after tiring of following the team in harrowing wheat land, he determined to accept Brown's proposal. While making his preparations to go, he was persuaded out of it by his more sensible mother. HILLSDALE.

Hillsdale is situated on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf R. R., six miles north of Paola. The town site was surveyed and platted by Mrs. Emily Musser, February 13, 1869, under the name of Columbia. On the 13th of October, 1868, F. E. Rowland had surveyed and platted the town of Ten Mile, adjacent to Columbia on the north. Late in 1869, after the completion of the railroad to this point, the name Columbia was changed to Hillsdale, and at the present time, the old town sites of both Columbia and Ten Mile are included within that of Hillsdale. Hillsdale is situated on Section 15, Township 16 south, Range 23 west, being the township of Marysville.

The first business in the town, a general store, was opened in the fall of 1869, by Thomas Hollenback, in the building now occupied by Dr. P. J. Morrison. A similar store was opened by A. C. Smith a little later in the same season, Mr. Smith was appointed the first Postmaster, the office being then called Columbia, and was kept in his store. The name was changed to Hillsdale in 1870. Mr. P. C. Eaton, the present Postmaster, bought out A. C. Smith in 1871, and was appointed Postmaster, and has had the office continuously to this time (1883). In 1875 Dr. P. J. Morrison bought out Mr. Hollenback, and has since carried on a general store at the same point. Dr. Morrison was the first practising physician in Hillsdale. At present the town has a population of three hundred. There are three general stores, one hardware and drug store, one harness shop, one shoe shop, one blacksmith and wagon shop, two hotels, one grain elevator, two churches, and a good school building.

The school was established in 1871. The first teacher was a Mr. Buck. The Presbyterian Society built the first church in the place, the Christian Society the second. The latter is a new frame building, 32 x 44 feet in size, with fourteen feet posts, completed in the summer of 1883. The Methodists have an organization, but no church-building. Hillsdale is a thrifty business place, and is rapidly coming into prominence as a produce and stock market. Its dealers are liberal, fair-minded men, and hence deservedly popular with their customers.

On July 11, 1869, occurred the great flood in Ten Mile and Bull creeks. The night previous a waterspout reached the earth in Wea Township, and the rain poured down in torrents in the valleys of the above mentioned creeks and their tributaries. The current in Ten Mile was resistless and swept everything before it. The village of Ten Mile was inundated and the railroad bridge swept away. In the valley of Bull Creek, fences, crops and improvements were washed away, as were both county bridges at Paola. The loss by the flood was about $12,000.

Marysville Township was first settled by white men in the spring of 1855. Five men came here at the same time, John and James Beets, Thomas Warren, J. G. McDaniel and John Hicks. John Hicks settled on Section 32, Township 15, Range 23, the other four on Sections 4, 5, 7, and 8, Township 16, Range 23. John Hicks sold his claim to Joseph Beets, who arrived April 9 1856. John H. Dorsey, a squatter in 1855, was located on the present site of Hillsdale. H. L. Lyon came in February, 1856, and located on Section 9, where he was Postmaster and Justice of the Peace. Mrs. Lyon died in May, 1856, her death being the first known to have occurred among the white people of this township. The first marriage was that of Mr. Graham to Miss Minerva Warren in the latter part of 1856.

OLD MARYSVILLE.

The Map of Marysville Township shows a village plat bearing the name "Old Marysville," located in the southwest quarter of Section 9, Township 16, Range 23. The plat and the name are nearly all that is left of what a quarter of a century ago was a promising young town. In 1857 James Beets and

H. L. Lyon surveyed and platted a town site at this point, and called it Marysville. The town soon had two general stores, a hotel, postoffice, blacksmith and wagon shops, school, etc., and gave promise of a brilliant future. As the country became settled and railroads built, Marysville was not so fortunate as to be in the course of any railroad. New business centers were established as railroad stations, and Marysville became a deserted village.

He served a regular apprenticeship to the plummers and tinners' trade, at which he worked until 1863. He then went to California, and spent two years in that State, returned East, and located in Illinois in 1866. In 1868, he removed to Kansas, and made his home in the town of Paola. He has since spent four years in California.

SCOTT H. THOMAS, farmer, P.O. Paola, Section 30, Township 17, Range 23 east, has eighty acres on Section 30, and five acres of timber a few miles distant. Mr. Thomas was born in Pickaway County, Ohio, November 26, 1836; moved to Iowa with his parents in 1846, where he was brought up on a farm. He enlisted in the United States service in the late war as a private of Company E, Twenty-fourth Iowa Infantry, and served three years and three months. He participated in the battles of Pleasant Hill, Sabine Cross Roads and Winchester, Va., and other engagements. He received a gunshot wound at the battle of Sabine Cross Roads. In June, 1867, he emigrated to Kansas, and located on his present farm.

JAMES WILLIAMS, deceased, was a pioneer of Kansas of 1854. He was born in Vermont and emigrated to Kansas in 1854. He located at Osawatomie. He was a Free-state man and participated in the troubles of those early days; was engaged in the battle of Osawatomie, of August, 1856, and took an active part in many skirmishes with the enemy. He enlisted in the late war as a member of the Third Kansas Infantry, which was afterwards consolidated with the Fourth into the Tenth. He died of small pox, while in the service, on duty as guard over rebel prisoners, at Alton, Ill., March, 1864. He had seven children, of whom two only are living—Mrs. Florence Pittman, and Mrs. Clara Johnson, wife of James Johnson, of Valley. His widow is living, and resides with her daughter, Mrs. Johnson.

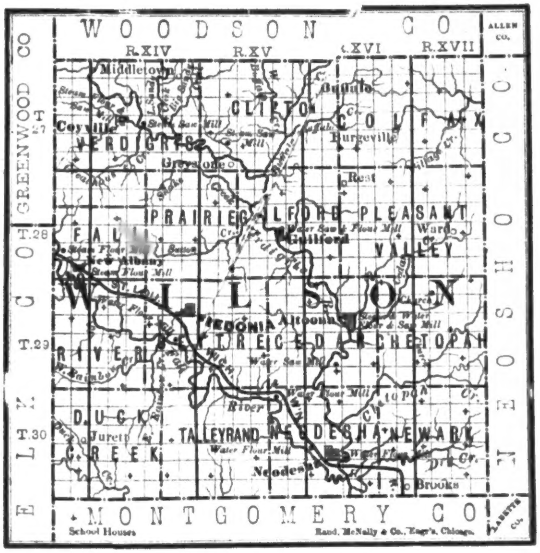
JUDGE D. B. WILSON, farmer and stock grower, Section 35, Township 17, Range 22, P. O. Paola. The subject of this sketch is one of the pioneers of Kansas of 1856, having located near the historic ground of Osawatomie, in May of that memorable year. He was born in Belmont County, Ohio, December 11, 1816; received a common school education and moved to Morgan County, Ill., in May, 1836, being a pioneer of that region also. He spent twenty years in that locality and then emigrated to Kansas. He arrived in Lykins County (now Miami) the first of May, 1856, and pitched his tent on government land near the site of Osawatomie, which was made historic the following August, by the engagement of the forces of General John W. Reed (Pro-slavery) and the Free-state band under John Brown. Judge Wilson identified himself with the Free-state party and participated in the trying scenes of those days. In March, 1861, prior to the bombardment of Fort Sumter and the call for troops by the government, he in anticipation of the situation, organized a military company under the State laws and was commissioned its Captain. The company was regularly sworn into the service of the State. On the call for troops the members principally re-enlisted in the United States Volunteer service. Judge Wilson has served in various civil offices, both in Illinois and Kansas, having served as Postmaster at Arenzville, Ill., during the administration of Presidents Taylor and Fillmore. He has served eighteen years as Justice of the Peace, six years as Judge of Probate of Miami County, beginning in January, 1863. He was appointed by Judge S. O. Thacher, of Lawrence, as Clerk of the District Court to fill a vacancy. He was married in Morgan County, Ill., September 9, 1838, to Miss Susannah Fletcher. They had a family of three sons and six daughters, of whom two sons and four daughters are still living, all residents of Miami County, Kan., excepting one, the oldest son, in Doniphan County. The second son, Edward H. was born in June, 1856 the second white child born in Lykins (n Miami County). The Judge has a fine farm of 160 acres in the western part of the town Valley, where he is passing the evening of his days.

JAMES L. WRIGHT, farmer, Sec P. O. Paola, was born in Delaware in 1814. In early childhood removed with hi rents to Maryland, and when ten years of age to Wayne County, Ind. He continued t side in Indiana till 1859, when he emigrated to Kansas, arriving in this State Octo of that year. He had previously visited the State and passed a portion of 1855 and 185 e, but did not make his home here till 1859. He located in Stanton, Miami County, w he was engaged in farming some ten years. He then moved to Paola Township, Sec 34, now a part of the town of Valley, where he has a fine farm of 204 acres. Mr. Wrig one of the pioneers of Kansas, and has had the pleasure of witnessing the rapid sett ent and development of the State, and has shared the hardships and trials incident to t mes. During the Price raid he did military duty in defense of his State.

WILSON COUNTY

LOCATION AND NATURAL FEATURES.

WILSON County takes its name from Col. Hiero T. Wilson, a resident of Fort Scott since 1843, and a man of prominence in the early days of he Territory. Of the pre-territorial existence of this part of the State but little record exists, and the places mentioned in the record of early travels are generally too vaguely described to admit of identification. In the journal of Capt. Z. M. Pike, of Pike's Peak fame, who passed up the Verdigris on his exploring tour from St. Louis to the headwaters of the Arkansas, appear some interesting passages, which have been already quoted in John S. Gilmore's admirable history of this county. The stream is here spoken of as the "Verdigrise," a name derived from the greenish blue clay found in its bed, and used as a pigment by the Osages. Lieutenant J. B. Wilkinson, who descended the Arkansas River in 1806, speaks of passing the mouth of the "Verdigris," being about one hundred yards wide. No explorations followed the course of Fall River and it remained unknown or unmentioned until Territorial times.



The county, although one of the thirty odd counties laid out by the "bogus" legislature of 1855, was entirely within the reserve of the Osage Indians and not subject to white occupation. It was however invaded by white settlers at a very early day, Henry H. Opdyke, G. J. Caven and William M. Caven arriving at a point near Coyville on April 28, 1857, and at once proceeding to build log cabins. For three years after this time the white pioneers pushed in here and there in the northern part of the county, and a few had come as far down as where Altoona now stands. There were probably more than 100 whites located in the county in 1860, although the census of that year give only 27. So matters stood when the war of 1861-65 broke out, and further settlement being very dangerous, was practically abandoned.

As laid out by the "bogus" legislature, Wilson was in the southernmost tier, and comprised all that is now Montgomery County. It was twenty-four miles square. Later in its session, this legislature attached Wilson County to Allen, and made Cofachique the permanent county seat. Upon the election of the free State legislature a new set of lines was given all the counties in the third tier, and they were shortened up an aggregate of twenty-six miles. All this territory was given to Wilson, which thus became fifty miles long north and south. In the final re-adjustment of lines by the legislature of 1867, this county was cut down to its present dimensions and Montgomery made of the southern portion. It is now bounded on the north by Woodson; east by Neosho; south by Montgomery and west by Elk and Greenwood counties.

The county has twenty per cent of bottom land, and eighty per cent of upland; forest occupies eight per cent, and prairie ninety-two per cent. The average width of the bottoms along the principal streams, Verdigris and Fall River, is one mile. The general surface of the county is undulating, but in many places along the river s bluffy and broken and at various points huge isolated mounds, natr watch towers, heave up from the smooth bosom of the fertile levels like sol ary rough topped seas among the lesser waves. Along the streams are e timber belts varying in width from half a mile to a mile and one-half, and embracing oak, hickory, walnut, hackberry, elm, soft maple, pecan, sycamore, ash, cherry, basswood and some cedar.

The water supply of the county is one of the finest in the State. From near the northwest corner of the county run two considerable streams, Fall River and Verdigris, joining their growing waters near the southeast corner of the county. Tributary to these are Cedar, Chetopa and Buffalo creeks, all running southwest into the Verdigris, and many small streams named locally or not at all. In the southwest portion of the county is Duck Creek, running southwest out of the county. Numerous springs also percolate the soil in every part of the county, and water can be reached by wells varying in depth from twelve to thirty feet.

Like almost all counties in this section, Wilson has an underlying stratum of coal of good quality. This crops out on the surface in the eastern townships showing a thickness of from six inches to three feet. It is used to a considerable extent for fuel and mechanical purposes.

Both lime and sandstone are found in great abundance and of excellent quality for building purposes. Fire clay is found along the river beds.

EARLY SETTLEMENT.

In the first year of the war, the rebels twice sacked Humboldt, in Allen County, just northeast of the Wilson County settlements, and on the second raid burned the town. No attack was made on the settlers near Coyville, but it was thought best to be ready for defence, and a company was formed with eighty mounted men in line, under Capt. John R. Row and Lieutenants W. W. Brazel and Lewis Thompson. That fall, fortifications were built at a point about three miles south of the town, on land now owned by John Shaffer. This was named Fort Row, in honor of the captain of the force. It consisted of three block houses, 16x24 feet, made of heavy logs, and enclosed with pickets six feet high. An embankment was thrown up on all sides, and the company went into winter quarters. The following spring the fort was deserted and most of the militia enlisted in the Ninth Kansas Volunteers. Vestiges of the old fort still remain.

Nothing of special moment in the way of settlement occurred during 1863 or the early part of 1864. In August of the latter year, Daniel C. Finn, a man destined to become quite noted in the early history of the county, arrived from New York. An organized county was imperatively necessary to the success of Finn's plans, and he at once began to agitate the subject, claiming that the white population of the county was sufficient to warrant organization. There was no taxable property in the county at that time, as it all belonged to the Osage Reserve, and it would be hard to find any reason, beyond Finn's ambition, for effecting an organization at that time. An election was held, however, at the house of John Shaffer, on the Verdigris, near the site of Fort Row, and Finn was sent as a delegate to the Republican State Convention at Topeka. It will be remembered that there were two Republican State Conventions in 1864, the first being for James H. Lane, and the second, known as the Republican Union State Convention, for Governor Carney. Finn belonged to this latter party, and doubtless used all means to secure additional support for Carney by effecting the organization of Wilson County.

Finn's maneuvers were successful, and on September 24, 1864, a petition bearing the signatures of thirty settlers, and headed by the name of Daniel C. Finn, was presented to Gov. Thomas Carney and granted. Appointments were made of the various county officers, but, as will be seen by the county roster, many failed to qualify. The administration of several offices was distasteful, and much confusion ensued. Syracuse, a mythical place supposed to be near the centre of the county, was designated as the temporary county seat, and George M. Cottingham, W. M. Asher and William Brown appointed County Commissioners.

Following the initiation of the county officers came an attempt on the part of Finn and a town company numbering seventeen, among whose names appears that of Gov. Thomas Carney (by D. C. Finn), to lay out the town of Syracuse. A log cabin was erected on the chosen spot, at the base of West Mound, about half a mile west of the present county seat, and street and block lines were run by a surveyor. At this juncture (April, 1865), Finn was notified by the agent of the Osages, on whose land Syracuse was to be built, to refrain from further work, and Syracuse was forever abandoned. In November, 1864, the first election was held in the county. This was a Presidential year, and the 600, whom Finn declared lived in the county might have reasonably been expected to turn out in force. But only one polling place was opened, and but twenty-six votes cast. Of these Abraham Lincoln received twenty-one, and George B. McClellan five. The straight Republican State ticket had nineteen votes, and the Anti Lane Union Republican, seven. All votes cast were for Daniel C. Finn as member of the lower house, and Col. C. P. Twiss, of Allen County, for State Senator.

COUNTY ROSTER AND COUNTY SEAT.

The early organization of the county was, as has already been said, considerably lacking in form. Many of those who held offices were appointed to fill vacancies caused by the failure of those elected to qualify, and in many instances the County Commissioners failed to make a return, showing who were elected. The list of those who have held the county offices up to the present time is as follows: County Clerks, Henry Pearman (appointed) 1864; G. D. Bunch, 1865; J. M. Buzzard, 1866-67; W. H. Morgan (appointed); Joseph Robbins, 1868-69; J. L. Russell, 1870-71; J. C. G. Smith, 1872-73; G. E. Butin, 1874-75-76-77; G. McFadden, 1878-79; J. C. Tuttle, 1880-83. County Treasurers during the same time were, J. M. Buzzard (appointed) 1865; Oscar Coy, 1866-67; G. W. Hatler, 1868-69; William McBrown, 1870-71; Alexander Hunt, 1872-75; Henry Brown, 1876-77; H. A. Jenner, 1878-82; T. C. Singleton, 1882-84. Registers of Deeds were: George Coombes (appointed) 1866; James Stallings, 1867-71; John S. Gilmore, 1872-73; O. H. Sheffer, 1874-75; William Cowgill, 1876-79; Thomas Blakeslee, 1880-83. Probate Judges: John Shaffer (appointed) 1865-66; Cary A. Mullenix, 1867-68; Melvin Mickel, 1869-72; William Stivers, 1873-83. Sheriffs: Robert Craig (appointed) 1864; Thomas C. Craig, 1865-67; Jasper Davis, 1868-69; B. W. Ladd, 1870-73; A. E. Smith, 1874-77; Thomas McIntosh, 1878-80; G. W. Schlegel (appointed) 1880; Samuel Baughman, 1881-83. Superintendents of Public Instruction: M. G. Williams (appointed) 1866; John Shaffer, 1867-68; T. B. Woodard, 1869-70; S. W. Burke (appointed during preceding term) 1871-72; William B. Shirley, 1873-76; Zenas Park, 1877-78; J. L. Shinn, 1879-80; J. H. Vliet, 1881-82. The first State Senator elected was Charles P. Twiss, of Allen County, who served in the Legislature of 1865-66. He was followed by non-residents of the county, until the election of W. A. Peffer in 1875-76. S. S. Benedict, elected in 1877, is now Senator from this county.

Members of the Lower House have been: Daniel C. Finn, 1865; Henry Pearmain, 1866; J. W. Jewett, 1867; P. Fay, 1868; W. F. Travis, 1869; T. J. Hudson, 1870; A. McCartney, 1871; S. S. Benedict, 1872; J. Z. Sexton, 1873; John A. Beam, 1874; S. S. Benedict, 1875-76; John S. Gilmore and T. B. Woodard, 1877-78—79-80; J. C. Sexton and T. F. C. Dodd, 1881-82.

There is no record of the first meeting of the County Commissioners. It is supposed, from all that can be gathered, that it took place about January, 1867. At a meeting held at that time (January, 1867) it was moved by L. F. Davis, Chairman of the Board "that Coy's store be made the temporary county seat." This motion was carried unanimously and shut out R. S. Futhey, who had been compelling the Commissioners to meet at Colfax, a town he had started just below Coy's. This action seems to have brought the county seat question to public attention, and on March 2, 1867, a petition, bearing 113 signatures, was presented, for an election to permanently locate the seat of justice. In accordance with this petition, the third Saturday of April was set for election day. The candidates were Twin Mounds (Fredonia), Kalida, also known as Clifton, a paper town on the northwest quarter of Section 16, Township 28, Range 15, and Tonsa on Section 6, Township 29, Range 16. The canvass of the vote showed 112 votes for Kalida, 10 for Tonsa, 77 for Twin Mounds and 2 for Centerville. The Commissioners, however, decided that the vote of Buffalo Township, 48 for Kalida, was intended for Centerville and ordered a new election to take place April 30. At this election, Twin Mounds received 112 and Clifton, or Kalida, 111. The county seat was thus located at Twin Mounds.

A third county seat election was ordered for May 25, 1869, and resulted in giving Fredonia 202 votes, Coyville 183, Guilford 117 and Verdi, a new town on the Verdigris, between Altoona and Neodesha, 75. No town having received a sufficient vote another election between Coyville and Fredonia was ordered. This took place on June 8, 1869, and resulted in a victory for Fredonia by a vote of 302 to 241. The county seat question then lay dormant for two years, but in 1871, the growth of Neodesha and Altoona set it again afloat. Besides these towns there was a place known as the Geographical Center, located as near the center of the county as possible, but not settled save in the event of its selection as the county seat. The ballot was taken on May 6, and gave Fredonia 954, Neodesha 597, Altoona 414 and the Center 404. This gave no choice and a second election took place on May 23. This resulted in giving Fredonia 1164 and Neodesha 938. A fraud was, however, detected in the books of Center Township and 545 votes cast for Fredonia were thrown out by Judge Goodin. This gave the county seat to Neodesha. The Fredonians did not give the matter up and carried it to the Supreme Court, where it was finally decided against them. In the interim, another county seat election was ordered for January 13, 1873. Neodesha not voting for herself but for the Center, the vote resulted: Fredonia 635, Center 769 and Altoona 393. Another ballot to decide between Fredonia and the Center resulted in the election of the former by a vote of 749 to 722. This finally settled the matter and the adverse decision of the Supreme Court was no longer of importance. Neodesha fought the matter and induced the Register of Deeds to move there with his records, but he soon returned to Fredonia which has ever since been the county seat.

RAILROADS.

The earliest efforts to supply railway facilities to the county were made in Center and Cedar townships. The Fort Scott, New Chicago & Fredonia Railway, to run through the places named, asked support in the form of the bonds of the townships through which it ran. Cedar proposed issuing $35,000 in bonds, and Center Township, which was to have the western terminus of the road, $50,000. A vote was taken on June 3, 1871, in Cedar, which resulted in a vote of 119 for the bonds, to thirty-four against, and in Center of "a majority of 479." The vote in the latter township is not recorded save as quoted above. The road was never built.

Humboldt & Fredonia.—The agitation for a road from Humboldt, Allen County, to Fredonia, culminated in an election, held April 2, 1872. The bonds asked were voted, but no steps were ever taken toward building the road.

Missouri & Kansas Southern.—Neodesha Township voted on February 10, 1872, by a ballot of 356 to 57, to give $60,000 of the bonds of the township to the Missouri & Kansas Southern Railway. This was accompanied by the provision that the road should be completed within one year, and should be the first railway to enter Neodesha from the east. The road was never built.

Memphis & Northwestern.—This railway is remembered with very little gratitude by those who suffered pecuniarily by it, but deserves the credit of being the first to make any real attempt to fulfil its contract. The road was to run from Thayer on the L. L. & G. Railway through the second tier of townships. Bonds were asked of Center, Cedar and Chetopa townships, and the matter meeting favorable consideration, an election was ordered in Chetopa and Cedar on March 6, 1872, and in Center on April 2. The vote showed: Chetopa, 91 for, 50 against; Cedar 131 for, 39 against. In Center the vote is not recorded, save that there was a large majority for the bonds. This vote gave $20,000 of Chetopa bonds on condition that the road be completed through the county in one year, and to Memphis, Tenn., in three and one-half years. These bonds were never paid. Cedar also gave $20,000. Center Township gave $50,000, and the city of Fredonia $20,000. Half of these latter bonds were issued, and are now being paid. The road bed was constructed to Fredonia, but later abandoned, and nothing further ever done by this company.

In the summer of 1877, the St. Louis & Kansas Central Railway proposed to build a line through the county, and made overtures for the subscription to their second mortgage bonds of the bonds of the different townships through which the railway was to run. On August 28, a petition for a special election in Center, Cedar and Chetopa townships was presented. The specifications of the proposal submitted to be voted upon were briefly, that the road starting from near or at Osage Mission, in Neosho County, should run through the townships mentioned, and also that at some time within two years the road should be built east to some point on the Missouri State line. The townships were to give respectively: Center, $30,000; Cedar, $3,000 per mile, and Chetopa $12,000. A canvass of the vote being taken, it was found the bonds had carried in Center by a vote of 125 to 62, and in Cedar by 80 to 57, but had been lost in Chetopa by 62 to 50. Some of the leaders in the latter township secured a second election in 1878, the amount of bonds specified in the proposition being reduced to $10,000, but the measure again failed by a vote of 77 to 70. The road was never constructed.

St. Louis & San Francisco.—The county had suffered quite heavily in pocket and temper in its efforts to secure railway facilities, and when in the spring of 1879, the St. Louis, Wichita & Western Railway asked the subscription of bonds, on condition that a road be built through the county, a warm opposition was elicited. The election took place on May 13, and resulted in a vote for the bonds of 1,672 and against them of 1,006. The amount of the bonds was $100,000. Work was at once begun and the road built through the county the same year, reaching Fredonia on November 24, 1879, and New Albany about a week later.

In the spring of 1882 the Kansas Railway Company caused condemnation proceedings to take effect on the old grade built from Girard to Fredonia by the Memphis & Northwestern Railway in 1874. Bonds amounting to $62,000 were voted the new road by the townships of Center, Cedar and Chetopa, through which it runs. Work was at once begun, and the old grade repaired; and by March, 1883, it may be expected that trains will be running into Fredonia. The route of the line as specified is from the State line in Crawford County, through Crawford, Neosho, Wilson and Elk to a point where Clark County touches the Indian Territory. The officers of the road are: S. C. Clark, Chicago, president; H. B. Harding, Fredonia, vice-president; T. F. C. Dodd, Altoona, secretary and treasurer.

SCHOOL AND OTHER STATISTICS.

Schools were established at a very early day in this county, many of them antedating the evacuation of the lands by the Osage Indians. The statement that education is fully keeping pace with the increase of population means little save when accompanied by figures which show its truth. How true it is may be seen by a glance at the following facts. The number of school districts in 1879 was ninety-seven, in 1880, it was ninety-eight, and in 1882, 100. The enrollment of pupils was for the three years respectively 3,986, 4,028 and 4,494. The average attendance for the same time was 2,208, 2,448 and 2,454. There were 104 teachers in 1879, 135 in 1880 and 109 in 1882. The total expenditures for all purposes in 1879 was $22,210.62, in 1880 $23,589.77, in 1882 $25,707.45.

The various forms of manufacture are but lightly represented in the county, only those processes which serve to reduce the native products to marketable shape being in use. Briefly enumerated they are as follows: The water-power grist mill of Brown & Orr at Altoona, valued at $5,000; steam saw mill of Z. A. Benell, Altoona, value $1,000; Fredonia Milling Company's mill on Fall River near Fredonia, value $7,000; water-power grist mill of Robert Morney, New Albany, valued at $5,000; a similar mill of same value at Guilford owned by C. A. Sprague; $5,000 water power grist mill of R. McGahey at Dun (Tallyrand station); $2,000 steam saw mill of Sellers & Hixenbaugh at Dun; $1,200 steam saw mill of W. Brockway at Neodesha; $8,000 steam flouring mill of Hobert & Keys and $4,000 water power flouring mill of H. B. Hobert at Neodesha; $5,000 steam flouring mill (Verdigris Valley mill) at Coyville; $2,000 feed mill operated by wind power located at Neodesha.

The following table shows the acreage devoted to various crops. A perusal of the parallel lines will show not only the increase of cultivation in the county but also what are the favorite or most profitable crops. Minor crops are omitted, as also grasses:

FREDONIA.

Fredonia, the county seat of Wilson County, is located in Center Township, near Fall River, and upon the line of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway. The first building upon the town site was erected in 1868, on a point now the southwest corner of the square. The builder was Dr. J. J. Barrett, still a resident of Fredonia, who procured his materials from the mill of Jackson & Hickox, on Fall River, above New Albany. Upon the completion of the building, Albert Troxel opened a store in it. In April, a number of settlers got together on Fall River and organized the Fredonia Town Company, with the following officers: Justus Fellows, President; J. J. Barrett, Secretary. The other members of the company were W. H. Williamson, J. H. Broadwell, Elisha Hadden, G. F. Jackson, John T. Heath, W. T. Barrett, John E. King, Albert Troxel and D. P. Nichols. That summer the town was laid out by the County Surveyor, Charles H. Mariner, and the land entered on September 16, at the land office at Humboldt, by C. S. McCoon, acting for the Town Company.

The second building on the town site was a box court house, 16x24 feet, built by Samuel Hill; the third, a hotel, built by C. S. McCoon. In the summer of 1868, Albert Troxel retired from store-keeping, and Charles H. Mariner purchased a stock of goods, and June 1, took his place in business which he still holds. About this time Jno. H. McMahon undertook to strangle the new town by setting up a town of his own just northwest of Fredonia. Here he built a court house, and here through his persuasions the County Commissioners met on July 6 and 7, and August 3 and 4. Twin Mound was the title selected by McMahon for his future county seat, and he sent in a petition for a postoffice of that name. This request was refused, there being already a "Twin Mounds" in the State. Learning of this, the town company, at the suggestion of Jno. T. Heath, christened their new town Fredonia, in honor of Fredonia, New York, and sent in a petition for a postoffice, which was granted, and J. J. Stoffle commissioned as Postmaster. The growth of the new town was not rapid for some time, the first year showing a total of five buildings, which number had increased to sixteen in 1869. With the settlement of the county seat question came a rush to Fredonia, and on November, 1870, there were 153 completed buildings on the town site, and twelve others in construction. In this year, what now forms the south part of the court house, was built by the town and donated to the county. In June the first natural addition to the population occurred, and the Town Company at once donated a town lot to the new comer, a daughter of A. J. Miller. In 1871 the town was incorporated as a city

The city organized under the laws providing for cities of the third class A meeting of the council took place on May 5, 1871, and an organization was effected, the minutes showing the swearing in of J. L. Russell as City Clerk, by the Police Judge. A second meeting was held at the office of J. H. McMahon, on May 8, 1871, but no business was done. On this later record appears the signature of T. J. Hudson, Mayor. Mayor Hudson held office a second term, being elected in 1873, and resigning October 6, 1874. Mayors since his time have been: Wm. Stivers (appointed), 1874; R. M. Foster, 1875; Wm. Stivers 1876; T. J. Hudson, 1877, B. M. Short, 1878–79; E. E. Root, 1880; Isaac Hudson, 1881–82. J. L. Russell remained City Clerk until the resignation of Mayor Hudson, when Jno. S. Gilmore served a short time, and was followed by P. W. Bahl, who held the office until 1877. Since that date the following have held this position: H. A. Jenner, 1877–78; P. W. Bahl, 1879–80; Charles King, 1881; W. D. Christman, 1882.

The Twin Mounds.—The traveler rolling smoothly along the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway between New Albany and Fredonia is struck by the sudden appearance of a great hillock, or mound, rising to the west of the track. Along its sides curve grassy slopes, becoming gradually steeper until they reach the rocky plateau at the summit. As the angle of vision changes, the rocky crown assumes strange and fantastic shapes, first a giant profile and then the whole forward half of some giant ocean steamer protruding by the brief cliffs. A curve of the road and the mound disappears and the eye rests upon the second and larger of the twins, and beneath it, crowding up its very slope the busy streets of the county seat. Taking a well worn path, the traveler reaches the summit, and turns to see unrolled before him one of the finest sights of this new world. Southward run the somber timber lines which mark the course of Fall River. Westward lies the second mound, and beyond the fertile fields to the far north can be seen the purple fringe of the Verdigris, the cattle-dotted plain looking from this height like a vast floor, and beneath his feet the city. As he gazes he can almost see that far off time when glacial rivers with their resistless force cut down the higher leve's, and left no feature to record their course save these rock-bound pinnacles which standing here through the ages have seen desolation yield to Indian occupation and that to the golden corn fields of the pioneer. And when in the great future of this matchless State, farm shall be added to farm, and town to town, and the great cities of the future shall have come, the mounds shall still stand and still keep silent watch over the noble landscape forever beneath their feet.

A postoffice was granted Fredonia and J. J. Stoffle appointed Postmaster on August 15, 1868. The postoffice was in a frame building on the southeast corner of the square. Here Melvin Mickle, who followed Stoffle, held his office. W. L. Martin and Alexander Hunt succeeded Mickle. During their terms the postoffice was moved to the middle of the block on the south side, thence to the west side and finally to its present location on the south side. John S. Gilmore, who followed Hunt, is the present Postmaster.

SCHOOLS, CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

School District No. 40, which embraces Fredonia's school, was organized on July 10th, 1869. No record of school taught that year has been preserved, the clerk's record simply stating the names of the officers elected. William McMahon, director; A. J. Miller, clerk, and J. H. McMahon, treasurer. In 1870 a three months' school was taught by Miss Ella Longwell, and an attendance of fifty-nine males and fifty females, or 109 in all, is registered. A schoolhouse, 20x30 feet, was erected this year. 1871 showed an attendance of 241 scholars, and the services during the year of W. L. Martin, Miss Ella Longwell and Miss Julia McClellan. W. L. Martin remained Principal through 1871-72, and was followed in the fall of the latter year by P. W. Bahl, who remained until 1879, when M. L. Moody was engaged. A. M. Whittaker taught in 1880, and was followed, in 1881, by the present principal, James Kennedy.

The school soon outgrew its schoolhouse, and it was decided to issue bonds to the amount of $7,000 for the purpose of erecting a substantial and creditable structure. This was done, and the sum thus secured added to the sum already accumulated as a building fund. The building was completed in 1880 and at once occupied. Its cost was $10,000, an amount very honestly expended, as may be seen by an inspection of the fine brick structure at the foot of East Mound. The district had, by the last census, 382 children between five and twenty-one years: an enrollment of 360, and an average attendance of 220 for the past year. The present corps of teachers is: James M. Kennedy, principal; G. B. McDonald, Mrs. Flora J. Park, Miss Lou Young, and Miss Mary Hunt, assistants. The building has six recitation rooms.

Methodist Church.—Methodism is, from its form of church government, little tied to any one locality, and it seems better to place under the religious history of Fredonia, not only the matters of the Methodist Episcopal history strictly pertaining to the city, but also to a certain extent those of the circuit.

The first services in Fredonia were conducted by Brother Woodward, of the Belmont Circuit. W. F. Travis had charge of the work in 1860-61, and was followed by John Earnheart, in 1862; J. Payne, 1863; C. Meadows, 1864; William Robertson, 1865-66; B. Walker, 1867; A. Long, 1868; J. Edmiston, 1869; J. McCabe, 1869. The Fredonia Mission was formed at the Annual Conference at Topeka, in 1870, and J. H. Ross appointed to the circuit, which, at that time, consisted of Fredonia, New Albany, Union Schoolhouse, Bethel and Guilford. The latter station was soon dropped as there was no place in which to hold services.

Of the points named in this circuit, Bethel was the oldest, and contained the first Methodist minister in the county, John Shaffer, and the first class-leader, Winsor Craig. New Albany was the second in point of age, and formed, in 1866, the basis of a separate work. Rev. Ross reached Fredonia on April 9th, 1870, and found matters in bad shape, no records having been kept. There had been preaching in Fredonia prior to this time, Rev. M. Hatter having performed service in a wagon shop, in July, 1868. W. F. Travis was to have preached on the afternoon of the same day, but while people and pastor were at dinner, a 'Kansas zephyr" blew down the wagon shop. Mr. Ross's first move was to secure a parsonage, which was done by dint of much hard labor. A building site for a church was also secured, and the construction of a church begun. In 1870 an assistant pastor was needed by the church, and Rev. Thomas Elliott was appointed. In 1871, the circuit was divided, and the part retaining the name of Fredonia had but two appointments, New Albany and Fredonia. The membership at this time was 100, of which Fredonia had forty. Rev. William Bristow was appointed to the work in 1872. This year the church building was completed, at a total cost of $3,000; and an extensive revival added forty-seven to the church. Rev. W. S. Stewart was pastor, in 1874-75. D. T. Summerville was pastor in 1876, and, by careful financial management, succeeded in paying off the entire debt of the church, and making extensive repairs. Rev. S. E. Pendleton was appointed in 1877, Rev. M. L. Gates in 1878, and Rev. M. McDermond succeeded him. Rev. D. S. Baldwin, the present pastor, came in 1882. There have been numerous revivals in the church which now numbers over 100.

The First Congregational Church of Fredonia was organized in the spring of 1871, under Rev. George Beckwith; who became its first pastor. The society had, at this time, thirteen members. Soon after the organization of the society a church building of wood, and costing $1,000, was erected. After a pastorate of two years, Mr. Beckwith retired and Rev. C. Richardson was called. On his resignation the line of pastoral succession was filled by Rev. Messrs. Cheesman, Adams, William Radford and O. R. Pryor, who served until 1882. At the present time the society is without a pastor, but this want will be soon supplied. A parsonage, costing $600, was added to the church in 1881. The church books show an enrollment of fifty. A Sunday school was organized in 1873, and had an attendance of forty. It is still in prosperous condition: has an attendance of 100, and is in charge of W. W. Sholes.

The Christian Church, of Fredonia, was organized in 1872, under Rev. Ziba Brown. In the years 1872 and 1873, a neat stone church building was erected near the Public Square. The cost of this structure was $2,000. Upon the retirement of Elder Brown, Rev. Milton Short was placed in charge of the society. To him succeeded Elders S. G. Brown, Gwinn and E. F. Taylor, the last of whom left the church in September, 1882. Arrangements are now being made to fill the vacant pulpit. The church has now forty-five members. A Sabbath school was organized in February, 1881, with about forty scholars. It now has an attendance of sixty-five, and is in charge of J. T. Cox.

Constellation Lodge, No. 95, A., F. & A. M., was organized in 1870. No record of the exact date is now preserved, but the first entries in the ledger were made on September 3rd; which is presumably the time of organization. The present record begins in 1871, with the installation of the following officers: J. R. Willets, W. M.; W. H. Winner, S. W.; W. H. H. McDowell, J. W.; H. A. Jenner, S. D.; L. Q. Hobbs, J. D.; A. Johnson, treasurer; J. L. Russell, secretary. The lodge now has a membership of sixty-one, and the following officers: C. S. Wicks, W. M.; A. W. Cormack, S. W.; P. W. Ball, J. W.; C. S. Coleman, treasurer; W. M. Oakford, secretary. Meetings are held on the first and third Wednesday of each month, in the hall over Reeger's drug store. The property of the society consists of regalia to the value of three hundred dollars, and cash in the treasury to the amount of a little more than $100. Efforts are being made to secure the erection of a new hall, exclusively the property of the fraternity.

Kilwinning Chapter, No. 44, R. A. M., was organized on January 22, 1880, with the following officers: Wm. Cogill, H. P.; P. Reeger, K.; J. R. Willets, S.; P. G. Pinney, treasurer; T. F. C. Dodd, secretary. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Saturday of each month, in Masonic Hall. The present officers of the chapter are the same as those given above, with the exception of C. F. Coleman, treasurer, and W. M. Oakford, secretary.

Kilwinning Council, No. 8, M. E. M., was organized on June 8, 1882, with a membership of eighteen, and the following officers: W. Cogill, T. I. M.; I. Hudson, D. M.; P. W. Ball, P. C.; C. F. Coleman, treasurer; J. T. Cox, Recorder; J. W. Paulen, steward. The society now has a membership of twenty-nine. Its officers are: W. Cogill, T. I. M.; I. Hudson, D. M.; T. J. Hudson, P. C.; W. M. Oakford, treasurer; J. T. Cox, recorder. Meetings are held on the last Saturday of each month in Masonic Hall.

Fredonia Lodge, No. 75, I. O. O. F., was organized under its present charter, on October 8, 1872. There had been a previous organization; but the charter had been surrendered. The only record of this early lodge, bears date July, 1871, and enumerates the officers as: J. L. Russell, N. G.; M. M. Murray, V. G.; S. A. Hamburger, secretary; John T. Heath, treasurer. The first officers under the present organization were: H. C. Barrett, N. G.; R. W. Sholes, V. G.; Wm. Bristow, secretary; John Hammert, treasurer. The membership of the lodge has grown slowly but steadily, and now numbers forty-two. Meetings are held on Monday of each week in Odd Fellows Hall. The property of the lodge consists of regalia of considerable value, and $600 in cash in the treasury. Its present officers are: R. W. Sholes, N. G.; T. O. Gould, V. G.; J. T. Cox, secretary; Louis Eppstein, treasurer.

Wilson Encampment, No. 35, I. O. O. F., was organized on March 9, 1880. At that date it had eleven members and the following officers: M. W. Murray, C. P.; Samuel Barrett, H. P.; Joseph Throp, S. W.; J. E. Cox, J. W.; Douglas Hite, scribe. At the present time the membership has increased to thirty-six. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Thursday of each month in Odd Fellows Hall. Pinney, treasurer. The present officers of the lodge are; O. Lee, D.; J. Wolever, V. D.; Charles Franor, A. D.; R. M. Foster, R.; W. Cogill, T. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Wednesday of each month, in a hall over Butin's drug store. The society now has enrolled, twenty-three members. There has been thus far but one death claim, which was promptly paid.

The Fredonia Building and Loan Association was organized on November 23, 1880. The object of this association, is the loaning of its funds to members desirous of making improvements in the town. Its first officers were: W. M. Oakford, Pres.; A. P. Hamilton, V. P.; W. Cogill, Sec.; I. Hudson, Treas. The board of directors consisted of these officers and J. R. Pound, J. W. Hyler, J. A. Burge, W. B. Hess and J. G. Pinney. The present officers are the same except J. T. Cox, Sec. The present board consist of W. M. Oakford, A. P. Hamilton, J. T. Cox, J. R. Pound, C. B. Brown, George Zuschnitt, O. Lee, M. T. Cantrell and P. G. Pinney. Meetings are held at the office of J. T. Cox, on the first Monday of each month, and the funds sold to the highest bidder. THE PRESS AND OTHER LOCAL INTERESTS.

The first paper published in Wilson County, emanated from Fredonia on January 20, 1870. It was styled the Wilson County Courier, and was published by John R. Jennings, who committed the new sheet to Republican principles. The material of the Leroy Pioneer, which had also been published by Jennings, was used on the Courier until its demise in December, 1870. The paper started as a six-column, and shortly enlarged to a seven-column folio. It was never a very substantial sheet, coming out as a half-sheet, or missing publication entirely in many instances.

The Fredonia Journal was started January 13, 1871, by W. A. Peffer and George M. Wellman. Its material was the same as that used on its predecessor, the Courier. Starting as a six column folio, of no politics, the paper was enlarged on April 28 to an eight column sheet, and as such it continued until May, 1873, when it was sold to John S. Gilmore, who discontinued it and at once started the Citizen.

The Fredonia Tribune was started as a Democratic seven-column weekly on September 7, 1876. B. F. Bowen was the parent of this hopeful. In January, 1878, it became a Greenback organ, and a few months later Douglas Hite became half owner. During a portion of this year Bowen retired from active work, but returned in time to be in at the death, which occurred in February, 1879.

The Graphic came on the newspaper field on December 18, 1879. It was a seven-column folio, and was edited by C. E. Stivers and James Kennedy. March 25, 1880, it issued its last number, finding no place for a second Republican paper in the county-seat.

Wilson County Citizen.—The first number of the Citizen was issued at Guilford on April 21, 1870, and was called the Guilford Citizen. It was published by John S. Gilmore, a practical printer, of Emporia, who had just become of age. The type was new, but the press, a large size Washington, had been used thirteen years in printing the Emporia News. This press, behind which the founder of the Citizen took his first lesson in "rolling," was brought to Emporia in 1857 by P. B. Plumb, now United States Senator from this State. The Citizen was a seven column folio of pronounced Republican politics and entirely home printed. Guilford was a mere hamlet of ten or a dozen houses, and the young editor soon decided that its prospects did not assure much of fame or fortune to a newspaper. On October 22, 1870, at Vol. 1, No. 27, the paper contained its own obituary. The printing material was moved to Neodesha, then without a paper and one of the most thrifty and promising towns in southern Kansas (though still in an Indian reserve), and on November 18, 1870, Mr. Gilmore issued the first number of the Wilson County Citizen. Its course at Neodesha is described under the press history of that town. After discontinuing his paper at Neodesha, on November 29, 1872, Mr. Gilmore took a rest of a few months previous to carrying out his theory that the successful paper of a county should be at the county-seat. In May, 1873, he bought the Fredonia Journal of Peffer & Wellman, and in its place, on June 6, 1873, revived the Citizen, starting the new paper at Vol. 3, No. 27, a number attained by adding together the issues of the Citizen at Guilford and Neodesha. Located at the county-seat, the Citizen at once became the official paper of the county, and as such has remained to this day. It grew into a first-class country paper, its circulation gradually increased and success attended the labor and perseverance of its industrious and tenacious editor. In September, 1877, the Citizen was enlarged to an eight column folio, and in March, 1882, a cylinder power press was purchased to print its growing edition. It is now one of the best local papers in Kansas, and wields a wide influence. It has done much for the welfare of Fredonia and Wilson County, devoting special attention to every material and moral interest. Mr. Gilmore, who set the first type on the paper has always been the sole owner and manager, and his pride is centered in it as deeply now as in the early years when he was struggling to establish it.

The Fredonia Democrat was started on May 25, 1882, with N. Powell as editor and proprietor It is an eight column folio of the the stalwart Democratic type. T. J. Hudson has recently purchased an interest in the paper and acts as political editor. The circulation of the Democrat is 500. Thursday is publication day.

Wilson County Bank.—The Wilson County Savings Association, under the above title, was chartered on September 9th, as a State bank. For about a year previous it had been in operation as a private banking house. Its directors in 1871 were Joseph P. Hill, Joshua Hill, Milton Short, Alex. Hunt and T. J. Hudson. The first three named being, respectively, president, cashier and secretary. In 1874, Joshua Hill became president, and Isaac Hudson cashier, positions they retain at the present time. John S. Gilmore is secretary. The fine building now occupied by the bank was begun in September, 1879, and completed at a cost of $7,000 on November 29, 1880. It is essentially a Kansas building, the stone coming from this county, as did all the fine black walnut of the interior, and the brick from Fort Scott.

Grain Business.—But little has been done in the shipment of grain from any part of the county. This is not, as might be inferred, from lack of production, but rather from the large home market for all sorts of grain suitable for stock feeding. Hence it is that Fredonia has but one elevator. This is the property of S. A. Brown & Co. It was built in 1880, at a cost of $3,600, and has a capacity of 10,000 bushels. Power is furnished by a small portable engine. The amount handled in 1881 was about 130,000 bushels.

Fredonia Band —The Fredonia Band, comprising almost all the really good performers of the various band organizations of the past thirteen years, was re-organized in August, 1882, with J. A. Burge leader. It has thirteen pieces, and executes all the most recent music of the day in very creditable style. Its members have been selected not only for musical ability, but for permanence of residence, all previous bands having been broken up by the removal of transient members

He was commissioned First Lieutenant of Company A, Second Indian Regiment, December, 1862, and on March 1, 1863, was made Quartermaster of the First Indian Regiment. He served in this capacity six months and twenty-two days, and it was discovered that S. S. Prouty held a commission for the same office, which dated prior to his and Mr. Cox was at once appointed special Indian agent in the field and served in this capacity until March, 1864. He was in the engagements at Prairie Grove, Van Buren, etc., and made maps of the country through which they passed, and mapped the Prairie Grove Battle Field for Harper's Magazine. He returned to Coffey County, Kan., in 1864. He served two years as secretary of the United States Senate Committee on Public Lands, beginning in 1865. He was afterward appointed to represent the government in the appraisal of the Cherokee Neutral Lands, while Col. W. A. Phillips, ex-member of congress, represented the Indians. He was proprietor of a hotel in Burlington four years, and at the same time carried on an insurance and real estate agency. He also practiced law and served four months as County Attorney to fill a vacancy. He moved to Fort Scott in 1869, and was employed by James F. Joy for one year as agent for the re-appraisal and sale of Cherokee Neutral Lands. He removed to Little Rock, Ark., in 1873, and carried on the real estate and abstract business until 1875. He was appointed by the President as Receiver of Public Moneys in the United States Land Office, and served in this capacity for two years. Was County Attorney. He also took the census of Little Rock Township in 1880, and in December of the same year returned to Kansas and located at Fredonia, where he has served as Justice of the Peace ten months, and where he now carries on the real estate and insurance business, and is serving as secretary of the Fredonia Building and Loan Association, and as County Surveyor. He was born in Fairfield, Greene Co., Ohio, February 8, 1821, son of Isaac and Lydia Cox. His father died in 1821, and his mother several years afterward married Joseph Sexton. She was born in 1799, and is still living. She is a very prominent preacher of the United Brethren Church, has preached acceptably in the largest cities of the United States. She served one year as chaplain of the Kansas State Penitentiary. She is widely known and universally esteemed. Her autobiography has quite an extensive sale. Mr. Cox lived in his native county five years, then lived with his mother in various parts of Ohio, until 1840, when he went to Hancock County, Ind., and after assisting in taking the census there returned to Ohio. He attended school and then taught two or three terms; finally attended Hoshour's academy at Cambridge City, Ind., then taught in Germantown and Centerville, Ind. Finally took charge of the Cambridge schools and afterward of the County Seminary at Noblesville, Ind. He also edited and published the True Whig. While teaching and editing the Whig, he accepted a position as secretary of the Peru and Indianapolis Railroad Company, at the same time was proprietor of a drug store. He taught one year, owned the drug store two years, and was secretary of the railroad company three years. He afterward served as Postmaster of Noblesville, Ind., and was Transportation Clerk of the Railroad until 1853, when he was elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Northwestern Christian University at Indianapolis, and removed to that city, remaining there until the University buildings were completed; then returned to Noblesville, and a few months afterward came to Kansas. He located at Buffalo, N. Y., and was engaged in business there for six or seven years. He then spent three years in Pennsylvania as a commercial traveler, and from Pennsylvania went to Colorado, but after prospecting two weeks, he returned to Leavenworth City, Kan., and again went on the road; traveled in Kansas until 1879, and then came to Fredonia, and on August 15, 1879, opened up an extensive stock of dry goods and clothing. He is now permanently established in business, and is one of the leading merchants of Wilson County. He is treasurer in the I. O. O. F., and is an officer in the Encampment. Mr. Forgey is an unassuming man, of industrious and economical habits, and is conscientious and reliable in business.

JOHN S. GILMORE, editor and proprietor of the Wilson County Citizen, was born in Rochester, N. Y., December 6, 1848. He is descended from Scotch Presbyterian stock, and one of his relatives on the father's side, who was a participant in the Covenanter struggles of the seventeenth century, was killed in the battle of Drumclog. William Gilmore, grandfather of John S., was identified with the Irish Rebellion of 1798, and was a United Irishman of exceptional learning and ability. Robert G. Gilmore, born September 19, 1811, at Donaghadee, County Down, Ireland, was by trade a carpenter, well educated, of good intellectuality, rare penetration and firm character. He came to America in 1833, and in 1837 settled at Rochester, N. Y., where he remained for twenty years. His wife, Helen Storrier, was born in Dundee, Scotland, on April 28, 1812. She was reared in the Scotch Presbyterian faith, and is a woman of sterling character, greatly respected by all who know her. Robert G. Gilmore had eight children, six of whom are now living. J. S. is the fourth son. In 1857 Mr. Gilmore came to Kansas and located near Emporia, Lyon County, on a claim. In 1870 he removed to Emporia, where, on February 11, 1874, he died. The subject of this sketch had but little schooling, his present education having been acquired in his intercourse with the realities of life. Up to the age of sixteen he worked on his father's farm, and on July 20, 1865, left it to enter the office of the Emporia News as an apprentice of the art preservative, under the tutelage of Hon. Jacob Stotler. After acquiring the trade and working as a printer in various parts of the State a little over four years, and having laid up as the result of his individual industry, frugality and good management $700, he purchased the necessary printing material, moved to Wilson County, and April 21, 1870, established the Wilson County Citizen. He was then twenty-one years of age, and the youngest editor in Kansas. The Citizen was published six months at Guilford, then two years at Neodesha, and in May, 1873, was moved to Fredonia, the county seat, and entered upon a career of newspaper success which has few parallels in the State. Everything he has attained is the direct fruit of unremitting hard work, tenacity of purpose, a straightforward course and exceptional business tact. The Citizen has effectively championed the material interests of Fredonia and Wilson County, and the services of its public-spirited editor in promoting the growth and development of the county is generally conceded. Though independent and outspoken as an editor Mr. Gilmore has always been a radical, unflinching Republican, advocating the interests of his party with enthusiasm and fidelity; has been active in its councils and has been honored with public confidence and trusts in a conspicuous degree. In nearly every Republican State Convention held since he became a voter, he has been a delegate. He was also a member of the Republican State Committee, Congressional District Committee and Chairman of the County Committee several times. In 1871 he was elected Register of Deeds of Wilson County, holding two years. In 1876 he became a member of the State Legislature, and in 1878 was re-elected. On February 16, 1880, he was appointed Postmaster of Fredonia and still holds the position. In 1881 he compiled the history of Wilson County. He was married at Lancaster, Ohio, May 31, 1882, to Miss Viola Butin, of Fredonia, Kan., a beautiful and accomplished lady of admirable disposition and exalted character. The wedding journey led to Washington, where, on June 9 the bride of nine days died. Over the sad ending of the journey so happily begun, we draw the veil. Saddened and well nigh crushed Mr. Gilmore returned to Fredonia and his many duties, beneath whose steady pressure he strives to bury the sound of a voice forever stilled and a loved face forever faded from mortal vision. Mr. Gilmore's forceful character will, however, carry him over even this irreparable loss, and we may look for his appearance again in some position suited to the character of the man and the appreciation of his fellows.

Four days after the capture, he, in company with two companions, made their escape from the guards, and mounting rebel horses ran through Price's camp, and rode all night; two of the horses were run down and all three of the escaped prisoners mounted the horse on which Lee rode; but the horse soon gave out, one of Lee's companions was shot and killed, the other wounded and re-captured, while Mr. Lee was hunted down by bloodhounds and finally recaptured. He and his companion were then tied with ropes for a few days, and for several weeks were fed on bran bread and water; about six weeks after the capture he again effected his escape and eluded his pursuers by jumping into a stream and taking refuge under a drift where he lay in the stream with only his head above water over twenty-four hours; when his pursuers had given up the search he proceeded on his way, and was three days and nights without food. On the evening of the second day he found in the road a $5 bill, and soon after an abandoned Government mule. He manufactured a bridle of bark, mounted the mule and rode all night, the mule gave out the next morning. He stopped for refreshments at a log hut occupied by a colored family. He was here provided with shoes to protect his lacerated and bleeding feet. He then continued his journey on foot, taking only one meal per day and sleeping out nights until he finally completed the distance of over 250 miles and arrived at his home in Osceola, Mo. He then returned to his regiment and completed his term of service, which was one year. NEODESHA.

In October, 1867, A. McCartney and A. K. Phelon came from Neosho Falls to the neighborhood of what is now Neodesha and established a trading post for traffic with the Osage Indians. This post stood near the now famous Little Bear Mound. Nearly a year before this time, while the Indians still held the land, and the whites had no rights in the premises, E. K. Parris and A. Tucker had built a cabin on Fall River some distance west of the future town site, and sold goods to the Indians. Other settlements had been made still earlier, but none near Neodesha. Numerous Indian villages were near the junction of the Verdigris and Fall River, and the Osages had given to the place the name of Neodesha (meeting of the waters), which soon came to be applied to the trading post. In October, 1868, R. S. Futhey and John B. Keys arrived at the trading post, and after looking over a suitable spot for a town site, selected the claim where the city now stands, paying therefor $500. This was the signal for a wild excitement, and all claims near that of Futhey and Keys being held at enormous figures. McCartney and Phelon joined Futhey and Keys in the formation of a town company and a survey of the town site, which took place on July 12 and 13, 1869. On December 24, of that year, the frame of the first building on the town site was raised, and on its completion McCartney and Phelon moved into it the stock of the trading post. The policy of the town company was most liberal, lots being freely given to all who would erect buildings, and the town went on with a rush which soon carried it beyond the other settlements on the Trust lands. In one year from the erection of the McCartney and Phelon store there were 200 buildings in the town, and six months later the population had reached 1,000. On March 5, 1870, the first child, Neosho, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Derry, was born. The town site was entered by Mayor Phelon on behalf of the town company in the fall of 1871, and on December 15, a United States Land Office was located at this point. In November, 1879, the St. Louis and San Francisco railway reached the town, and in 1880 a division was established and a round house and repair shop built. In 1880, the United States census gave the town 924 inhabitants. Its present population is variously stated from 1,000 to 1,500, but is probably somewhere between the two figures.

In March, 1871, Neodesha was incorporated as a city of the third class. April 3, a city election was held resulting in the polling of 167 votes and the return of a full set of officials as follows: A. K. Phelon, Mayor; T. Blakesler, Jno. S. Gilmore, W. A. Hampton, S. L. McCuiston, C. W. Derry, Councilmen; E. D. Huntley, Police Judge. J. K. DeMoss was made City Clerk. The robes of mayoralty since that date have descended as follows: F. Smith, 1872; R. M. Jones, 1873-74; John H. Gray, 1875; A. McCartney, 1876-77; T. Blakeslee, 1878; A. McCartney, 1879-81; T. Blakeslee, 1882. Clerks of the city for the same period have been: F. H. Knapp, 1872; O. H. P. Sheffer, 1873; G.

P. Smith, 1874; L. Scott, 1875; M. C. Stoner, 1876-77; E. C. Todd, 1878; J. M. C. Keck, 1879; R. H. Doane, 1880-81; W. H. Parton, 1882. The first ordinance on the books is one to regulate the sale of intoxicants.

A postoffice was established at Neodesha in 1870, and A. K. Phelon appointed Postmaster. After nearly two years of service Mr. Phelon retired and O. H. P. Sheffer was appointed. His term of office lasted until July 14, 1873, when E. K. Parris began handling the mails. William Cramer, the present official, received his commission on August 17, 1877. There has never been a separate postoffice building though the accommodations in the various stores have been very fairly good.

The office was made a money order one on July 20, 1872. The first money order was issued by Hampton & Son to Dodd, Brown & Co., of St. Louis, for $26 and bears the signature of O. H. P. Sheffer.

The first school was taught in the town in 1870, James A. McHenry being the teacher. It was held in the old schoolhouse, which stood on Main street until sold to John H. Gray, by whom it was removed to the country, where it fills a dishonored old age as a barn. The brick schoolhouse in the northwest part of the town was built in 1872, bonds to the amount of $15,000 being issued by the district to secure building funds. It has four rooms, three of which were filled with scholars from the time of occupancy. At the present time not only has the fourth room been filled, but the primary department crowded out and placed in the unused Congregational Church. As there seems to be no indication that the number (225) of scholars will decrease, a second permanent schoolhouse is a matter of near necessity. The present teachers are: J. A. Wardlow, W. P. Maxwell, Eva Speers, Belle Witham and Maud Gray.

LOCAL MATTERS.

At an early day Congregationalism seems to have been prevalent in Neodesha. A Congregational Church was built in 1872 at a cost of about $600, and the society seems for a time to have flourished, but later it gradually fell away and now has no pastor and no services, the church building being used for the primary school.

The Methodist Episcopal Church of Neodesha was organized in 1870. Like all churches of this denomination, it has a long pastoral list. It embraces Revs. Parker, Ross, Lowe, Lee, Barton, Warfield, Baldwin, Weed, Ashbaugh, Hunt, Robb and McClintock. The society now numbers eighty members. A brick church was erected in 1872, at a cost of $3,500. A Sabbath school established in 1871 is still kept up under the superintendence of Charles Brigham, and has an average attendance of 100.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1871 with twelve members. Its pastor at this time was Rev. S. D. Lowhea. Since his ministry Revs. J. H. Mateer, S. N. D. Martin, W. B. Truex and S. Allen have successively had charge of the church. The society has never built a church edifice, but contemplate doing so soon. Early services were held in the school house and later in the city hall, which is the present place of meeting. The society now numbers twenty-five.

The Christian Church of Neodesha was organized in 1877 by Rev. C. A. Hedrick of Missouri. The church was placed in charge of Rev. Mr. Pucket, who filled its pulpit for a considerable time. Upon his retirement followed a brief time, when the church was without a pastor. This ended in August, 1882, on the engagement of the present incumbent, Rev. C. J. McKenney. At its organization the society numbered fifty, which number has increased to 140. A church building, 32×50 feet, was completed in 1881, at a cost of $2,500. A Sabbath school, organized in January, 1882, has an attendance of 140, and is in charge of Mr. F. Smith.

This is, in brief, the history of the Christian society as it stands to-day. It should, however, be stated that an organization was effected as early as 1873, but having no pastor gradually disintegrated and became defunct.

The Baptists have a society at this place, and also a church edifice, in which services are held on each Sabbath, although the society has, at present, no pastor. The Catholics also have an organization and hold regular services under Father F. R. Van Rosmalen.

Harmony Lodge, No. 94, A., F. & A. M., was organized on October 20, 1870, with ten members. Its officers at that time were: William Cowgill, W. M.; J. N. Halsted, S. W.; A. K. Phelon, J. W.; J. W. Sutherland, Sec.; J. H. Stodard, Treas. The lodge now has sixty-five members and the following officers: J. M. Keck, W. M.; George Briggs, S. W.; R. M. Jones, J. W.; R. H. Doane, Sec.; Henry Ferring, Treas. Meetings are held in Masonic Hall, the joint property of this lodge and the Odd Fellows, on the first and third Saturday of each month. The property of the lodge consists of its half interest in the hall and $300 in the treasury.

Neodesha Lodge, No. 72, I. O. O. F., was organized on March 14, 1871, six names appearing on the charter. Its officers were: O. H. P. Sheffer, N. G.; Robert Hays, V. G.; William Nicholson, R. S.; Reuben C. Spaulding, Sec.; John W. Duncan, Treas. The society now has a membership of forty, and the following officers: William Cole, N. G.; George W. Davis, V. G.; A. Kashner, Sec.; H. Edwards, Treas. Meetings are held on Friday of each week in the hall owned by this society and the Masonic Fraternity. This hall cost $900. Besides this property, the lodge has about $300 in the treasury for the orphans' fund.

The Comet, No. 347, Equitable Aid Union, was organized on July 20, 1881, by V. M. Dewey, Grand Dep. The union then had ten members and the following officers: Robert Hays, C.; A. McAusland, Pres.; Mrs. Jennie Mitchell, Adv.; G. W. Davis, Aux.; G. B. Mitchell, Treas.; R. H. Doane, Sec. There is no record of a meeting later than December 22, 1881, when the above officers were still in power and the union had a membership of fourteen.

Neodesha Chapter, No. 28, Order of the Eastern Star, was organized under a dispensation on October 17, 1882, with a membership of twenty-five. Its officers, who still hold their positions, were: Mrs. C. Jones, W. M.; J. M. Keck, W. P.; Miss Addie Woodward, A. M.; W. H. Cramer, Sec.; Mrs. Mary Briggs, Treas. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month in Odd Fellows' Hall.

Neodesha, No. 101, A. O. U. W., was organized on April 10, 1882, with twenty-seven members and the following officers: W. E. Leach, W. M.; S. S. Steele, F.; F. T. Allen, Treas.; J. R. Young, Sec.; J. W. Ewing, O.; J. M. Puette, F. The order has already about $75 in the treasury.

The Press.—The Neodesha Citizen was introduced to the public on November 18, 1870, by John S. Gilmore, who had previously published the same paper at Guilford. It was a seven-column Republican weekly, and in the flush times of Neodesha's early growth did a prosperous business. Later the support was inadequate to the maintenance of the style of paper the publisher desired to keep up, and on November 28, 1872, it was discontinued.

On the day before Christmas, 1870, appeared the first issue of the Neodesha Enterprise, a thunder and lightning Democratic weekly, published by Berry & Campbell. Nine weeks later the office was closed by its creditors. The material of the paper was spirited away one dark night by the holders of a second mortgage, and a Fredonia man who held a first mortgage was left to meditate on the well known fact, that it is easy to put money into a newspaper office, but its extraction is a far more difficult task.

The Wilson County Free Press was founded on January 9, 1873, by G. P. Smith, who used the material upon which the Humboldt Southwest had formerly been printed. The paper was a seven-column Independent weekly. In December, 1874, it passed into the hands of G. D. Ingersoll, who made it Republican and reduced the size one column. Ownership changed again in December, 1876, and the paper became Independent in the hands of F. H. McCarter. A little later it passed to Chapman Bros. who made it Democratic. In May, 1879, it was sold to George A. McCarter by whom it is now published as a Republican sheet.

The Neodesha Gazette, a seven-column folio of Republican proclivities, was ushered into existence on April 28, 1881. Its sponsors were John H. and Frank W. Long. After a little more than a year's publication the Gazette was sold to C. E. McClintock and R. J. Monroe who turned it into the Prohibitionist. This new venture in journalism was what its name implies, the organ of the Prohibition party. It did not meet with a very cordial support and in October, 1882, discontinued publication.

Banking.—The Neodesha Savings Bank was organized in 1872 and reorganized and chartered on April 1, 1878. The last statement of resources shows a capital of $16,591.70, surplus of $3,000 and net undivided earnings of $1,260. The bank is officered by Douglas Stewart, president, and William Hill, cashier.

Milling.—The Neodesha steam flouring mill was built in 1870-71 by Futhey, Keys & Phelon. The saw-mill attachment which was in use up to 1881 bears date a little prior the grist mill, but though of considerable importance when the town was rushing into existence has done little since that time. The cost of the grist mill was $16,000. It has three run of buhr stones, two for wheat and one for corn, and can turn out sixty barrels of flour per twenty-four hours. It was sold by its original proprietors to Futhey & Keys and by them to Hobart & Keys, who now operate it.

The Hobart Mill.—The Hobart water mill is located on Fall River one and one-quarter miles west of the town. It was built in 1874 at a cost of $5,000. Power is furnished by a turbine water wheel which operates three run of buhr-stones. This mill was built by Sprinkle & Co., and passed from them to Phelon Bros., B. F. Hobart, and finally G. A. Adams, who now runs it.

An attempt to recapitulate the various industries of a city as large as Neodesha is unnecessary. It need only be said that they are commensurate with its size. Improvements are constantly being made and the population now stated at 1,000 is steadily growing toward the 1,500 point which some more enthusiastic than exact citizens now claim.

NEW ALBANY.

New Albany is located on Fall River in the southwest portion of the county, seven miles west of Fredonia, the county seat. The town owes its existence principally to Robert Mooney and William Hall, who in the spring of 1865, while this part of the county was still in the hands of the Osages, established a trading post. Shortly after the land was vacated by the Indians and surveyed by the United States authorities. It was not however, until April 20, 1871, that a town company was formed and any systematic effort made for improvement. The town company, which was officered by Wm Stivers, Pres.; W. Hall, Treas. and P. W. Mackey, Sec., laid out the town as it now stands, enclosing a gently sloping square, a fitting spot for a court house should the then uncertain future make this the county seat. Hopes of this sort have long since passed away and the square is already dotted with buildings.

The first child born on the new town site was Miss Dora, daughter of Robert and Mrs. Nannie E. Mooney, who enjoy the added distinction of being the first couple married from the town. The first death in the place was either that of a baby of a woman named Harlow, who shortly moved away, or J. W. Gill—on this point the recollection of old settlers differs. The first building was the old trading post of Hall & Mooney, the second, the log house of Wm. Hall, and the third, a similar building belonging to Robert Mooney. Next following these was the blacksmith shop of J. Russell. The first drug store was opened by Simon Alter, who was followed by J. Q. Alter, Wynne & Ficklen, Marr & Roby and Robert Marr, who still does business. A hardware store was started in 1878–79, by Gardner & Bros. The business is now done by J. L. Chamberlain Prior to the building of the town, John Alter, who lived about three miles northeast, practiced medicine for the benefit of the settlers. In 1870, Dr. P. W. Mackey came to New Albany, and in 1871, A. G. Marshman put up a shingle, which still stands the card of the only physician in the town. Prior also to the formation of the town or the residence of Hall & Mooney, Jackson, Hickox & Fay built a two-run steam grist and saw mill about a mile and one-half above the town. This mill still exists, but is not now in use. In 1870 another mill was built at a point nearer town by Wauder, Chase & Co. This mill had two run of burr-stones, one for corn and one for wheat. The present mill is more particularly described elsewhere.

A postoffice was established soon after Hall & Mooney arrived on the future site of New Albany, but the service was for some time a private one. Mr. W. Hall kept the office until 1870, when it was removed to the store of Stivers Troup, the latter being Postmaster and his partner deputy. Troup was followed by Robert Mooney, Spencer Beaumont and Robert Marr, the present official.

The school district of New Albany is number nine—an indication of its age. The district was organized in 1866, but there is no record of a school being taught that year. In 1867 a three months' school was taught by James Hanegan, and in 1868 R. Nelson taught one of similar length. Probably there was also a school term in 1869, but the records are silent on this point. Since that date the following teachers have served: W. S. Robberts, 1870; T. E. Gregg, 1872; (the school was built this year at a cost of $600); S. W. Burke, 1874; Sallie McQuilkin, 1875; F. M. Robertson, 1876; Sallie McQuilkin 1877; Mary Wynne, 1878; Georgia E. Marshman, 1878; E. M. Boren and P. Van Hyatt, 1879; J. L. Stewart, 1880; B. M. Ewing, J. W. Kimball and A. Young, 1881; A. Young and J. W. Kimball, 1882; V. L. Polson and Miss Susie Young, 1882 (fall term). A new school building is in process of erection, and is to be completed January 1, 1883. It is of brick with stone foundation; 32x46 feet and two stories in height. It will be divided into two rooms on the first floor, but the upper left for the present entire. An ell 15x16 makes the building somewhat of a T shape, and above all will rise a graceful cupola. Complete, the schoolhouse will cost $3,000. The school now has an enrollment of eighty-five, but in the new building this will be greatly increased.

Baptist Church.—An organization of this denomination was formed in the summer of 1867 by Rev. Dr. Palmer, and services have been held with a degree of regularity up to the present time. Mr. Palmer was succeeded by Revs. G. W. Cope, Wm. Gable, N. H. Ward, Reuben Baker, P. A. McCartney, O. C. Keniston and A. E. Lewis, the present incumbent. The society now has a membership of ninety-three. Sabbath school services have been held during mild weather, and have been well attended

The Methodist Episcopal Church, of New Albany, was formed in 1870, with about thirty members. At no time has it been able to support a separate pastor, but has been served by the Coyville circuit. The pastors who have occupied its pulpit, are: Revs. Stewart, Somerville, Williams, Gates, Brady, Hitchcock, Leech, and Rev. John Johnson, the present minister. A church edifice of stone was erected in 1879, at a cost of $1,200, the expense being divided between the church society and the Masonic and Odd Fellows' lodges, which occupy the upper floor. The society now has a membership of fifty-five. A Sabbath school of between sixty and seventy has been taught every summer, but discontinued in cold weather on account of the distance at which many of the pupils live.

Christian Church.—The first organization of the Christian Church of New Albany was effected at a point three miles northeast, where there is a schoolhouse, and the name of Mount Zion has been given. Removing from this point to New Albany in 1878, the society effected a reorganization and has held services at this point ever since, although it has no church edifice

New Albany Lodge, No. 81 A., F.& A. M., was organized on November 26, 1869, with the following officers: B. F. Humphrey, W. M.; A. Butts, S. W.; C. W. Hickox, J. W.; J. M. Edmiston, secretary; William Hall, treasurer; W. B. Fisher, T. The lodge has now a membership of thirty-six. Meetings are held on each Saturday night, on or next following full moon, and each two weeks thereafter. The lodge room is the upper portion of the church building, and was built by this lodge at a cost of $750. It is leased for the use of the Odd Fellows jointly with this lodge. The present officers of the lodge are: C. W. Hickox, W. M.; Robert Mooney, S. W.; A. S. Helm, J. W.; O. Edmiston, S. D.; R. Lee, J. D.; Robert Marr, secretary; J. L. Toepler, treasurer; John Griffin, tiler.

Silent Temple Lodge, No. 91, I. O. O. F., was organized on June 7, 1872, and chartered on October 8th of the same year. Its charter officers were: Robert Stephen, N. G.; W. M. Harris, V. G.; T. C. Chilcote, R. S.; J. A. Rockwood, treasurer. These, with A. H. Abrams, constituted the charter members. The present officers of the lodge are: J. E. Robinson, N. G.; A. G. Marshman, V. G.; Robert Marr, secretary; D. N. Young, treasurer. Meetings are held on Wednesday of each week in Odd Fellows' hall. The property of the lodge consists of regalia to the value of $200, and a balance in the treasury of $150 or more.

Mooney's Mill.—This mill is located on a bayou or minor channel of Fall River at a point less than a quarter of a mile from the town. It was completed in 1880 at a cost of about $6,000. Power is furnished by a "forty-inch special" turbine wheel. This is utilized by four run of burr-stones; two used for wheat, one for middlings and one for corn. When run to its fullest capacity this mill turns out seventy five barrels of flour per day.

The town now has two general stores, one grocery, one drug and one hardware and furniture store, a flouring mill, two blacksmiths and a wagon maker. There is no hotel, but the restaurant is able to furnish sleeping rooms for travelers.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

WILLIAM HALL, merchant, and one of the oldest settlers of this region, was born in Clinton County, Ohio, in 1823, and when a child of five years removed with his parents to Henry Co., Ind., where he remained until he had reached manhood's years, when he went to California, and upon his return enlisted in Company E, Fifty-fourth Indiana Volunteers, and after two years' hard service in the field came to Kansas, locating here and being the first merchant in the town of New Albany, where he now enjoys not only the confidence of his many friends, but also that of the entire community. In February, 1855, Mr. Hall was married to Miss Mary A. Richards, of Indiana, who has borne him six children. Mr. Hall has held several county and township offices.

ROBERT MOONEY was born in Hamilton County, Ind., February 16, 1842; came to Kansas in April, 1865; located where New Albany now is in July, 1865; commenced mercantile business in partnership with William Hall in 1871. He bought the New Albany grist and saw mill and ran that in connection with mercantile business until the fall of 1878, when he sold his interest in the store to E. Alley & Co., and then commenced building a new water mill. In April, 1879 the mill was completed, and in 1882 he put in improved machinery, and now has a first class merchant and exchange mill. March 8, 1866, was married to Miss N. E. Bethard, of Coffey County, Kan. Dora A. Mooney was born March 16, 1867; Albert B. was born February 10, 1870, died October 26, 1870; Elmer B. was born November 28, 1872, died August 27, 1872; Maud L. was born February 1, 1874; Fred R. February 1, 1876; Ethiel, February 6, 1878.

COYVILLE.

Coyville, once the county seat, is now a star postoffice. In the early days of the county, when settlement was all in the northern part, this point was very important. The step which finally located Coyville was the arrival, in 1859, of Albert Hagen, a Polish Jew, who, with the instinct of his tribe, opened a store for trade with the Indians. This was the first store in the county, and did a flourishing business. In 1864, Oscar Coy bought out Hagen and, with P. P. Steele, embarked in business. The place soon became known as Coy's, and later as Coyville. A postoffice was established on May 2, 1866, and Coy appointed Postmaster. A Masonic Lodge (No. 57) was organized in 1867, and the place seemed on the high road to prosperity; but as to many another place came first a pause and then a reaction, which left it what it is to-day.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

ALEXANDER C. HUTCHINSON, druggist, was born in December, 1850, in the city of Perth, Scotland, and came to this country in 1874, locating for a short time in the Mohawk Valley, N. Y., and in 1877 removing to this State and for a short time located in Topeka, from whence he removed to his present home. In May, 1873, Mr. Hutchinson married Miss Marian Lang, of Ayr, Scotland, who has borne him one daughter—Maggie M., born September 8, 1875. His stock is large and well assorted and is valued at $5,000, fully insured. Although not a citizen of the United States, Mr. Hutchinson is a live and enterprising business man.

J. W. SIMPSON, M.D., was born in Somerset County, Pa., in 1839, and came to Kansas in 1875, locating in Coyville, where he has since been engaged in the practice of his profession, he being a graduate of the Pennsylvania Medical College. In 1874 the doctor married Miss Lena Bemis, of Chester, Pa. Dr. S. is considered one of the first physicians of Southern Kansas and enjoys a large practice.

ALTOONA.

Altoona, first known as Geddesburg, is located on the Verdigris river, ten miles east of Fredonia, the county seat. It was started in 1869 by a town company of which Dr. T. F. C. Dodd was president and J. N. D. Brown secretary. No town elections were, however, held, and the town company has practically lapsed. The first business done near the town was by George Schultz and John Hooper, who, in 1869, sold groceries under a tree on the bank of the river. Shortly after, W. H. Tatham opened a store in the town proper, and, in default of a newspaper to advertise in, cried the merits of his wares through a tin horn. History does not state whether the effort was as successful as that of the "pied piper of Hamelin town." The town grew rapidly, and in a year had sixty-five buildings.

Altoona was made a postoffice on April 11, 1870, and J. N. D. Brown appointed Postmaster. He was succeeded by Freedman, Boyd, T. F. C. Dodd, Wm. McLaughlin, R. N. and M. E. Richardson, the latter of whom is still in office.

The Altoona Union, the second paper published in the county, was started on March 30th, 1870, by Bowser & Brown. It was printed on new material purchased for it by the Altoona Town Company. Four weeks later, Bowser wearied of his work and delegated the entire business to Brown, who kept the berth until July 9th, of that year. The paper then passed into the hands of James A. Smith and his wife, Carrie A., who hoisted the Republican banner. Under this management the paper continued until December 5, 1872, when it chronicled the death of Horace Greeley and its own, appearing with inverted column rules.

The schoolhouse built in 1872 is still used, and, having been built with a view to a rapid increase in the town has ample accommodations. It is presided over by Misses Clara and Celia Kashner, who have about one hundred scholars distributed in two rooms. The cost of the building was $3,000.

Altoona has two churches, the Congregational, built in 1880, and the Methodist Episcopal, built in 1882. The latter is in charge of Rev. C. W. Swartz. Each has a membership of about thirty. The Union Sabbath school, supported by the two churches, has a large attendance. The Christian Church formerly conducted meetings at this point, but has removed to Five Mounds.

Wm Cowgill (now Altoona) Lodge No. 118, A. F. & A. M., was organized in October 17, 1872. A fire destroyed all records, jewels and paraphernalia in 1879, and the lodge has since been unable to replace them. It has now a membership of twelve, and the following officers: T. F. C. Dodd, W. M.; George East, S. W.; W. B. Ladd, J. W.; J. Orr, secretary; C. Streets, Treasurer. Meetings are on Saturday before full moon.

The Odd Fellows had a lodge at this place, until the loss of their hall in the fire of 1879, when they surrendered their charter. An attempt was recently been made to organize a lodge of Knights of Honor, but was not successful.

The flouring mill on the Verdigris, now operated by Brown & Orr, was built in 1870-71, by Spencer Bros. It has four run of buhr-stones, moved by a turbine water wheel. Its capacity is one hundred barrels of flour per day, of twenty-four hours. The buildings and machinery are valued at $8,000.

The steam saw-mill, located in the timber near the Verdigris, is a portable one, and has been in use near Altoona for twelve years. In 1880 it was purchased by Z. A. Benell, for $1 000, and completely refitted. It is now valued at $3,200. Power is furnished by an engine of twenty-five horse-power.

The town now has a population of 300, and the following industries: general stores, 2; groceries, 3; drug stores, 1; hardware, 1; hotels, 2; doc ors, 3; dentists, 2; wagon shops, 1; blacksmiths, 2. With the completion of the new railway, Altoona bids fair to become a live town of considerable size.

SMITH COUNTY.

SMITH County, named in honor of Major Nathan Smith, of the Second Colorado Cavalry, who was killed at the battle of the Blue, is on the northern tier of counties, bordering on Nebraska on the north, and is the sixth east of the Colorado and Kansas dividing lines. Its soil, like that of contiguous counties in Kansas and Nebraska, is very easily worked, absorbs moisture readily, and retains it remarkably. What Prof. Hayden says of the adjacent valley applies with equal force to Smith County and the entire region watered by the Solomon River: "The soil is one of the best in the world, and its fertility can never be exhausted until every hill of which it is composed is entirely worn away. Where the ground is cultivated, the most copious rains soon percolate through the soil, which in its lowest depth retains it like a sponge. Even the unbroken prairie absorbs much of the heavy rains that fall, and when droughts come the moisture comes up from below by capillary attraction." Eighty-five per cent. of the land of Smith County is upland, and the remaining fifteen per cent. is bottom; two per cent. forest (Government survey), and ninety-eight per cent. prairie. The average width of the bottom lands of the Solomon River is five miles, and the general surface of the uplands undulating, with bluffs in the neighborhood of the principal streams. The timber of the county, principally cottonwood, elm, oak and cedar, forms narrow borders on the banks of the Solomon and its tributaries. In the southern and central portions of the county limestone of an excellent quality abounds; and in the northern section an inferior article of sandstone. Gypsum of good quality has been discovered, but not in large quantities. Frequent experiments have been made to find stone coal, but it has not yet been developed sufficiently to pay.

The principal stream in Smith County is the Solomon River, which flows in a southeasterly direction. It has many tributaries, the Cedar, East Cedar, Beaver, East Beaver, and other streams flowing south and southeast; Oak, Middle Oak, West Oak and Possum Creek flowing southeast. In addition to these, two arms of White Rock Creek flow in a southwesterly direction. Smith County is well supplied with springs, and a superior quality of well water is obtained at depths varying from fifteen to one hundred feet.

The first settlers in what is now Smith County were John Rhodes, J. K. Belk, Ambrose Oldaker, and B. F. Myers, J. H. Johnson, J. C. Morrisson, who came in the fall of 1870. The following season they were followed by Thomas Lane and Authony Robertson, who brought their families; H. H. Granholz, H. Menshoff, L. Binman, J. Rider, J. Eldredge, Thomas Decker, James H. Decker, T. J. Burrow, H. F. Albright, Charles Stewart, T. J. Tompkins, W. M. George, Fred. W. Wagoner. The first stone house erected was built in 1877, by Colonel Campbell. The first woman who settled in Smith County was Mrs. Mary Peebles, who became a resident of Lincoln Township in the fall of 1870. Ambrose Oldaker, probably the first settler in the county, who made a home on Oak Creek, twelve miles north of Cawker City, removed to Washington Territory in 1880, where he now resides. The first homesteader in the county was Christopher Noggels, who took a claim on Beaver Creek in June, 1871. The first marriage in the county was T. J. Burrow and Miss R. J. Dunlap. The ceremony was performed in Smith Centre Township, Oct. 16, 1872, by Rev. H. F. Albright. During the same year the following marriages took place in the county: George Boyd and Inez Follon; Charles Stewart and Ida Keeler; T. J. Tompkins and Flora I. Potter; John Dillon and Julia Ann Walling.

The first birth in the county was a son of Christopher Noggels, in Centre Township, who was born Aug. 25, 1871. The first grocery store was established in Houston Township in the spring of 1871, by C. P. Newell. Fred W. Wagner, of Germantown, opened a general merchandise store in April, 1871. The following year he became the first Postmaster at Germantown and still retains the office. The first postoffice established in Smith County was at Cedarville, in July, 1871. John Johnston was first Postmaster. He was succeeded by James Johnson, who continues in charge of the office.

Mrs. W. M. Skinner taught the first school in the county, at Gaylord, in the fall and winter of 1871. E. M. Burr, who was the first attorney located in the county, taught school in Smith Centre in the fall of 1872. After teaching a few weeks his law practice claimed his full time, and Miss Alice Campbell was engaged and finished the school term for him. She occupied the building still known as the old court-house.

There are twenty-six post-offices in Smith County, as follows: Anderson, Andrew, Beaver, Cedarville, Clifford, Cora, Corvallis, Covington, Crystal Plains, Custer, Eagle Rapids, Gaylord, Germantown, Harlan, Judson, Lebanon, Ohio, Oriole, Smith Centre, Stone Mound, Stuart, Sweet Home, Twelve-Mile and Tyner. With a daily railroad mail traversing the southern edge of the county by the Central Branch Road, and mails from the offices located on the railroad, the county enjoys excellent mail facilities.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION AND ELECTIONS.

Smith County, containing 900 square miles, was organized in 1872, with a population of 3,876. The county seat was first located at Cedarville, in the southeastern portion of the county. It may be stated in this connection that there has never been a licensed saloon within the borders of Smith County.

CHURCHES AND NEWSPAPERS.

The Congregationalists and Methodist Episcopals are the most numerous sects in the county, but the United Brethren, Lutherans, Baptists, Roman Catholics and Presbyterians also have church organizations. School-houses preceded church edifices in Smith County, and religious services were held for several years in school buildings and private dwellings. The Congregationalists erected a stone church building in Centre Township, in 1876. The same year the United Brethren, Methodists and the Lutherans erected churches in various parts of the county. At the present time the several churches in the county make the following showing as to organizations and membership: Baptist—organizations, 4; membership, 205 Roman Catholics—organizations, 1; membership, 82; value of church property, $500. Congregational—organizations, 6; membership, 180; value of church property, $3,900. Methodist Episcopal—organizations, 20; membership, 380. Presbyterian—organisations, 4; membership, 85. The Lutherans have one church in the northwest portion of the county, with a membership of 65, and church property valued at $700. The United Brethren have several organizations, with headquarters at Harlan, where they have a fine educational institution.

The Smith County Pioneer, the oldest paper in the county, was started at Cedarville in November, 1872, by Dr. W. D. Jenkins, and was edited successively by Dr. Jenkins, Lew Plummer and Mark J. Kelley. The office was sold to Levi Morrill in 1873 and removed to Smith Centre, who continued its publication until October, 1874, when it was sold to W. D. Jenkins, Jr., who continued its publication several years. In 1878 the paper was enlarged and the name changed to the Kansas Pioneer. In 1880 the Pioneer and Press were consolidated, and Dr. Neely Thompson became the manager, the paper being Republican. It has now passed into the hands of R. D. Bowen and its politics changed to Democratic.

The Cedarville Democrat was started in August, 1881, as a Democratic paper, by M. M. Wachter. F. E. Baker purchased a half interest and the Democrat was then published as a half Greenback and half Democratic journal. Baker soon bought out his partner's interest and removed the material to Smith Centre and changed the name to the Record. It was run as a Greenback organ until Jan. 20, 1882, when E. M. Burr became sole owner and changed it to a Republican journal. Early in February, 1883, G. L. Burr purchased the establishment and continues the publication of the Record as a Republican paper, strong in the advocacy of prohibition and low salaries for public officers.

The Gaylord Herald was established by J. W. McBride (now of Beloit) in August, 1879. April 28, 1880, Webb McNall, the present publisher, became the proprietor, and has published a bright, newsy Republican journal. The Herald has a large circulation, and is one of the official organs of Smith County.

The Harlan Advance, established in the spring of 1882, principally to advance the interests of Gould College, located in the same village, has outgrown the intentions of its founder and become, under the local management of W. D. Lane, an excellent home and news paper. The Advance is now a twenty-column paper and its subscription price is $1.25 per annum.

SCHOOL AND OTHER STATISTICS.

The first school-houses erected in Smith County were as follows: District No. 4 built a stone house on the town site of Smith Centre, in 1873; German Township, in August, 1873; at Cedarville, in Harvey Township, a school-house was erected in 1872 at a cost of $1,700. (This district has twice lost school-houses by fire, and each time erected better and more expensive houses than the one lost. The last loss occurred in the winter of 1881 and was the work of an incendiary. The present school building cost $2,800). No. 9, in Houston Township, erected a house in Gaylord in 1872; Lincoln Township, No. 24, built in July, 1873; Oak Township, No. 34, in 1873.

In 1878 the number of organized school districts in the county numbered ninety-seven, with a school population of 2,864. The average salary then paid teachers, per month, was $20.38 for males, and $16.71 for females. The total number of school-houses, forty-one; log, thirty-one; frame, two; brick, one; stone, seven; and the valuation of school property, $9,600.

In 1879 the number of school districts was 118; school population, 4,448; number of teachers employed, 100; average salary paid teachers, per month, $21.02 for males, and $16.59 for females. Thirty school-houses were built during the year. Estimated value of school property, $12,478.

In 1880 the number of school districts was 123; school population, 4,835; number of teachers employed, 157; average salary paid teachers per month, $21.15 for males, and $18.56 for females; number of school-houses built during the year, twenty-nine; estimated value of school buildings, $16,180; total school expenditures for the year, $10,029.34. The United States census returns show the total population of the county in 1880, 13,904.

In 1881-'82 the reports show 123 school districts; there are 118 school-houses in the county—eight log, eleven stone, thirty-six frame and sixty-three sod; thirteen of the frame and two of the stone houses are furnished with patent desks. Teachers employed, holding first grade certificates, four males and two females; second grade, nineteen males and thirty-five females; third grade, thirty males and thirty-five females; total number employed, 125; average salary of teachers per month, for males, $18.42; for females, $17.30; amount received for school purposes in the county for the year 1881, $16,543; paid out for the same period, $12,502.26. With another season of prosperity like that of 1882 the school interests of the county will be vastly benefited, both in the quality of the buildings and the pay of teachers. The friends of education in the county have courageously labored in the past under many discouragements. In 1882 two districts have expended $6,000 for school buildings. The average pay of teachers in 1882 was $19 per month for males and $18 for females. Four months' schools were taught. The County Institute commenced August 7 and continued four weeks. It was largely attended.

Since the first settlement in 1870 the growth of Smith County has been marvelous as the following figures prove: Population in 1870, 66; in 1875, 3,876; increase in five years, 3,810; population in 1878, 8,315; increase in eight years, 8,249. The national census of 1880 shows a population of 13,904, an increase since the first settlers came in, twelve years since, of 13,838! The population of the county entitles it to two members of the Legislature. The increase in acreage of field crops from the first settlement to the present time shows that the labors of the people have kept pace with the growth of population. In 1872 the acreage in corn, wheat, rye, barley, prairie meadow, prairie pasture, sorghum, oats, broom corn, etc., amounted to 5,310 acres. The latest returns show an acreage of 69,310.

Aside from a few grist and saw mills, the manufacturing interests of the county are inconsiderable, and the people understand that their great dependence is in agriculture, cattle and the dairy.

The statistics for 1882 make the following showing: Number of acres in cultivation, 341,304; valuation, $1,831,047. Number of acres sown in fall wheat in 1881, 5,368; rye, 5,626. Number of horses, 5,046; mules, 558; cows, 3,982; other cattle, 6,113; sheep, 2,659; swine, 20,286. Fruit trees, bearing: 320 pear, 12,851 peach, 1,017 plum, 390 cherry, 23,571 apples. Artificial forests, trees one year old and over: 273 acres walnut, 49 acres maple, 74 acres honey locust, 1,044 acres cottonwood, other varieties, 2,167 acres. Total population of the county in 1882, 12,870.

There are four excellent grist-mills in the county, all located on the Solomon River, owned by Wilson & Son, Excelsior Mills, Keeler & Son, and Bougman & Tally. Capital invested, $15,300. Value of products annually estimated at $20,000.

Value of church buildings and grounds in the county estimated at $7,500. The United Brethren, Congregationalists, German Lutherans, Methodist Episcopals and German Baptists all have church buildings.

SMITH CENTRE.

This town was made the seat of justice of the county by vote of the people in November, 1872, soon after its organization. It is located near the geographical center of the county, and is a thriving business town of 450 population. Smith Centre emerged from insignificance when the county-seat question was settled in her favor, and since that time has had a steady, healthy growth. The first sermon preached in the village was by Rev. R. B. Foster, of Osborne City, in 1871. The same year Rev. H. F. Albright organized the first church in the town. In 1872 Mr. E. M. Burr commenced a term of school, but other engagements prevented his giving it personal supervision, and Miss Alice Campbell finished out the term in what is known as the old court-house building. The earliest settlers in the town were A. J. Watson, Wait George, A. J. Smith, Henry Pugh, W. D. Jenson, R. K. Smith, Pleasant Hodgson, W. A. Garrison, J. M. Stevens (who started the first blacksmith shop). W. M. George was the first Postmaster—appointed in the summer of 1872. In 1878 Mr. George died, and the present incumbent, R. A. Chandler, was appointed.

A. J. Allen opened the first store in the town in 1872. Colonel F. Campbell, now a resident of Kirwin, started the second store and erected on his homestead, in Centre Township, the first stone house built in the county. E. M. Burr, the first lawyer to settle in Smith Centre, arrived in 1872. The same year came Dr. Traverse, the pioneer physician. The first public school-house in the township was a stone structure erected in 1873. The town has always been supplied with excellent schools and good houses since the early times. The first marriage in the township took place Oct. 16, 1872—Mr. Thomas J. Burrow to Miss R. J. Dunlap. The first birth in the township was a son of Christopher Noggels—born Aug. 25, 1871. The first hotel was opened by W. M. George, the Postmaster, who also kept a stock of groceries.

The Smith Centre Town Company was incorporated in September, 1871, with a capital stock of $12,000—120 shares of $100 each. The charter members were: J. W. Raynolds, of Belleville, Republic County; R. A. Wilson, Dr. Bell, W. E Stone, W. A. Garretson. A portion of the company resided in Smith County and the remainder in Jewell. J. W. Raynolds was the first President, W. A. Garretson the first Secretary, and R. A. Wilson the first Treasurer. In the spring of 1872 John W. George, of Jewell City, was chosen President. The assessments paid by the stockholders amounted to about $35 per share. The money thus raised was partly disbursed in the county-seat contest, in which Smith Centre was the successful candidate. The remaining funds were used in erecting buildings, one of which was donated to John Stevens for a blacksmith shop. A second building was donated to the county, and is still used as a court-house.

During the year 1873 it was discovered that the town company, as such, could not lawfully perfect titles to land, and the corporation was dissolved. The land, consisting originally of a whole section, was taken up by parties interested under the homestead law, except one quarter-section, which was reserved as a town site, under the town-site act, and the title was perfected in 1875.

Smith Centre has five stores for the sale of general merchandise, two hardware stores, two agricultural implement stores, two banks, three groceries, two drug stores, three hotels, one boot and shoe store, one furniture, one millinery, four blacksmiths, one wagon-maker, two livery and sale stables, two newspapers, two restaurants, one billiard room, two meat markets, seven lawyers and two physicians.

Cora, in Pawnee Township, fourteen miles northeast of Smith Centre, on Pawnee Creek, has one store, postoffice, blacksmith and wagon shop, a good school-house, and the Congregationalists have a church organization. S. M. Cupp taught the first school in the winter of 1871-'72. Julius Nelson, Geo. Buckley, Mat. Duckworth, were the first settlers. The earliest mails brought to Smith County were brought from Washington, Washington County, by private parties, in July, 1871.

The earliest settlers were John and James J. Johnston, John T. Morrison, Andrew and Joseph Marshall, A. H. Black, B. J. and B. S. Bottomley. The first birth in Cedarville was a child of Ida Chase, in 1871. The first marriage was Charles Stewart to Ida Keeler, in 1872. The following year James Phillips and Miss M. Simmons were married. The first death was Geo. H. Smith, in the summer of 1872.

The first town officers were: George R. Hunt, Trustee; D. H. Crosby, Clerk; Charles E. Newman, Justice. The first school-house was erected in Cedarville in 1872. The first school was taught in the spring of 1872, in a dwelling house, by Mrs. J. D. Loucks. The Rev. Mr. Blackstock preached the first sermon in the fall of 1871, in Mr. Morrison's dwelling house. There is no church building in the town, but the Methodists and Congregationalists have organizations and church services. Rev. L. M. Bonnett preaches every four weeks to the Congregationalists, and Rev. Thomas Muxlow every two weeks to the Methodists. The Methodists have one of the oldest organizations in Northwestern Kansas, having obtained a charter from the Secretary of State in June, 1872. The first Trustees were: R. F. Clark. A. Marshall, E. P. Curtis, John T. Morrison and James H. Johnston. The town will have expended, when their present school building is completed, $6,000 for school-houses. The original Postmaster, John Johnston, appointed in 1871, retained the place until 1873, when he resigned in favor of his brother James, who still holds the office. Samuel and Berry Baker built, in 1874, the first grist-mill, now owned by Cox & Muxlow. It is located on the north branch of the Solomon. The first store was opened in 1871, by John Johnston. It is now owned by James and Allen Johnston. There is one other general merchandise store in Cedarville; one drug store, one livery stable, one hotel, one billiard hall, two blacksmith shops. The population numbers 100. The town is located on a slightly rolling prairie.

WILLIAM H. COX, proprietor of the Excelsior Water Flouring Mills at Cedarville, erected the mills in October, 1877. The main building is 28 x 40 feet, and two and a half stories high above the basement. Its capacity is 160 bushels of wheat in twenty-four hours, and 100 bushels of corn in the same time. They have eight-feet head. The mills were built at a cost of $6,000. He came to Dickinson and Jewell counties in an early day, and in June, 1873, came to Cedarville. He has 480 acres of fine agricultural land, 100 of which is cultivated. JOHN JOHNSTON, County Treasurer, came to Holton, Jackson Co., Kan., in the fall of 1868, and worked at any kind of work he could find to do the first year. He then clerked in a general store until the spring of 1871, when he came to edCarville, Kan., bringing $50 worth of goods with him in a small box, and sold the first goods in the place, continuing alone in business for nearly a year. He was appointed the first Postmaster, July 3, 1871, the salary being fixed at $12 per annum. At that time there was not a white man's habitation to be seen in any direction. His brother, J. H. Johnston, and himself erected a log cabin and covered the top with earth, using it for a dwelling, store and postoffice. They bought their goods at Waterville, 150 miles off, and hauled them with horse teams. J. H. Johnston, after a year's time, became a partner, and continued in business until the fall of 1877, when John Johnston bought the whole interest and continued until September, 1882, when he sold out to his brothers. He was elected County Treasurer in the fall of 1881, and since October, 1882 has had charge of the office. He has served as School and Township Treasurer, and Notary Public for the past ten years. He was born in Carroll County, Ohio, Jan. 19, 1847; moved with parents to Hocking County in 1851, and lived there until he came to Kansas. J. H. JOHNSTON & BRO., dealers in a general line of merchandise, grain, etc., began trade in Cedarville in September, 1882, J. H. Johnson beginning on only a few dollars' capital. He took charge of Cedarville postoffice Dec. 22, 1875, and has served as Postmaster ever since. When he first began trade they were obliged to haul their goods 150 miles with a horse team from Waterville, Kan. Was first County Clerk of Smith County by appointment from the Governor.

KING & WINTON, dealers in general merchandise, dry goods, groceries and queensware, began trade Jan. 1, 1883. Their storerooms are 25 x 40 feet, and they carry an average stock of $3,500. They also deal in live stock and all kinds of grain, doing a general shipping business by the car load. Samuel G. King first came to Kansas in March, 1876, and settled on some land twelve miles northwest of Cedarville, where he followed agriculture until he became interested in trade. He was born in the corner of Jay County, Ind., near the line of Delaware and Randolph counties, May 27, 1842, and lived there until he enlisted, in August, 1861, in Co. E, Thirty-sixth Indiana Volunteer Infantry. He participated in all the battles of his command, including 200 engagements; was mustered out in October, 1864; moved to Holt County, Mo., the same year; followed agriculture and merchandising, and was in the employ of the railroad company; also farmed five years. Soon afterward he began clerking in a wholesale drug store, continuing two years; then in a wholesale grocery house the same length of time; then engaged as traveling salesman one year for the same firm, and finally located as above stated.

HARLAN.

The village of Harlan, lying southwest of Gaylord, in Duston Township, was laid off in 1877, and named in honor of Judge Harlan, a respected citizen of the county. A. L. Bailey and W. S. Bradford became the owners of the town site by purchasing the land from John White. F. R. Gruger opened the first store in 1878. The first sermon was preached in Harlan in 1878, by Rev. Mr. Thompson, a Congregational minister. There is but one church organization in town—the United Brethren, who hold their meetings in the chapel of Gould College. The church has forty-five members. A. L. Bailey was the first Postmaster in the town, appointed in 1877. He was succeeded in 1881 by the present Postmaster, Joseph Himes. The principal houses of the village are built of beautiful magnesian limestone, obtained from the bluffs within a half mile of town. Harlan contains two general merchandise stores, one grocery, one printing office, one hotel, one blacksmith shop, one livery stable, one drug store, one hardware store, one insurance agency, one physician, five preachers, one coal dealer, one grain buyer. The first newspaper issued in Harlan was the Independent. After publishing the paper one year in that place, Messrs. Garretson & Topliff removed their office to Kirwin, where the paper is still published. The Harlan Advance was established in February, 1882, by Rev. A. W. Bishop, president of Gould College. The main object was to secure a college organ, but during the past few months the paper has been enlarged and the services of a local editor and business manager (W. D. Lane) secured, who has made the Advance an excellent home journal. The chief glory of Harlan lies in the fact that Gould College, under the patronage of the United Brethren Church, is located in the town. Under the wise management of President Bishop, the institution is taking a front rank among the educational institutions of Kansas. The number of students enrolled the present year (1882) far outnumbers that of the preceding year. The population of Harlan is about one hundred.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

REV. A. W. BISHOP, A. M., President of Gould College, and editor of the Harlan Advance, was born in Ashland County, Ohio, Oct. 27, 1852. He received his collegiate education mainly at Oberlin, Ohio, paying his way by teaching school and working as a carpenter during the summer. In 1878, he graduated from Union Biblical Seminary, at Dayton, Ohio, and the same year was elected to the chair of Mathematics in Avalon College, Avalon, Mo. In the spring of 1881 he was elected the first President of Gould College, at Harlan, Kan., and is still filling that position. In February, 1882, he began the publication of the Harlan Advance, a paper devoted largely to the cause of higher education. The Advance has attained a large circulation, and is growing rapidly into popular favor. Mr. Bishop is a minister of the United Brethren Church, and a member of the West Kansas Conference.

TRUMAN KEELER, firm of Keeler & Son, dealers in general merchandise, opened trade in 1876, with a stock of $1,000. Erected a stone and wooden store in 1879, 22 x 60 feet, two stories high. They now carry a stock of $5,000, in two stores, one of which is kept at Harlan, two miles north. They built a flouring mill in 1874, 25 x 38 feet, of cut stone, three stories high. Capacity, 300 bushels in twenty-four hours. There is thirteen feet head. Mills built at a cost of $7,000. They have 1,200 acres of fine agricultural land, 300 acres of which is cultivated. In 1882 they raised 2,800 bushels of wheat and 4,000 bushels of corn. Average wheat was twenty-three bushels per acre; corn averaged fifty bushels. They settled at Eagle Rapids, in January, 1871. There were only six settlers in the vicinity. Buffaloes, antelope, deer and other wild game were in great abundance, and could be shot down within a few rods of the humble habitations of the early pioneers. Mr. Truman Keeler was born in Essex, Chittenden Co., Vt., March 18, 1813. In 1828, family moved to St. Albans, Vt., and in 1834 he came West to grow up with the country, locating in Orleans County, N. Y. Stewart, of Eagle Rapids, Kan. James A. has one daughter, Edna A. He is a member of the first two branches of Masonic order. The postoffice was established in 1879. Mr. Truman Keeler has been Postmaster since that time.

MARSHALL COUNTY.

TOPOGRAPHY AND GEOLOGY.

MARSHALL COUNTY is in the first tier of counties south of Nebraska, and the fourth, west of the Missouri River. It is bounded on the north by Gage and Pawnee Counties (Nebraska); on the east by Nemaha County; on the south by Pottawatomie and Riley Counties; and on the west by Washington County.

Geological formations in Marshall County are most apparent in the hills and bluffs along the Big and Little Blue Rivers, that divide the uplands from the river valleys. These hills and bluffs are filled with an endless variety of building stone, the finest among which is the magnesia limestone, which can be readily modeled into any shape by sawing or cutting, and is susceptible of receiving a fine, smooth polish. The Marshall County limestone is of superior quality, quarrying in massive blocks, and is almost entirely free from petrifications. Other varieties of building stone are found in every portion of the county. The magnesia limestone, as found in this county, weighs 144 pounds per cubic foot, when dry, and lies in courses from twenty inches to three feet in thickness, or averaging two feet three inches. Gypsum, in apparently inexhaustible quantities, is found and utilized in the vicinity of Blue Rapids. Vast beds of gypsum of as fine a quality as any of that from which the plaster of Paris which come from Nova Scotia, is prepared, are found at different points along the Blue River. Although strong indications of coal have been discovered within the past few years, there are, as yet, no mines in operation, though several attempts have been made by sinking shafts in different parts of the county.

The Big Blue River runs across the county from north to south, nearly in the longitudinal centre, and has an average width of one hundred and thirty feet. Owing to the altitudinal change in the contour of the county from north to south, the Blue has a water-power unequaled elsewhere in the State. The Blue valley is noted as one of the most beautiful and fertile in the West, and the traveler is charmed by its lovely landscape and delighted with its innumerable springs of pure cold water that gush forth from the bluff sides that confine its waters. The Blue runs parallel with the Missouri River, at a distance of about one hundred miles from the latter, and empties into the Kansas or Kaw at Manhattan, about sixty miles south of the northern Marshall County line.

The Little Blue, about one-half the size of the Big Blue, enters the county near the southwestern corner. It comes in from the northwest and empties into the Big Blue two miles above Blue Rapids.

The Red Vermillion is the next largest tributary; it comes in from the eastern part of the county, and empties into the Blue four miles below Irving. Smaller tributaries empty into the Blue from the west, among which are Deer Creek, Horse Shoe Creek, Hop Creek, Fawn Creek and Game Fork. From the east, Mission, Lees', Bridges', Spring and Elm Creeks. With all these water courses and numerous smaller tributaries, this county is one of the best in the State for its water privileges.

Along the banks of all the streams are found bodies of timber that embrace all the varieties in this part of the State. There is more timber in this county to-day than there was when the buffalo wandered unmolested over its fertile prairies. Either natural or planted young forest groves are to be seen in all parts of the county, and in a very few years scarcity of timber will not be known.

The bottom lands are about twenty per cent; the uplands, eighty per cent; forest, three per cent; and prairie ninety-seven per cent. Average width of river bottoms, one mile. The general surface of the county is undulating along the banks of the Big and Little Blue and large streams. The general contour of the country is diversified by hills and bluffs, and back from these the surface becomes more rolling. These picturesque, rounded, grass-covered hills, with now and then a bold promontory or precipitous bluff, or towering, overhanging cliff, meet the eye in every gentle curve of the river as it meanders through the county, and form a most beautiful landscape.

The latitude and longitude combine to render this one of the healthiest sections in the State. The undulating upland, broken bluffs, rolling second bottoms and not too wide stretches of deep, rich, level first bottom, along the streams that so rapidly flow over rock and gravel beds, secure unsurpassed drainage and entire freedom from malaria-producing miasma.

GENERAL PRODUCTS.

The staple product of the soil is corn; from thirty to ninety bushels to the acre being raised, according to location, cultivation and season. Owing to the amount of lime found in the soil, the cereals, wheat in particular, prove especially sure of producing abundant crops. Wheat frequently yields upwards of thirty bushels per acre, with only ordinary tillage. Oats, rye, barley and buckwheat do well, while millet, hungarian, herd-grass and clover satisfy the expectations of the most sanguine. Vegetables, as Irish and sweet potatoes, cabbages, turnips, beets, onions, carrots, grow and mature to perfection. Fruit in all its varieties—apples, pears, plums, peaches and cherries—is grown in profusion. Fine young fruit-orchards are to be seen all over the county, and it is estimated that from this time forward enough fruit will be raised to supply home use, and soon a surplus for distant markets. The live-stock industry is carried on with most gratifying results. The dry, bracing climate and the universally undulating surface of the county, with the absence of lakes, ponds, marshes and other features that generate malaria, together with the perfection of the grain fed, the nutrition of the native grasses that cover the whole face of the county, and the purity of the water, give Marshall County special advantages in stock raising. Sheep raising is carried on extensively, and a good home market for wool is found at the Blue Rapids Woolen Mills.

Marshall County has been, and will always continue to be, one of the leading counties in Northern Kansas.

EARLY HISTORY.

Thirty years ago, there was scarcely a vestige of civilization in what is now known as Marshall County. For untold ages its prairies had been covered with a waving sea of wild grasses; vast herds of buffalo had, for numberless years, wandered almost unmolested across them. Nothing disturbed its solitude, save occasional bands of nomadic savages, in search of prey or plunder, and the hardy frontiersman who is always found far in advance of the onward march of civilization,—thus proving that it could not always remain a terra incognita.

Major Stephen H. Long crossed that part of Kansas now known as Marshall County, in command of an expedition from Pittsburgh to the Rocky Mountains, during the years 1819 and 1820. Gen. Fremont, on his expedition to the Rocky Mountains in 1842 or 1844, passed through this part of the State, and mentions, in his travels, passing a train or two of emigrants, en route to Oregon. In 1847, John Smith, the Mormon apostle, with his band of followers from Illinois, opened his way through this country, crossing the Big Blue River at the old "Mormon," "Independence," or "California crossing," six miles below the present town of Marysville. For two years these exiled "Latter Day Saints" passed along this route by the thousands, their numbers being greatly augmented, in 1849, by the gold discoveries. In 1849, Lieutenant Standberry surveyed the route commonly known as the "Military trail," from Fort Leavenworth to the great Salt Lake, and located a more practicable crossing of the Big Blue, six miles above the old ford.

In 1849, during the excitement caused by the discovery of gold in California, Francis J. Marshall, from Weston, Missouri, came out and established a ferry on the Big Blue, at "Independence crossing." During the season of travel he remained there, but returned to Missouri every winter. In the spring of 1851 he moved his ferry, and established it at the upper crossing, at what is now known as Marysville. From this on, until 1854, during the winter Marshall was in Missouri, and in summer on the banks of the Blue. Here he located his ferry about one hundred yards above where the bridge now spans the river, and, about an equal distance below, built a row of rude log cabins; established a blacksmith shop, and opened, with a small stock of goods, a "general store," in which low grade tobacco and rot-gut whisky predominated, and traded with the Indians.

In the spring of 1854, James McCloskey, a Scotchman by birth, who had been an Indian trader among the Sioux on the Upper Platte since 1839, and who had adopted the Indian habits, "came in this country with a half dozen other traders and their families, and decided to settle. The party was invited by Marshall to settle at Marysville. They also received an urgent invitation from Louis Tremble, a Pottawatomie half-breed, who had located a short time previously on the Vermillion, at the "Independence crossing," where he maintained a toll bridge, to settle near him. McCloskey and family located on the Big Blue near Marysville, while the balance of the party settled on the Vermillion.

Settlements were made in the southeastern part of the county on the banks of the Vermillion, early in the spring of 1855. Among the first white settlers were John D. Wells, one of the first County Commissioners, and his family, from Kentucky, who took up a claim near the present village of Barrett. A. G. Barrett, present County Treasurer, settled in the same vicinity, May, 1855. Among those who came in the same year and located in that vicinity were the Brockmeyer brothers, Joseph Langdon, Thos. Warren, H. Ashdown and the Farley brothers. These intrepid settlers and others formed thus the nucleus of a settlement of pioneers, that were foremost in the advancement of the county's best interests.

In March, 1857, probably the first settler in that section of the county now embraced within the limits of Center Township, and near the center of the county, was Smith Martin, who took up a claim and erected a cabin. Shortly after, others came in and began to make improvements. During the same year, Stearns and Wm. Reedy settled on and near the mouth of Coon Creek, in the southwestern corner of the county. Soon after, M. T. Bennett settled on Coon Creek a few miles above them, and during the next two years many others settled in the vicinity, making quite a neighborhood.

The northeastern section of the county was first settled in 1857, by Geo. Guittard and his sons, who located claims about two and one-half miles north of the present village of Beattie. In the same year, Ambrose, East, Martin and James Shipp, four brothers, settled south of the Big Blue River in what is now Blue Rapids Township, and but a short distance from the present village of Irving. Previous to this time, Samuel Smith settled near the eastern boundary of the county in what is now known as Noble Township, in 1855. In the same neighborhood, on the west fork of the Vermillion, Isaac Walker located a claim in 1856 or '57.

In the territory of what is now known as Blue Rapids City Township, settlements were made in 1857, on Elm Creek, by James Walter, M. L. Duncan and others. Wm. Thompson, afterwards Probate Judge, settled a short distance above the present town site of Blue Rapids, in 1858. About the same time Andrew Scott, Henry Miller and others, located on the north side of the river, while James Lane settled a few miles below at a point known afterwards as "Lane's Ford." James Parker and others came in and established a permanent neighborhood.

Settlements were made up and down the Big and Little Blue, also on Horseshoe, Spring, Walnut and other creeks, during the years 1858 and '59; so that in 1860, Marshall County was fairly launched upon the advancing wave of civilization, and was, in a measure, able to enjoy its legal, social and municipal regulations.

The first election in Marshall County was held at Marshall's upper crossing of the Blue, better known as Marysville, on March 31, 1855. The Kansas-Nebraska Act, the act providing for the organization of the Territories, conferred the right to vote at that, the first election, upon every "inhabitant" of the Territory otherwise qualified, who should be "an actual resident." No number of days or period of time of residence was required. The Pro-slavery party put a most liberal construction upon the law. Organizing in Missouri, large parties of men came to Kansas, many of whom had no intention of being inhabitants or residents of the Territory longer than it should be necessary to come to the designated place and vote.

The party which came to Marysville consisted of several hundred men, with wagons, horses, tents, camping equipments and provisions. No opposition was offered them, as there were only two men—G. H. Hollenburg and J. D. Wells—in Marshall County at that time belonging to the Free-state party. F. Marshall was elected as a member of the Territorial Legislature at that election.

At the election of the Territorial Legislature, October 5, 1857, the only Free-state vote in the county was cast by James White.

Lecompton Constitution (December 21, 1857).—Illegal elections and ballot-box stuffing of the present day can in no way be compared with the manner of conducting elections in the early days of Kansas, and in Marshall County in particular. The election to which we refer is the one that was to decide the fate of that relic of barbarism—the Lecompton Constitution. At this point on the overland trail a little colony of Southerners had congregated, ostensibly for the purpose of building up a town, but in reality to work in the interest of the Pro-slavery party. Marshall operated his ferry here under a charter received from the Territorial Legislature, in which he was allowed to charge the gold-seekers, Mormons, adventurers, and all Western pilgrims that crossed the Blue at that point, the sum of $5 per wagon. The adoption of the provisions of the Lecompton Constitution, among other things, was to vest Gen. Marshall with the high honors of Governor, and it was natural to expect that the Pro-slavery men in this section would take charge of the election. Three or four log cabins were all that showed that a settlement existed, but it was the only place of note in Northern Kansas at that date.

In the upper rooms of one of these cabins the polls were opened, by setting a soap box on the head of a whisky barrel as the receptacle for ballots. In case the above-mentioned soap box was filled with ballots, another box was to be substituted. A narrow staircase led to a hole in the ceiling, through which the voter would thrust his hand, holding a ticket, and yell out his name, or the first name he happened to think of, and then would immediately descend, to make room for the next man, absorb a sufficient quantity of "tarantula juice," conjure up a new name, and await his opportunity to vote again. Among the twenty-five or thirty voters present, there was a notable personage known by the sobriquet of "Shanghai"—probably so named from his personal appearance.

Long before half the day had passed, "Shanghai," who had become so thoroughly imbued with patriotism for his party, and whisky, that he could not keep a secret, sprang upon a whisky barrel and exclaimed that he had voted twenty-five times; was going to vote twenty-five times more, and would bet any man $100 that he had outvoted any one in the "outfit." Tradition states that the little band of Southern pilgrims stood by and listened with amazement. No one seemed willing to take up the challenge of the champion voter, and the matter was about to go by default, when it was accepted by one of the "pilgrims," the money put up, and a committee appointed to investigate. The result of the investigation showed that "Shanghai" was beaten, the challenged party having deposited nearly one hundred votes. It was also shown that he had possession of a St. Louis business directory, and that he was voting in alphabetical order, and had only got half way through the "A" list!

The voting continued briskly throughout the day, and when the shades of evening closed in upon them, the little Spartan band had rolled up a rousing majority of nearly 1,000 votes for the Lecompton Constitution!

Fourth of July Celebration.—The celebration of the eighty-sixth anniversary of American Independence occurred at Marysville July 4, 1862. All parts of the county were represented, and many attended from adjoining counties, making the attendance about 500 people, which was considered large at that time. As per programme, the people assembled at the old Methodist Episcopal Church, formed a procession, and with music marched to a grove on Spring Creek, where took place the reading of the Declaration of Independence, by Dr. J. H. McDougal. The orator of the day, Rev. Charles E. Parker, portrayed "the beauties of a Republican government, the blessings derived from our separation from the mother country, and the strength and virture of our Government to overcome all attempts to anarchy and despotism," ending with a eulogy on the State, and of Marshall County in particular. In the afternoon toasts were prepared by the toast-master, R. S. Newell, and responded to in an eloquent manner by prominent citizens present. Among the toasts offered was "The Union Forever," which was responded to by the entire assemblage, who arose to their feet and gave three cheers, with a "tiger" accompaniment. The festivities concluded with a ball in the evening.

Pioneer Reminiscences.—To preserve from oblivion the record of the first white settler who crossed Marshall County, and the second who located in the county, we present a few extracts from a sketch prepared by Hon. F. G. Adams, Secretary of the State Historical Society, in reference to James McCloskey:

"As early as in the year 1839, McCloskey came out from St. Louis and passed over the trappers' trail to the mountains, leaving the Missouri River at Independence, and crossing the Kansas River near the present site of Topeka. He crossed the Blue where, ten years later, Marshall put in his ferry. McCloskey was then accompanying the trading party of Bibile & Adams, having seven wagons loaded with Indian goods, and escorted by twelve men. The goods had been purchased of Benard Pratt, of St. Louis, and McCloskey went out as clerk, to look after the interests of Pratt in the sale of the goods, and to make returns thereof.

"The party established Fort Pratt, a trading post, three miles above Fort Laramie.

"McCloskey remained as a trader in the Indian country till, in 1854, he returned to take up his settlement on the Blue. When he returned, he brought with him quite a party of mountaineers beside. Among these was Changreau, who, with his family, took up his settlement with Louis Tremble, on the Vermillion, as did also Laroche, another of the same party.

"When our mountaineer, McCloskey, came in with his Sioux wife, on the 20th of November, 1855, and with his companions and their Sioux wives and children camped near Marshall's cabin, there were no other settlers in the neighborhood. Though nearly a year and a half had elapsed since the settlement of the Territory had begun, the rich and beautiful valley of the Blue had attracted no inhabitants to its borders. The enterprising and energetic ferry-man legislator, who had been here six years, was the only man who had come to stay.

"McCloskey, as he had made his trips to and from his trading posts among the Sioux, crossing the Blue, had determined that when he should quit his life in the wilderness he would take up his home on the Blue. He had intended, with the band of people he had brought in with him, to settle at the Big Spring, just below the Independence crossing. But no sooner had his party camped in the valley, than Tremble, the half-breed, living on the Vermillion, came and persuaded a portion of the party to settle on the Vermillion. He told them stories about the danger there was from the Kaws, and gave reasons why his own neighborhood was a place of greater security. These tales about the Kaws caused a number of the mountaineers to return at once. Thus McCloskey found himself alone with his family, and he made up his mind to settle near the ferry-man."

[It will be remembered that Marshall had given up his lower establishment two years before.]

"What had brought these mountaineers here with their Indian families to make their homes, surrounded as they knew they were to be by a community of white people?

"McCloskey says that they came in order that their children might learn the manners and customs of white people, and be educated. They had married Indian women in the Sioux country, actuated in a measure at least by motives of prudence and business economy. Safety, and the protection and promotion of their trade, required that they should marry and become members of a tribe. These family relations resulted in family ties which, once formed, were not easily broken. They became attached to their wives and children. Natural affection seems to become as strong in such relations as in those formed in the midst of civilization.

"Here are phases of human nature creditable in the highest degree to mountain white men who, like McCloskey, in their desire to secure to their Indian offsprings the benefit of education, civilization and refinement, are yet willing to take with them within the pale of civilization, their Indian wives, and to undergo all the embarrassments incident to such an anomalous relation in the midst of a cultivated community. The part which the wife performs in this change is alike creditable and certainly is conclusive of the fact that the retaining of some of the best qualities of human nature is not inconsistent with a savage birth and education.

"McCloskey sent his boys to the Iowa Indian Mission schools, in Doniphan County, and his girls to the Highland University, giving them all a good education. His eldest son, James, was for nine years, up to 1870, government interpreter at Fort Laramie, when he was killed by a man named William Boyer, who was hung for the crime. Henry had been interpreter at Fort Halleck. On his return home he was killed at Cottonwood Station. Charles, while at school at Highland, was accidentally killed by the discharge of a gun which he was taking from a wagon, while going on a hunt. Eda died at Highland, while attending school, at the age of fourteen. Julia, now aged twenty-six, is living in Nebraska. Monie-waka (Medicine Eagle), the mother of the children, died many years ago."

INDIAN OUTRAGES.

The oldest settlers in the Vermillion Valley say when they came there they found two families—the head of one a Sioux half-breed named Louis Tremble, whose wife was a full-blooded Sioux. The other family consisted of a Frenchman named Changreau and his wife, a Sioux woman; her sister, a girl of fifteen, and numerous small children. Tremble built a bridge across the Vermillion, and charged the Western pilgrims toll for crossing. Changreau opened a farm of about fifteen acres, raising vegetables and produce, which found a ready sale to the travelers.

The Kansas, or Kaw Indians, as they are now commonly called, are a branch of the Sioux, as are also the Otoes, Omahas and Iowas. The country embracing all of northeastern Kansas was occupied by the Kaws, when, in 1825, the Government opened negotiations with them for the purchase of a part of their territory. Between the Kaws and the Sioux, the parent tribes, there was an implacable hatred. Whenever the bands of the two tribes met, no matter where, there was war to the knife, and whoever was not killed, but captured, suffered death by torture the most cruel and devilish. "No Sioux or Kaw could meet each other and live." These two Sioux families were aware that they had located in the old territory of the Kaws, and that the residence of their perpetual foes was not far distant; but trusted to their neighbor Sioux for protection.

One spring day, while Changreau was in the field plowing, the house was suddenly surrounded by a band of mounted Indians, numbering a hundred or more. The women made an effort to conceal themselves, but failed. The Indians professed friendship, but helped themselves to everything that they fancied. After a reckless pillage, the chief suddenly seized the young girl, bound her to his pony, and mounting, they all disappeared.

Changreau, who was at once notified by his frantic wife, of what had occurred, suspected who the visitors were, and knowing that a fate worse than death would await the helpless prisoner, made a most pressing and urgent appeal to his white neighbors to go with him to the rescue. A few responded, and John D. Wells, and a few others, started with Changreau and followed the trail for many hours, when fearing an ambush, they turned back, with the exception of the Frenchman, who pushed on alone. Changreau followed the band for many days, until they camped on the Neosho River, near Council Grove. The Frenchman, who had kept himself concealed, saw that unusual preparations were being made, and then knew that the worst was to come. But what could one man do against one hundred? He had followed without hope, in utter despair as to the accomplishment of any good so far as the captive was concerned.

Soon after the lodges were erected the Indians had a feast, which they devoured with unusual despatch. Then the fires were relighted and made to burn with great brilliancy, lighting up the demoniacal group, and glaring in the darkness upon the distant and rounded hill slopes. At last Changreau saw an Indian, whom he had observed have his sister in his keeping, lead the helpless and devoted captive into the semicircle and bind her to a tree. The Frenchman could witness no more. Mounting his pony he turned his face upon the scene, and rode away in the darkness. He was soon miles and miles away, and all that night circled around the Indian camp, not seeing but knowing what was being transacted there. In the gray dawn of the morning he rode back to the camp, and creeping almost among the lodges, saw, seated by the waning camp fires, a row of Kaw hags, gibbering of what had happened, and as they talked they pointed their bony fingers at a figure, rendered indistinct through the smoke and darkness, bound to a tree trunk. As it grew lighter he saw that his sister was dead—her lifeless body covered with gore; whips and scourges lay at her feet, which showed that the girl had been whipped to death amid the war dances and battle orgies of the night. What he dreaded as the worst he now was sure of, and with his sad and fearful tale he returned to his family and hastened to move them to a place of greater safety.

Marshall County during the war was one of the border counties, and was several times the seat of panics arising from depredations committed by the Indians. Emigrants and ranchmen on the overland road were often driven in, as were also the new settlers, who had taken up claims west of Marshall County. At times apprehensions were felt that the Indians would extend their devastations to the older settlements, depleted as they were of able-bodied men, from enlistments in the army.

The first panic occurred in May, 1862, being occasioned by an Indian raid made into Washington County. In consequence, a detachment of recruits being raised at Marysville was sent out on a reconnoisance, but no Indians were seen.

The greatest panic was created in August, 1864, by a raid made by Indians on the Little Blue. On the 10th of August refugees from the scene of the massacre began to pour in at Marysville. Teams with wagons filled with settlers, station-keepers and ranchmen, with their families, flowed into the town, each bringing stories of the outrageous murders and torture of men, women and children, and beseeching aid in recovering their captured friends. The militia companies were immediately mustered, and after making hasty preparations, left for the scene of trouble. One company under the command of Capt. Frank Schmidt and one in charge of Lieut. McCloskey were under march the day after the first intelligence arrived. They were also joined by a company from the Vermillion, under Capt. James Kelley, and one from Irving, under Capt. T. S. Vaile. The Marshall County troops were under the command of Col. E. C. Manning. They were followed by a brigade expedition composed of portions of the Nemaha, Riley and Washington County regiments, under the command of Gen. Sherry, of Seneca. Both expeditions, after traveling and seeing evidences of the Indian warfare, but meeting with none, returned to their homes. Many of the refugees from the overland road and the counties west remained in Marshall County two or three weeks before returning to their homes.

CALAMITIES.

Grasshoppers.—The gryllus or grasshopper family made their appearance in Marshall County in great numbers, in August, 1867, and "destroyed every green thing." In August, 1868, they re-appeared in untold millions, remained three days and departed, doing comparatively but little damage.

In the summer of 1874 the grasshoppers again appeared in the county and commenced their ravages on corn and other products, and soon everything was destroyed. The green foliage on the trees and bushes was next attacked, and was as soon stripped. After eating every green thing they departed for realms unknown. The county was self-supporting during the plague.

Cyclone.—It is seldom that the historian is called upon to chronicle so sad and terrible an event as occurred in this part of the State, and in Marshall County in particular, three years ago. Many are the once happy homes that were rendered desolate and forsaken on that memorable occasion, by the most terrific of storms—the cyclone.

On the morning of May 30, 1879, the sun rose in all its magnificence, shedding its beautiful rays over the broad and fertile prairies, of which this county may well be proud, and showing in every beam the gladsome tokens of a pleasant day. During the afternoon of the same day, an observer might notice a change in the atmosphere, the temperature being cooler by some thirty degrees, and also see that a few dark and angry-looking clouds appeared in the northwest, while now and then sharp electric flashes lit up the horizon, intermingled with heavy claps of thunder. In a short time a severe storm was raging throughout the southern portion of the county, carrying death and destruction before it in some localities, while in other sections leaving but the ordinary traces of a severe storm.

Waterville.—It is undoubtedly a fact, that the destruction of property at this place was caused more by a severe wind blowing from the west towards the cyclone proper, which was at that time raging in Irving, and not by any cyclonal vortex or whirlpool. Although no loss of life was occasioned by the storm, the destruction of property was very great. In the vicinity of the city, near the mouth of Coon Creek, and on the Little Blue River, considerable timber was destroyed, undoubtedly by whirlwinds, the largest of these being not more than twenty yards in circumference, and remaining in contact with the earth for but a short distance. In the vicinity of the city about twelve buildings were destroyed—either wholly or partially—occasioning a loss of about $2,000. In the city, the damage done was necessarily greater, not less than fifty structures being more or less damaged. The estimated loss of property was placed at from $3,000 to $4,000.

> "By the peaceful silent river,
> Where the waters flow forever,
> Like fancies of a dream,
> Strode the Storm King in his power,
> In that sad and awful hour
> When death should reign supreme."

Irving.—At this place the storm seemed to concentrate its demoniacal strength and vent its fury upon, where had been a few hours before, one of the pleasantest little villages in the county. No tongue can tell nor pen portray the scene as the ruthless whirlwind swept its way through the devoted village. All was blackness, despair and desolation. It heeded not the groans of strong men, the shrieks of frantic women, nor the heart-rending screams of innocent children, but continued its way unmindful of the misery and woe it left behind.

The air was filled with flying debris, while now and then a house would be lifted bodily from the ground and carried through the air intact, then be dashed down and broken into a thousand pieces; limbs and trunks of trees, wagons, farm machinery, huge foundation stones, bricks, lumber, animals and human bodies were hurled through the air like feathers. The heart-rending cries of the wounded and dying, mingled with the terrific roar of the remorseless element, made it a scene never to be forgotten.

The whirlwind was seen approaching the town from the west, between 5 and 6 o'clock P. M., and presented the appearance of an immense funnel-shaped cloud, moving with great velocity.

Before the terrified inhabitants had realized the amount of damage done a second storm burst upon them, and although smaller than its predecessor, was more furious and destructive to property. To add to the horror of the situation, a deluge of rain descended shortly after the wind had ceased its work.

Messengers were immediately despatched to the surrounding towns for help, which soon arrived, and all through that dark and dreary night the melancholy task of gathering up the dead bodies and caring for the wounded was performed. Following is a list of the killed: Mrs. W. J. Williams, Mrs. Susan G. Buckmaster, Elizabeth Buckmaster, Alice Buckmaster, Laura Buckmaster, Celestia Buckmaster, Mrs. Emma Sheldon, Miss Fannie Swach, Mrs. Thomas Noark, Mrs. George Martin, Clinton Keeney, John Keeney, Mrs. Flora Keeney, Jacob Sabins. Number of wounded reported, thirty.

In Irving and vicinity about forty buildings were completely destroyed—in some cases not enough timber being left to mark the site of the structure. Among the property destroyed in the village was the Presbyterian Church—a large stone structure—with the exception of the steeple, which was left intact; the public school building—a brick structure—from which school had dismissed but an hour previous; a portion of the Wetmore Institute building; and two spans were taken out of the iron bridge across the Blue River—the approaches being left uninjured.

The burial services of most of the victims of the storm were held on the following Sunday, June 1. The occasion was an impressive one, rendered doubly so by the sad fate of the victims; the frantic outburst of grief displayed immediately after the storm, had given way to deep, quiet sorrow, which was visible in the tearless eyes and voiceless lips of the afflicted.

Frankfort.—Here the storm was very destructive to both life and property. An eye-witness of the storm, after acknowledging his utter inability to adequately describe the fearful spectacle, says: "At first there were cloudy pillars resembling smoke, afterwards assuming an inky blackness, all rolling, dashing and clashing with each other as if engaged in a furious battle, and to battle they were mustered, and onward and upward they rolled with a deafening roar, mowing everything down before them, scattering death and destruction in their course. The storm clouds were a grand scene to behold, but their work is fearful to contemplate."

To sum up, five persons were killed, as follows: James Downs, Mrs. James Downs, John Howe, Mrs. Henry Johnson, ———Grove. About fifty were wounded—some seriously, and property destroyed to the amount of $150,000.

At Blue Rapids and Vermillion the damage done was slight, compared to other localities, and no one injured.

WAR HISTORY.

Of all the troops that enlisted in the war of the Great Rebellion, from Marshall County, the larger proportion was from Marysville and Vermillion Townships. By an order from the War Department, Marysville was made the recruiting station for Washington and Marshall Counties. When the call for volunteers came, Marshall County proved itself for the Union almost to a man, and of the 450 voters in the county at that time, is credited with having sent nearly 400 men. Notwithstanding their good record they were called upon March, 1865, to fill a quota of thirty-one men. After the quota was complete it was found that the draft was illegal, and a portion of the men returned.

Company K, Ninth Kansas Cavalry—Was organized at Marysville in the summer of 1862, by Capt. Thomas M. Bowen, present U. S. Senator from Colorado. Under his command as captain and J. D. Wells as first lieutenant, the company, consisting of about eighty men, were ordered to join the regiment at Fort Leavenworth. From Fort Leavenworth the regiment was ordered to the seat of war in Missouri and Arkansas, and participated in all the important engagements that took place on the Arkansas River. After serving with distinction the company was mustered out of service at Duval's Bluff, Ark., and received their discharge at Fort Leavenworth in July, 1865. The company suffered severely during its service, only about one-third returning.

Company G, Thirteenth Kansas Infantry—Under command of W. S Blackborn, Captain, Thomas Hensel, First Lieutenant. Company G was recruited at Marysville in August, 1862. Vermillion Township furnished most of the recruits for this company. At Atchison the company joined their regiment and were immediately ordered to Maysville, Mo., but arrived too late to participate in an engagement. Their first battle took place at Cane Hill, Ark., and was followed by an engagement at Van Buren, Ark. Their operations throughout the war were confined to Missouri and Arkansas. The company was mustered out of service at Little Rock, Ark., in June, 1865, and was discharged at Fort Leavenworth, July 9, 1865. About one-half of the company returned to Marysville.

Company E, Thirteenth Kansas Infantry—Capt. Perry Hutchinson in command, was recruited at Marysville during the summer and fall of 1862. Marysville furnished about twenty-seven men to this company, the rest of the company being filled with recruits from different points in the county.

These companies were stationed at Marysville until September 8, 1862, when they were all ordered to Fort Scott via Atchison and Fort Leavenworth. They left Marysville on the date mentioned in company with a number of Otoe Indians who were under the command of Capt. D. W. Williams. Some three hundred men were in the ranks at that time.

Company H, Second Kansas Cavalry—was mustered into service at Kickapoo in the spring of 1862, under command of Capt. A. Gunther, and was composed entirely of recruits from Marshall and Washington Counties. After serving with distinction throughout the war it was mustered out of service March 18, 1865, at Little Rock, Ark.

Large numbers of recruits from Marshall County enlisted in other Kansas regiments and into regiments raised in other States. The Second, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Kansas regiments were represented by volunteers from Marshall County. By reference elsewhere it will be seen that Marshall, a frontier county at that time, gave a full share of troops to the Union army. The regiments in which Marshall County troops were chiefly enlisted were among those distinguished for active and effective service during the war.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION, ROSTER, ETC.

By the autumn of 1855 quite a settlement had been made in different parts of Marshall County, especially in the vicinity of Marysville, Barrett and Vermillion. It soon became apparent that a municipal organization was needed, and the county was duly organized in 1855. The voting strength of the entire county at that time was not over sixty.

The duties of the county officials were not very arduous at that time—the County Sheriff excepted. Alexander Clarke, the first Sheriff, was commissioned in October, 1855, but his career ended very suddenly by his being shot by a desperado whom he was endeavoring to arrest.

A county warrant was issued December 15, 1856, by James McCloskey in favor of Henry Adams and H. L. Kirk, of Atchison, for services rendered in laying out a Territorial road from Atchison to Marysville. This is the first county warrant issued in the county of Marshall. John D. Wells, M. L. Duncan and W. N. Glynn were the County Commissioners at that time. J. S. Magill was appointed Justice of the Peace during the same year.

The first District Court convened in Marshall County at Marysville in March, 1857. Judge Burrel, of the United States District Court, presided, and James McCloskey acted as Clerk. As no cases appeared on the docket, and no Grand Jury called, it looked as if the Court would have to adjourn without transacting any business, when a "case of conscience" came up, and the law was adapted to suit the case. It appears that D. C. Auld, an abolitionist, had obtained from the County Commissioners the appointment of Justice of the Peace for the Vermillion district. The Territorial laws, as passed by a Pro-slavery Legislature, required that officers, before assuming the duties of their office, should take an "iron-clad oath," which provided that the officer should support the United States Fugitive Slave Law. As this law was antagonistic to the principles of Auld he could not take it, and asked his friend McCloskey to intercede with Judge Burrel to qualify him, without having to take the oath. The Judge, being a Pennsylvanian, wrote out a Pennsylvania oath and administered it to Auld, who served out his term and retained his freedom to assist any fugitive slaves who, in their flight, happened to pass his way.

At the meeting of the County Commissioners at Palmetto, K. T., in June, 1856, it was decided "that the county of Marshall, for the convenience of transacting county business, and the execution of legal processes, be divided into two principal townships: "by a line beginning at the mouth of Elm Creek, where it empties into the Big Blue River, and running thence north to the base or meridian line. The section of country east of said line, in Marshall County, will henceforth be known as Vermillion Township, and that portion of the country lying west of the line, in Marshall County, known as Marysville Township."

At the same meeting an assessment was made at "fifty cents per head as poll tax," and one-sixth of one per cent. upon all property subject to taxation according to Territorial laws.

November 6, 1858, the County Commissioners divided the county proper into four townships, according to the following description:

Marysville Township.—Townships 1, 2, and north half of Township 3, Range 6; Townships 1, 2, and north half of Township 3, Range 7; west halves of Townships 1, 2, and northwest quarter of Township 3, Range 8.

Guittard Township.—East half of Townships 1, 2, and northeast quarter of Township 3, Range 8; Townships 1, 2, and north half of Township 3, Range 9; Townships 1, 2, and north half of Township 3, Range 10.

Blue Rapids Township.—South half of Township 3, Range 6; all of Townships 4 and 5, Range 6; south half of Township 3, Range 7; all of Townships 4 and 5, Range 7; southwest quarter of Township 3, and west half of Townships 4 and 5, Range 8.

Vermillion Township.—Southwest quarter of Township 3, east half of Townships 4 and 5, Range 8; south half of Township 3 and all of Townships 4 and 5, Range 9; south half of Township 3, and all of Townships 4 and 5, Range 10.

The voting places in the several Townships were designated as follows: Marysville Township, Marysville, or Palmetto; Guittard Township, Guittardville; Blue Rapids Township, at the house of William Thompson; Vermillion Township, at the house of Joseph Langdon.

What is now known as Washington County was at that time under the jurisdiction of Marshall County officials, and was termed Washington Township. A voting place was established at the house of M. L. Latt, on the mouth of Cottonwood Creek.

From 1869 up to 1883, the county has been sub-divided into municipal townships, as follows; Waterville Township, created February 15, 1869; Centre Township, created January 15, 1873; Elm Creek Township, created March 1, 1873; Rock Township, created April 9, 1873; Franklin Township, created April 19, 1873; Blue Rapids City Township, created August 24, 1870; Wells' Township, created April 17, 1874; Noble Township, created June 5, 1878; Murray Township, created January 9, 1880; Clear Fork Township, created July 13, 1880.

As early as 1859, efforts were made to move the county seat from Marysville to Sylvan, a new town, the location of which was selected on Section 25, Township 3, Range 8. The prime mover in this affair was T. S. Vaile, a member of the Free-state Territorial Legislature, from Marshall County. Marysville, at that time, was reputed as a Pro-slavery town, and Vaile had an act passed removing the county-seat to Sylvan. The only official business transacted at the new county-seat, was the canvassing of the vote of 1859. There being no house in Sylvan, the Commissioners, G. D. Swearingen, J. D. Brumbaugh, George G. Pierce and S. Ostrander, held their session in the house of G. D. Swearingen, a mile distant. By a vote of the people, Marysville was again made the county-seat.

Marysville enjoyed her supremacy until late in the fall of 1871, when the question again came before the people of the county. At that time there were in the county a number of good points for the location of the county-seat, and as each place claimed to possess better advantages than its neighbor, and had its ardent supporters, a bitter county-seat war broke out. Waterville, Blue Rapids and Frankfort, on the line of the C. B. Mo. Pacific Railroad that extends from east to west through the southern portion of the county, each offered special inducements; Centre Township had one strong point in its favor, it being the geographical centre of the county; Marysville, located on the St. Joe & Western Railroad in the northern part of the county, had its advantages.

In accordance with an order from the County Commissioners, an election was held November 14, 1871, and votes cast at the various voting precincts in the county, for the purpose of deciding the county-seat issue. The election resulted in Waterville receiving 345 votes; Blue Rapids, 485 votes; Frankfort, 586 votes; Centre, 95 votes; Marysville, 807 votes. Another election was ordered to be held, November 28, 1871, in which the contest was between Marysville and Frankfort; Waterville, Blue Rapids and Centre, withdrawing their claims. The result of the election showed that Frankfort received 1,078 votes, and Marysville 1,637 votes, which made Marysville the county seat of Marshall County.

COUNTY BUILDINGS, RAILROADS AND SOCIETIES.

Court House.—Early in the spring of 1860, the Southern Methodists built a frame church edifice, 24x36 feet, on lots 7 and 8, Block 43, on the corner of Fifth and Laramie streets. These lots were given to them by the Palmetto Town Company. Not being able to pay for the building, R. Y. Shibley and J. D. Brumbaugh, who had claims against the association, took possession, and without any process of law, moved it on Broadway. In July, 1862, they sold the building to the county to be used as a court house. Previous to this time, the county offices were located in different parts of the town. This building was used as a court house until 1870, when the District Court was held in Watterson's Hall.

In February, 1873, a contract was let to George F. Hamilton, by the township of Marysville, to build a new county court house, to be located at Marysville. The cost of the building was not to exceed $15,000, and it was to be completed in November, 1873, but owing to the usual delay, it was not finished until July, 1874. The building is a two story brick structure, 50x65 feet. The interior of the building contains on the first floor, a hall and six offices, occupied by county officials. The second floor is occupied by the court room and four offices. The court house is situated on a commanding elevation in the eastern part of the city, and presents to the observer a neat appearance.

County Jail.—A few rods northeast of the court house, may still be seen standing, the "Old County Jail." Built in 1860, 20x24 feet, the first story being built of stone, the second a frame, it stands as a relic of the early days of Marysville. The lower story, consisting of one room, was occupied by the prisoners, and the upper by the jailer and family. The unlucky wretches who were confined within its dreary walls, were chained to the floor, but frequently managed to make their escape. This building was occupied until the new one was completed in 1877. The new jail is a stone structure, 28x50 feet, two stories, and was erected at a cost of $5,000. The building was commenced in June, 1877, and completed in December of the same year, by Messrs. McPherson & Fitzgerald.

Central Branch, Missouri Pacific Railway.—This railroad, the first to enter the county, was completed through the southern part, in the winter of 1867, to a point one hundred miles west of Atchison, now known as Waterville, within three miles of the eastern boundary line of Washington County. The road enters the county from the east, ten miles north of its southern boundary line, and passes through the townships of Noble, Vermillion, Blue Rapids, Blue Rapids City and Waterville. On reaching Waterville, all railroad building stopped, nothing more being done until 1876, when the road was extended under the name of the Atchison, Colorado & Pacific Railway, to points farther west. Including this extension, there are thirty-five miles of road under the Central Branch management in the county.

The principal stations on the line of road, are Vermillion, Frankfort, Barrett, Bigelow, Irving, Blue Rapids and Waterville.

St. Joseph & Western Railway.—After innumerable delays and disappointments, the people in the northern part of the county succeeded in obtaining a railroad, under the name of the St. Joe & Denver City. In 1870, this road reached the eastern limits of the county, and in January, 1871, passed through Marysville, and was extended northwest until it made a connection with the Union Pacific, at Grand Island, Neb.

The St. Joseph & Western enters the county from the east, nine miles south of the Kansas and Nebraska State Line, and passes through the townships of Guittard, Franklin, Centre and Marysville. The principal stations are: Axtell, Beattie, Marysville and Herkimer.

Marysville & Blue Valley Railway was built from Beatrice, Gage Co., Neb., to Marysville, following the valley of the Big Blue River, in 1879. Number of miles in Marshall County, ten and one-half. Oketo, a small trading point, is the principal station on this line of road in the county.

The Vermillion Valley Agricultural and Mechanical Society was incorporated by the people of the "south half" of the county, with a capital stock of $5,000, at Frankfort, September 20, 1878.

The first Board of Directors elected under the charter, consisted of R. Osborne, J. Wilson, E. Schriner, W. H. Sabin, C. A. Barber, T. Wadick, I. C. Legere, A. Shearer, F. B. Taylor, S. W. Hazen, Maj. Beattie, H. G. Trosper. First officers: R. S. Newell, President; A. J. McKee, Vice-president; R. Osborne, Treasurer; H. H. Louery, General Superintendent; E. L. Begun, Secretary.

A tract consisting of forty acres of desirable ground was purchased, located in the northeast part of the city of Frankfort. An amphitheatre, seating 1,500 people, floral hall, judges' stand, stalls etc., were built. A half-mile race course, pronounced to be one of the best in nothern Kansas, is one of the chief features. The society, under its present management, is in a flourishing condition.

Present officers: R. Osborne, President; I. C. Legere, Vice-president; F. M. Rhodes, Treasurer; J. M. Lane, Assistant; H. H. Louery, General Superintendent; H. G. Trosper, Assistant; J. M. Watson, Secretary.

The Marshall County Medical Association, composed of the principal disciples of Esculapius, was formed in 1879, with ten members. Their first officers were: W. H. Clutter, Frankfort, President; A. Fuller, Vermillion, Vice-president; A. J. Patterson, Beattie, Secretary; A. G. Edwards, Marysville, Treasurer. Censors: A. G. Edwards, H. W. Barrett, P. C. Garvin.

Present officers: A. G. Edwards, Marysville, President; H. W. Barrett, Waterville, Vice-president; A. J. Patterson, Beattie, Secretary; D. W. Humfreville, Watervile, Treasurer. Present membership, twenty-three. Meetings are held semi-annually: first Monday in May, and on the first Wednesday after the second Tuesday in November.

The Marshall County Old Settlers and Pioneers' Association was organized in 1879, its object being to "re-unite the old settlers of this part of Kansas; to cement and perpetuate old friendships, and for the advancement of the moral, social and material interests of the members, and the society in general."

The society was organized at a meeting held at Blue Rapids, September 12, 1879, and the following officers were elected: A. G. Barrett, Barrett Station, President; William Thompson, Blue Rapids, D. C. Auld, Frankfort, Vice-presidents; J. S. Magill, Marysville, Secretary; F. Hamilton, Blue Rapids, Treasurer.

At the last annual election—1882—the following officers were elected: T. McCoy, Marysville, President; A. G. Barrett, Barrett's Station, X. Guittard, Guittardville, Vice-presidents; J. S. Magill, Marysville, Secretary; G. D. Swearingen, Marysville, Treasurer. Meetings are held annually at different points in the county.

MARYSVILLE.

Marysville, the county-seat of Marshall County, and one of the oldest towns in the State, is beautifully located on the east bank of the Blue River, ten miles south of the Nebraska State line, and on the St. Joseph and Western Railroad. At this point the old California or Central Overland route to the mountains and the Pacific coast crossed the Blue. Adjoining the town on the east are beautiful, grand-rising hills and gentle slopes, which are dotted with fine private residences and shady groves. Bounded by Spring Creek on the south and the clear running waters of the Blue on the west, with their heavy belts of timber, it forms a most desirable location for a city. Located as it is on the famous Blue, and surrounded by a rich agricultural country, settled by a good class of citizens, Marysville can well boast of its superior advantages. Possessing two railroads—St. Joe and Western and the Marysville and Blue Valley Branch of the Union Pacific, making connections with the B. & M. R. R., at Beatrice, Nebraska, it has good shipping facilities.

EARLY HISTORY.

In 1849, F. J. Marshall, of Weston, Missouri, established a ferry on the Big Blue River, about nine miles below the present town site of Marysville. This crossing was named "Independence ford," from the trail that led from Independence, Missouri, which was at that time the leading depot of the fur trade. In 1850, the Government opened the military road from Fort Leavenworth, crossing the river at what was afterwards known as Palmetto or Marysville. Seeing that a great portion of the California emigrants were using this route, Marshall moved his ferry, establishing it about one hundred yards below where the bridge is now located, and built a few log cabins, opening a general store and starting a blacksmith shop about the same distance above the bridge.

The next settler, James McCloskey, an Indian trader, in company with other traders, located near Marshall in November, 1855. The other members of the company soon after settled on the Vermillion, leaving McCloskey and his family on a claim which he had pre-empted a short distance south of Marysville.

The Palmetto Colony.—In the spring of 1856, the Palmetto Town Company was organized in Atchison with eighty-four members, composed of Southern men with Southern propensities. They were mostly young men who had come into the Territory chiefly for political reasons and in the interests of the Pro-slavery party. On account of various reasons, only about thirty-five members of the colony left Atchison, and arrived at Palmetto July 8, 1856, among whom may be mentioned J. S. Magill, J. P. Miller, O. D. Prentis, Albert Morrall, W. B. Jenkins, J. R. Allston, John Vanderhorst, A. S. Vaught, Robert Y. Shibley. Of the whole number of men composing the colony, only three or four remain in the State and only two in the county—J. S. Magill and Robert Shibley, who still reside in Marysville.

The colony filed upon and laid out a town site of three hundred and twenty acres, adjacent to a town site previously laid off and entered as a pre-emption claim by Marshall or his agent. The colony named the town in honor of the "Palmetto" State, and entered it as such at the Land Office September 25, 1858.

The progress of Palmetto was slow, none of the members seeming to care whether a town was made or not. One instance may be mentioned, of the erection of a log cabin during the summer of 1856, by Dr. J. P. Miller—this being about the only town improvement made by the colony. Some of the members, more progressive than the rest, made improvements on their pre-emption claims, but most of the time was spent "otherwise."

For some time the town name of "Palmetto" was used by some of the early county officials when dating their official proceedings. In the early maps of Kansas, the name Palmetto appeared, but Marysville was left out, although Marysville was the name of the postoffice and the established seat of justice for Marshall County.

The Marysville Colony.—Previous to the location of this colony, Francis J. Marshall, while a member of the first Kansas Legislature, in 1855, had a county laid off with the Blue running through the center, and also had the county seat established at his ferry and named the place Marysville, in honor of his wife, Mary.

The Marysville Town Company originated in Western Missouri, John and James Doniphan and F. Marshall being the prime movers. The company was incorporated by an act of the Territorial Legislature, August 27, 1855, the following being the corporators: A. G. Woodward, David Galispie, John Doniphan, R. T. Galispie, F. J. Marshall, James Doniphan, Robert C. Bishop and M. G. Shrewsbury. They bought up one hundred shares of the "Palmetto" stock, and caused an addition of three hundred and twenty acres to be laid off on the north half of Section 33, Township 2, Range 7. The northwest quarter of this addition was termed "Marysville addition," and the northeast quarter known as "Ballard and Morrall's addition to Palmetto."

At this time, 1857-58, these two little antagonistic towns had a pretty rough class of citizens, and being outside civilization generally, the pop of the revolver and the clank of pure steel were familiar sounds, and in the absence of civil tribunals, anarchy reigned supreme. Marshall bringing diplomacy to bear, soon succeeded in making Marysville the leading trading point, and in a few years Palmetto was forgotten.

When Marshall established his ferry at Marysville in 1850, he did not give up his place at the old Independence crossing, but still continued to run a ferry at that point up to 1853, the travel being divided for some years between the two points. No person, unless an eye-witness, can have any conception of the scenes and incidents that were to be witnessed at those ferries at that time. At the ferry at Marysville teams would gather by the hundred waiting their turn to cross, and some becoming impatient would ford the stream, but at considerable risk. The capacity of his ferry was such that Marshall could only take three wagons at a trip, for which he charged $5 per wagon. At a session of the County Board in June, 1856, the Commissioners fixed the rates of ferriage as follows: For crossing a loaded wagon, $3; an empty wagon, $1.50; man and horse, 50 cents; footman, 25 cents, and all stock at 25 cents per head. In 1859, a still more visible decrease was made by order of the Board, bringing the rates down to $1 for crossing a six horse wagon and other vehicles in like proportion. This ferry was in active operation until the bridge was built in 1864.

The following notice was published in the Squatter Sovereign (Atchison) March 25, 1856:

GRAND SPECULATION.

"MARYSVILLE, KANSAS TERRITORY.

"I hold in my hand an obligation upon the Marysville Town Company obligating the company to donate to the first person that will put up a steam saw-mill in said town seven shares in the town, which are worth in value each $25. The putting up of the mill in the town will make them worth $250 each, making the donation $1,750, which will very nearly pay for the mill. Marysville is the best location in Kansas for a steam saw-mill, from the fact that it is located immediately on Big Blue River, where the timber can be rafted to the mill, and the lumber rafted below to supply the great Kansas River Valley. So you bring on your mill, set it to running, and I will give you the stock.

(Signed) "F. J. MARSHALL."

The above liberal inducement was accepted by Messrs. Shibley & Quarles, who erected a steam saw mill in the spring of 1857, and operated it until 1861, when it was destroyed.

Among the first business enterprises and professions that were established in Marysville at an early date may be mentioned: Dr. John P. Miller, who also built the first house on the Palmetto town site, located as the first disciple of Esculapius, and he soon had a good practice in surgery. He remained in the practice of his profession until 1862, when he died. J. S. Magill was the first one to represent the legal profession, and was a member of the Palmetto colony. F. J. Marshall opened the first store long before the town site was surveyed, and sold as the chief commodity whisky, at 18 cents per gallon. The first hotel opened for the accommodition of the public was built in 1859 by A. G. Barrett. No regular drug store was established until 1859—the physicians keeping their own stock of drugs. In 1859 Ballard & Morrall, of the town company, opened a drug store. Fleming & Wisner succeeded them in 1863; O. C. Hall succeeded them in 1864, but shortly after moved to Frankfort. In July, 1865, A. Cottrell opened a stock of drugs in a small building on the present site of Waterson's block, and in 1870 moved to his present location.

The first marriage ceremony taking place in Marysville was that of James McCloskey and Monlewaka, a Sioux belle, whom McCloskey had brought with him from the mountains. The marriage ceremony, which was the third on record in the county, was solemnized by James S. Magill, Justice of the Peace, October 28, 1857. Hettie A., a daughter of J. S. Magill, was born August 2, 1860—this probably being the first birth. The first death was that of W. Vaught, a member of the Palmetto colony, in the spring of 1858.

November 30, 1863, a preliminary meeting was held at the court house by the citizens of Marysville and vicinity, for the purpose of organizing a bridge company, to build a bridge across the Blue. The capital stock was fixed at $8,000, or 320 shares at $25 each. On December 23, books were opened for stock subscriptions. In April, 1864, the following officers were elected: President, J. Samuels; Treasurer, A. E. Lovell; Secretary, J. D. Brumbaugh; Directors, T.W. Waterson, J. S. Magill; Architect, S. G. Jones. The bridge was of the Howe Truss patent, and was completed in November, 1864. This bridge served its purpose until the spring of 1882, when it was replaced by an iron structure by Marysville Township.

Criminal.—October 3, 1863, an attempt was made by G. and W. Reedy and William Schroyer on the life of P. Hutchinson, now a resident of Marysville, and formerly Captain of Company E, Thirteenth Kansas. The attempt failed, but nearly cost the life of J. Heasly, who interfered in behalf of Hutchinson. No attempts were made for the apprehension of the party until October 26, when G. Reedy was brought before the grand jury, and two bills of indictment were brought against him. On the first, by introducing false testimony, it is claimed, he was cleared. On the second indictment, for "assault with intent to kill J. Heasly," he was sentenced to the State Penitentiary for one year, and was taken to the county jail. Reedy, who was a member of the Thirteenth Kansas at that time, was home on a furlough. A few days after the trial, Company B, Ninth Kansas, passed through the town en route to Fort Leavenworth. Learning that a comrade was confined in the jail, a party of them, numbering about twenty, came back that night from their camp, a few miles distant, and going to the jail, demanded the release of the prisoner. It being refused by the Sheriff, they drew their weapons and swore they would blow out his brains. One of the guards, fearing they would carry out their threat, delivered up the keys of the jail, and the prisoner was released.

Perhaps one of the most brutal and uncalled-for murders, in the history of Marysville, occurred October 8, 1864. During the afternoon of the above-mentioned day a political meeting had been held, and in the evening the festivities were to conclude with a ball. During its progress, when all were enjoying themselves, S. J. Goisney, who had during the day made several attempts to create a disturbance, tried to force his entrance into the ballroom, with the purpose of stopping the dance. He was stopped at the door by a constable, and a scuffle ensued, during which Goisney drew his revolver. During the melee Patrick Cassey, a highly-esteemed citizen of the place, interfering in the interests of peace, was shot by Goisney, and instantly killed. In the sequel of this affair Judge Lynch officiated with his usual promptness. Goisney was confined in the jail immediately after the shooting, but during the night a party of unknown citizens took the prisoner away. Next morning, suspended from the limb of a tall oak on Spring Creek, was found, swinging to and fro, the body of the murderer—Goisney.

Some time in 1863-64 the trial of an Indian occurred in Marysville—it being the first of the kind in the county. The trial was held before R. S. Newell, Justice of the Peace, upon a writ of habeas corpus issued by him in case of the State vs. Medicine Horse, an Otoe chief, who had been charged with being an accessory of Moses Betine for the shooting of V. C. Poor at Oketo. As he was arrested on suspicion, and no charge being found against him, he was released, and showed his gratitude by extravagant gestures and incomprehensible language.

INCORPORATION.

Marysville was incorporated as a city, by an Act of the Territorial Legislature, in February, 1861. The bill prescribing the officers and their powers was vetoed by the Governor, but passed over his veto by a two-thirds vote, thus becoming a law. All who trespassed on the dignity of the law were tried before the Mayor—his jurisdiction embracing the city of Marysville and Marysville Township.

Under an Act of the State Legislature, it was incorporated as a city of the third class in 1871, and has since maintained a city government in accordance with that act. The following is the official roster of the city:

SCHOOLS, CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

One of the earliest schools opened in Marysville was a select school, taught by Miss Jennie Robb, in the fall of 1859. School was held in a small frame building located near the present site of the Sullivan House. Select schools were taught by Miss Kate Weber and others until 1861, when School District No. 4 was legally organized. A small frame school building was erected by the school district, at a cost of $700. R. S. Newell and F. O. Robbins were among the first teachers.

In 1866, the frame building proving inadequate, a new building was erected on a commanding elevation in the northern part of the city. The second building is constructed of magnesia limestone, and was built at a cost of $8,000. The main building is 35x50 feet, with two additional wings, giving it four large rooms. The first teachers in this building were the Rev. W. G. Williams, a graduate of Amherst, as principal, and Miss Kate Weber, assistant.

In 1880, Marysville had progressed so far in the advancement of her educational interests, that it was found necessary to erect another building. The new structure was accordingly erected on the same block, in close proximity to the other. The building is a brick structure, 40x70 feet, trimmed with white limestone, and cost $10,000.

Marysville is to be congratulated on its educational interests, and its handsome school edifices, that reflect credit on the city.

In the earlier years of the settlement of Marysville, the population was in some measure of a transitory nature, and society was so much subject to the influences incident to a constant tide of emigration and travel through the place, that churches did not thrive to any great extent, although when services were held the attendance was good.

In absence of records, tradition states that the first religious services in Marysville were held in the summer of 1857, in a saloon! The first sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Millice, of the Methodist Church, South. In 1859, Rev. Mr. Robbins, of the same denomination, held services in Ballard & Morrall's drug store. In the summer of 1860, Rev. Messrs. King and Duncan, of the Methodist Church South, commenced a revival in the Barrett House, now known as the Tremont House. The preachers in those days were masters of that peculiar style of rhetoric which won its way into the hearts of their audiences. In this case, the revival was in progress for two weeks, day and night, and as a result of the labor, an organization was perfected. The church thus organized had no regular pastors, but was supplied by "circuit riders" until the beginning of the Rebellion, when the organization disbanded.

Methodist Episcopal.—An organization of the Methodist Church North, was perfected in 1866, by Rev. Mr. Woodburn, of Manhattan, with five members, among whom were Mrs. L. J. Swearingen and L. Keefover and wife. Meetings were held in the old court house, also in the old frame school building. Among the early preachers were Rev. Messrs. Tenrent, Tenney and Taylor. Meetings were held irregularly in different parts of the town until April, 1879, when a brick church edifice, 30x50 feet, was erected, at a cost of $2,000. This building was erected mainly through the efforts of Rev A. J. Coe, their pastor. Mr. Coe was succeeded by Rev. A. C. Murray, the present incumbent.

Episcopal.—A partial organization of the Episcopal Church was formed in June, 1882, by the present incumbent, Rev. George Turner, rector.

Memorial Presbyterian Church.—Early in the fall of 1862, religious services were held in the old school house which stood on the west side of Seventh street, by the Rev. Charles Parker, who was also known throughout the State as the eloquent "blind preacher." Services were held on alternate Sabbaths until 1865. For a period of four years no regular services were held; but from 1869 until the spring of 1871, regular services were resumed.

In accordance with an earnest desire on the part of several, a Presbyterian organization was perfected on the 16th of October, 1870, by Rev. Mr. Parker, to be known as the "Memorial Presbyterian Church of Marysville," with the following members: Mrs. A. Parker, C Pritchard, E. Hutchinson, P. A. Reed, Mrs. A. F. Reed, Mrs. E. Merrill, Mrs. A. S. Fisher P. A. Reed and E. Hutchinson were elected and ordained as the first elders.

Preliminary steps were taken towards the erection of a church edifice in 1870 or 1871, in the form of a subscription paper, which was liberally endorsed by the citizens of the place. The contract was let for the erection of a brick structure April 10, 1872, for the sum of $4,000. The corner-stone was laid June 8, of the same year, under the supervision of the Masonic and Odd Fellows' societies, and was dedicated September 18, 1874. The edifice has since met with some mishaps that have rendered repairs necessary, bringing the total cost up to $6,000. The following-named pastors have served the organization in the order mentioned: Revs. C. Parker, A. H. Lilly, E. C. Fish, E. E. Sheldon, J. A. Griffes, and F. E. Thompson. No regular pastor at present.

The German Evangelical Church was organized in 1868 by Rev. A. Bathe, with a good membership. Services were held in a frame building until 1876, when the present edifice was dedicated. The corner-stone was placed in position in 1874, and a stone structure erected, 35x50 feet, at a cost of $3,000. Rev. A. Bathe was succeeded in 1870 by Rev. W. Gogel, who in turn was succeeded by Rev. C. Haas in 1872. Rev. H. Barkmann, the present incumbent, took charge of the church in July, 1876. Congregation now numbers about forty families.

The German Evangelical Church at Stolzenbach was organized in 1870, by Rev. A. Bathe. Meetings are held in the Merklinghaus school house. Present membership, about twenty-two families. Since 1870, the church has been in charge of pastors named in above sketch. These are the only two organizations of this kind in the county.

Catholic Church.—The first religious services held in Marysville by the Catholic denomination were presided over by Rev. Father Suitberl de Martean, some time in 1870. A church organization was perfected soon after, and the foundation laid for an edifice, under the supervision of Rev. A Weikman. The construction of the building progressed slowly, and in 1876, when Rev. John Pichler took charge of the organization, it was still uncompleted. In 1879, the building and lots were sold, and another site chosen. A new building, 24x40 feet, was then erected. The congregation has at present a membership of about sixty families, or three hundred souls, Rev. John Pichler being the present incumbent.

NEWSPAPERS, BANKS AND HOTELS.

The Palmetto Kansan, the first paper printed in the county, was established December 18, 1857, at Marysville. The material of the establishment was formerly employed in the publication of the Lecompton Union, and the office was owned by the "Palmetto Town Company," composed of F. J. Marshall, J. S. Magill and others. J. E. Clardy was employed as editor and publisher. The paper was a Democratic Pro-slavery organ. Mr Clardy continued its publication for seven months, when the paper suspended. In 1858, an effort was made to resuscitate it, under the name of the Marysville Democrat, by a Mr. Childers, but the effort was short-lived.

The Democratic Platform was first issued at Marysville in the early part of 1859, by P. H. Peters and R. S. Newell, and in December of that year E. C. Manning became one of its proprietors. In May following Mr. Manning obtained the entire control of the paper, changing its politics to Republican, but retaining its original name. July 31, 1860, the building in which the paper was printed was entirely destroyed and the material scattered by a violent tornado. In the fall of the same year Peters gathered the fragments together and resumed the publication of the Platform, continuing it until the breaking out of the war in 1861.

The Big Blue Union was founded upon the ruins of the defunct Platform, in 1861, by G. D. Swearingen. It was a Republican paper, and was continued by Mr. Swearingen until August, 1863, when it was purchased by E. C. Manning, who had returned from the army. He conducted the Union until December, 1865, when the publication was suspended, and in January, 1866, he removed the material to Manhattan.

In July or August, 1862, P. H. Peters purchased the press and fixtures of the Palermo Ledger, removed them to Marysville and established the Constitutional Gazetteer. The office was destroyed by a squad of Union soldiers soon after and the proprietor lodged in the guard-house at Fort Leavenworth, but was released two days after.

In 1864, the Enterprise was started at Marysville, by T. W. Baker, P. H. Peters and J. S. Magill. It was independent in politics with strong Democratic feelings. The paper continued under these auspices until the summer of 1867, when Peters became sole proprietor, and the Enterprise was changed to a Republican paper. It continued until some time in 1868, when it was sold to George C. Crowther, who removed the establishment to Irving

In the fall of 1869, the Locomotive was started at Marysville by the irrepressible Peters, who continued it until some time in 1870, when he sold out to Thomas Hughes, who changed its name to the Marshall County News, and conducted it as a Republican journal. Mr. Hughes remained sole proprietor until January 1, 1881, when he sold his interest to C E. Tibbetts and George T. Smith, who conducted the paper until January 2, 1882, when Mr. Tibbetts retired, leaving G. T. Smith, its present owner, as sole proprietor. The News is an eight-column folio, Republican in politics, and devotes itself to the best interests of the county.

September 1, 1881, the first number of the Marysville Signal was issued by A. E. Powers, formerly connected with the Villisca, Iowa, Review. The Signal is a six-column quarto, independent Republican in politics, and by its able editorials, and strict attention to home interests, has secured a large circulation.

The first number of the Marysville Post was issued July 28, 1881, by the Marysville Post Company, William Becker, editor, a weekly periodical eight-column folio, printed in the German language, and is the only one of the kind published in northwestern Kansas.

Postoffice.—The postoffice at Marysville can trace its origin back to the time when this Western country was first opened for settlement—in Territorial days. November 11, 1854, the office was established, Francis J. Marshall being appointed Postmaster The subsequent appointments have been: Peter Valiton, March 12, 1856; John W. Childross, November 8, 1858; Jacob S Goble, May 24, 1859; Russell J. Newell, February 16, 1860; Edwin C. Manning, April 25, 1861; Jacob Weisbach, November 21, 1861; Thomas W. Waterson, April 13, 1864; Alexander Campbell, July 5, 1865; Charles H. Heighton, March 26, 1866; Alexander Campbell, October 19, 1868; William H. Smith, the present incumbent, received his appointment February 27, 1871.

Apropos: the oldest post office in the State is Fort Leavenworth, which was established May 29, 1828, under the name of Cantonment, in what was then known as La Platte County, Mo. The next postoffice established in what is now known as Kansas, was at Fort Scott, then in Bates County, Mo., on March 3, 1843. Following that came the establishment of the postoffice at Marysville, in 1854. Hence it may be stated that Marysville can claim the honor of having the first postoffice in the State of Kansas, which cannot be disputed, as above data is compiled from official records. Postoffice Money Order No. 1, was issued August 6, 1866, and was purchased by G W. Transue.

The Exchange Bank, the oldest banking institution in the county, was established at Marysville in March, 1870, by Schmidt & Koester, who, for ten years previous, were engaged in an extensive mercantile business in the place. Its facilities for doing a general banking business are unsurpassed, having correspondents in the principal Eastern cities. The bank is now located in its new quarters—in Schmidt's new building, one of the finest business blocks in the West. The banking-room has an area of 580 feet and its appointments are in accordance with institutions of a similar kind in Eastern cities. Furnished with private offices and vaults, and using the Yale time-lock, it is one of the best equipped banks in the State.

The Marshall County Bank, was incorporated under the laws of the State October 8, 1880, with a cash capital of $50,000. Its first officers were B. L. Harding, President; C C. Southerland, Cashier; G. P. Millis, Assistant Cashier; Directors: Perry Hutchinson, Aug. Hohn, B. L. Harding, H. Stenis, C. C. Southerland. December 1, 1881, C. C. Southerland resigned his position as cashier and was succeeded by H. G. Burrogs.

August 1, 1882, under a new management, the bank was operated by the following officers: M. S. Smalley, President; P. Hutchinson, Vice-president; E. R. Fulton, Cashier. Directors: A. Hohn, H. G. Burrogs, P. Hutchinson, M S. Smalley, E. R Fulton. Supplied with the Sargent & Greenleaf time-lock, and other banking facilities, it is making the reputation of a first-class banking institution

The first established hotel in Marysville was in a building erected for that purpose in 1859, by A. G. Barrett. The building was constructed of rough native lumber, and cost about $4,000. This building, in 1861, was leased to Perry Hutchinson, who ran it a season, when it was purchased by Joseph Cottrell, who operated it under the name of the "Tremont House," until 1873, since which time it has been under the management of different parties.

The Sherman House, was opened in 1870, in a frame building 16 x 24 feet, by G. D. Swearingen. In 1875, an addition, three stories, 30 x 40 feet, was added at an expense of $7,000. In 1880, Mr. Swearingen leased the building to R. R. Kelley, its present manager.

MANUFACTURES.

Excelsior Roller Mills.—One of the industries of Marysville and of Marshall County are the mammoth flouring mills of Perry Hutchinson. In 1864, Mr. Hutchinson built on the east side of the Blue River, opposite the present mill, a two and one-half story frame building, 24x60 feet. The first floor he occupied as a saw-mill, and in the second story he placed two run of burrs, with which he did "custom work." This combination mill was operated by him until 1867, when, on the west bank of the river, he erected a three-story stone structure, 40x80 feet. In the construction of this building 1,100 perch of stone were used, and when completed employed five run of burrs, with a capacity of one hundred barrels of flour per day. This mill, as well as the first one, was run by water-power furnished by the Blue River. In order to furnish the new mill with sufficient power Mr. Hutchinson was obliged to construct a tunnel, which, at that time was one of the greatest undertakings in the West. This tunnel forms a semi-circle under the bank, and the mill stands directly over the shaft. The reservoir, from the mouth of the shaft, is ninety feet long, twenty-four feet wide, and eight feet high, and is capable of containing a body of water the weight of which is equal to a pressure of one hundred tons. The tunnel itself, including a canal at its inlet and outlet, is 435 feet in length, 185 feet of which are cut through solid rock.

In the summer of 1882, the entire mill was re-modeled and enlarged at an expense of $40,000. Seventeen pairs of Stevens' improved rollers, manufactured at Buffalo, N. Y., were put in operation, which gives the mill a capacity of 250 barrels of flour every twenty-four hours.

In 1878, a switch was built from the main line of the Saint Joe & Western railway—a distance of 6,000 feet—to his mill, and cars are loaded and unloaded at the mill. The flour manufactured by these mills is of a superior brand, and is shipped in large quantities to Europe.

Cigars.—The manufacture of cigars is carried on extensively in Marshall County, in which there are four factories. Of the three located at Marysville, the factory of Charles F. Pusch is the oldest and largest. In 1879, the factory of Charles E. Bendel was established, and has been in active operation up to date. Henry Weidermeyer, of the firm of Bendel & Weidermeyer, opened the third factory in May, 1882. [For further information, see biographies]

Brick.—The manufacture of brick first commenced in 1869-70, by Thomas Cooper, who established a brick-yard, with a capacity of 300,000 per season, in the southern part of the city, and operated it five years. In the spring of 1882, he opened a yard on the south bank of Spring Creek, and during the season manufactures 6,000 brick per day.

Other Industries.—Marysville has an iron foundry, and a brewery, both of which were, until 1882, in operation.

HERKIMER.

The little village of Herkimer is pleasantly located on a bend of Reamer Creek, five miles northwest of Marysville, the county seat, on the St. Joseph and Western Railroad.

Settlement.—The first settlement made in the vicinity of what is now known as Herkimer, was by the Fredericks' Brothers and H. Lenker, who settled on Horseshoe Creek in 1858. They were followed in 1859 and 1860 by H. Hibermann, the three Reamer brothers, I. and N. Holloway, James Bartlou, T. Koeneke and others. In 1874, through the efforts of O. Keller, a postoffice was established under the name of Reamer Creek, F. Reamer acting as postmaster. A few weeks later the office was discontinued. Some time in 1876, the postoffice was re-established under its present appellation, and received its name from a postoffice in New York, it being the second of that name in the United States. O. Keller officiated as postmaster, V. W. Emmert being the present incumbent.

In 1878, a town site was laid off on a tract of land owned by O. Keller, who was its founder. The first business house built in the place was erected by W. Ulch—who remained about two years. Other business enterprises followed.

Religious.—On Horseshoe Creek, five miles northwest of Herkimer, an organization was perfected of the German Lutheran persuasion, in 1869, Rev Mr. Matheas acting as first pastor. In 1870, their present stone edifice, 35x50 feet, was erected at a cost of $3,000. The present membership includes eighty families; Rev. Mr. Bulluck present pastor.

Herkimer has the advantage of being located in the midst of a rich agricultural community, which, by reason of its natural location, is tributary to it, and makes it one of the best shipping points in the county.

OKETO.

A trading point located on the Big Blue River, ten miles north of Marysville, the county-seat, on the line of the Marysville and Blue Valley Railroad. An iron bridge spans the Blue at this point, and a dam furnishes water-power for a grist-mill, owned by J. H. Chapman. Located in a fine agricultural region, it affords good facilities as a shipping point.

BIGELOW.

Located on the line of the C. B. M. P. R'y., six miles east of Irving and three miles west of Barrett, was laid off in 1881. The immediate occasion for making Bigelow a point on the railroad was due to the fine quarries of limestone opened in the vicinity.

WATERVILLE.

On the C. B. M. P. Railway, one hundred miles west of Atchison and fifteen miles southwest of Marysville, the county-seat, may be found located on the south bank of the Little Blue River, the city of Waterville, situated on a gentle slope reaching back from the river and bounded on the west and north by large groves of timber. This point, for a location of a town site, could not have more appropriately been made in that vicinity.

The first settler who located near the present town site of Waterville, was Stearnes Ostrander, early in the spring of 1857. He was followed during the same year by some half-dozen settlers, who located on Coon Creek, a short distance west of Waterville. Among them were Ralph Ostrander, P. Bollar, R. Brown, T. Palmer, H. Brown. In the spring of 1858, William Pearson, William Hawkinsmith, John Hughes, W. Dickinson, H. Bramer and Mrs. A. Davis located in the vicinity. During the same year, 1858, Stephen Moore settled on the Little Blue. In 1859, J. L. McChesney, P. Cassey and others came in and took up claims.

The first mill erected in Waterville and vicinity was built in 1858 by William Pearsoll. The mill was built on the site of the present flour mill, at a place then known as Cedar Falls. Pearsoll's mill was built on the "combination plan" and used as both a saw and grist mill. The saw consisted of the "Mulley" patent and the grinding apparatus had a capacity of a few bushels per day. The mill has long since disappeared.

The melancholy death of Stephen Moore occurred in 1861. Moore, who was returning from Marysville one bitter, cold night, got separated from his companions and did not reach home. Early the next morning a party was organized and a vigorous search instituted. He was at last found near the mouth of Fawn Creek, sitting upright against a tree—frozen to death.

Pioneer society in these days was rough, and this vicinity did not constitute an exception. Dancing seemed to be the favorite amusement. No dance could take place without the usual amount of whisky to keep up the enthusiasm of the dancers.

The original owner of the land on which the town site of Waterville is now located, was David C. King, who subsequently conveyed it to G. H. Hollenberg; Hollenberg conveyed it to William Osborn, who transferred the title to R. M. Pomeroy and others, who made a conveyance to the Central Branch Railroad Company.

In February, 1868, the town site was surveyed by O. B. Gunn, then Chief Engineer of the C. B. U. P. Henry Agle bought the first Waterville lot and erected the first house in town.

During the spring of 1868, Messrs. Hutt, Niggley, Peters, McCubbin, Fratour, Newell and others built business houses. In 1869, the town grew rapidly. In 1870, doubled in size, business and population.

W. P. McCubbin occupied a building as a store moved from Marysville by J. Samuels, in spring of 1868. The first birth occuring on the town site was that of Frank, a son of J. C. Peters, who was born October 6, 1869. This birth was preceded by the marriage of John Dunbar and a Miss Hurd, October, 1868, the ceremony being performed by C. F. Thorndyke, Justice of the Peace. The first death was that of Mrs. James Hurd, in August, 1869.

BLUE RAPIDS.

The manufacturing city of Blue Rapids, the second in size in Marshall County, is located two and one-half miles below the junction of the Big and Little Blue Rivers, and ninety-five miles west of Atchison on the Central Branch Missouri Pacific Railroad. The town site is laid off on a beautiful level slope extending from the railroad to the river, which is skirted with heavy belts of timber, forming a background of exceptional beauty. It is acknowledged as being the most beautiful and possessing the finest water-power of any town in the State.

In the fall of 1869, a preliminary meeting of those interested in Kansas was held at LeRoy, Genesee Co., N. Y. At a later meeting held in Batavia, N. Y., a colony was organized with the following officers: Rev. C. F. Mussey, President; T. Holbrook, Vice-president; S. H. Parmalee, Treasurer; C. J. Brown, Secretary.

A location committee, consisting of Rev. C. F. Mussey, H. J. Bovee and J. B. Brown came out and located the present town site of Blue Rapids. During the winter of 1869–70, the colony, numbering about fifty families, came out and immediately commenced improvements. A town site of 287 acres, embracing the water-power privilege, was purchased of R. S. Craft and others at a cost of $15,000, and 8,000 acres secured in farming lands.

Among the members of the original colony and a greater part of whom located here were: S. H. Parmalee, T. Holbrook, R. Robertson, M. T. Coe, D. Fairbanks, S. Smith, J. T. Smith, H. S. Hurlbert, J. B. Waynant, C. J. Brown, G. R. Brown, T. F. Hall, J. B. Brown, C. E. Olmstead, J. L. Freeland, J. V. Coon, R. S. Craft, John McPherson, J. E. Ball, Y. Douglass, H. A. Parmalee, J. Yurann, V. R. North, H. Woodard, E. L. Stone, J. S. Fisher, C. F. Roedel, C. F. Mussey and others.

Improvements were carried on on an extensive scale. The water-power was surveyed by a competent engineer and found to possess manufacturing facilities of over 1,500 horse-power. At a point where the rapids commence, the current of the river strikes an abrupt rock bluff on the right bank about forty feet high; the river then turns to the left and ripples over a solid rock bottom for a distance of 800 feet. At the above mentioned bluff the town company constructed the dam running over the lime rock bed to the opposite shore. Built of cut stone, sunk into and keyed to the underlying solid rock, it affords great strength. A King's tubular arch wrought iron bridge was completed in the spring of 1871.

Each town lot was sold or distributed on the fixed condition that it never was to hold the foundation for a grog shop or a gaming house of any kind.

One of the first enterprises set on foot in the spring of 1870, was the sinking of a public well on the Public Square. The work was carried on by several parties, but after the drill was put down over two hundred feet and no water found, it was given up. Subsequently, the people accepted a proposition submitted by C. E. Olmstead, one of the enterprising business men of the town, to supply the city with water from the Blue River, by the Holly system of water-works, which have been in successful operation up to a recent date.

H. A. Parmalee and Yates Douglass established the first general stores in 1870. A. W. Stevens followed with the first drug store. W. H. Goodwin was the first to represent the profession of law. Dr. R. A. Wells was the first disciple of Esculapius to locate permanently in the place. The manufacture of brick commenced in May, 1872, by a Mr. Seip. A marriage ceremony was performed in Irving, in June, 1870, by the Rev. E. H. Chapen, the contracting parties, Miss Lottie Hoit and the Rev. J. Williams, being from Blue Rapids. The first birth was that of a child of a Mr. Van Dusen, —a member of the Town Colony—in August, 1870. The first death on the town site was that of Mary, the wife of H. S. Halbert, in the summer of 1870.

On the arrival of the colony at Blue Rapids, as there were no buildings on the town site, with the exception of a small stone building erected years before, a large two-story frame structure was erected by the colonists and termed by them—"Colonial Hall," but by the "natives" or the old settlers, as the "Ark." This building was used by the colonists until other structures could be erected, and in it were held the first religious services and the first school. All public meetings were held there, and at one time a portion of it was used as a hotel and the other part for school purposes. The building was finally moved down to the river and is now incorporated into a building used by the Buell Manufacturing Company.

Services were held in the Colonial Hall for some time, and after moving from one public hall to another, a stone edifice, 32x56 feet, the largest and finest building of its kind in the county, was erected in the fall of 1874, at a cost of $4,000. Rev. Mr. Mussey remained in charge over the church until 1875, when he was succeeded by Rev. G. R. Hutchinson, who remained but six months, and was succeeded by Rev. W. N. McHarg, D. D., in March, 1876. The organization under its present pastor, Mr. McHarg, numbers fifty members.

The Congregational Church was organized January 1, 1872, with twenty members, Rev. S. A. Van Dyke being their first pastor. Services were held in different public halls for a number of years, when a church edifice, 25x48 feet, was erected, at a cost of $1,300, during the summer of 1882. The organization has been in charge of the following named pastors: Rev. S. A. Van Dyke, C. A. Richardson, D. C. McNair, and Edward Skinner, the present incumbent. The church is in a prosperous condition, and numbers sixty-five members.

In July, 1873, the corner-stone was laid with appropriate ceremonies, and the church was dedicated in October of the same year. The building, a brick structure, was erected at a cost of $1,800. The Rev. W. A. Briggs remained as pastor until July, 1880, when he was succeeded by Rev. George Brown, the present incumbent, in April, 1881.

Occasional services were held during the year 1871 by Rev. Messrs. Tenney, Spencer and Smith, who held meetings in different public halls in the city. In 1873, Rev. W. H. Hunter, one year; Rev. C. S. Freark, the present incumbent, taking charge of the church in 1882. A church edifice of limestone was erected in 1876, at a cost of $2,200.

The Press.—In the latter part of June, 1871, W. P. Campbell and C. E. Tibbetts, purchased the material of the Netawaka Herald and removed it to Blue Rapids, where, on the 4th of July, 1871, they issued the first number of the Blue Rapids Times. On the 8th of July, 1872, Campbell sold his interest to Frank Hall, who remained in the concern but a few weeks, when he retired, leaving Mr. Tibbetts sole proprietor. The latter conducted the paper until October, 1877, when E. M. Brice, of Ohio, became a partner, and on the 3d of October, 1878, Mr. Tibbetts retired, leaving Mr. Brice alone in the office, which he still controls as the editor of the Times. The Times since the issuing of the first number has been Republican in politics and devoted to home interests. Under the management of its present editor, it has grown to be one of the leading papers in the county.

The Postoffice.—A postoffice was established a short distance from what is now known as Blue Rapids, in 1859, with William Thompson as the first postmaster. Mr. Thompson remained in office three years, and was succeeded in 1862 by D. Palmer. In 1865, Miss Emma Lee received the appointment as postmistress, but remained in office but six months, when she resigned in favor of S. Craft, who after a short period turned the office over to John Weber. During Weber's term, 1869, the office was discontinued. When the Genesee Colony came out and located a town site and commenced improvements, the postoffice was re-established in the spring of 1870, with S. H. Parmalee as postmaster. Mr. Parmalee was succeeded in 1875 by C. E. Tibbetts, then editor of the Times. In 1876, Mr. Tibbetts resigned. In December of that year A. J. Loomis was appointed, and has officiated as postmaster up to the present time. Under Parmalee's administration the office was made a Money-order office in July, 1872—Money Order No. 1 being remitted by W. H. Goodwin.

A Great Fire.—Blue Rapids, in its existence of twelve years, has singularly escaped serious conflagrations common to Western towns, with the exception of a few instances. The existence of Blue Rapids, as a town, was nearly wiped out, April 10, 1872, by one of those events that frequently occur in a newly settled country—a prairie fire. About noon of the day mentioned a dense cloud of smoke was seen to rise back of the bluffs, south of town, and as a strong breeze was blowing from that direction, an apprehension was felt that the town was in danger, which was soon realized by the appearance of flames that came surging down the bluffs with great velocity. The citizens turned out en masse, and seizing everything that would stop the progress of the flames, rushed to the scene. The fire first passed over the railroad track and swept along the west side of town to the river, which alone could check it, leaving a lateral column approaching the town at right angles, which monopolized the exertions of one hundred men to keep it in check. The flames also crossed the track on the east side of town and passed on to the river. Here the same efforts were needed, and after all danger was over the gallant fire brigade returned to their homes, blackened, scorched and burnt, but satisfied with their endeavors to save their homes.

During the same year efforts were inaugurated toward the erection of a library building. Through the liberality of C. E. Olmstead and others funds were raised and building operations commenced. In 1876, the building, a two-story stone structure, 24x40 feet, was completed at a cost of $4,000, and now stands as a monument of the laborious but praiseworthy efforts of the association.

The catalogue of the association shows nearly 2,000 volumes in the library, which list is rapidly increasing.

Hotels —The Old Colonial Hall, the first building erected by the Blue Rapids Town Company, was occupied as a hotel for several months, when Messrs. McPherson & Reed erected the present building now occupied by them, in 1870. This building, known as the La Belle (beautiful) House, is a three-story frame, 38x40 feet, with an extension 24x26 feet. After being in successful operation for twelve years, the hotel was closed August 28, 1882, and the partnership between McPherson & Reed dissolved.

The Arlington House was opened in the winter of 1882, by W. Coulter, Jr., who is the present manager. The building, a two-story brick, was erected in 1878, by W. Coulter, Sr., at a cost of $7,000. In 1881 it was fitted up and used as a hotel, under the name of the Fairchild House, managed by C. R. Fairchild, formerly proprietor of the Tremont House, Marysville. The "Arlington," though comparatively a new enterprise, is securing the reputation of a first-class hotel.

Bank —The banking house of Olmstead, Freeland & Co. was established in May, 1871. The building occupied by them was built in 1870, by D. Fairbanks and J. L. Freeland, who bought out Fairbanks' interest during the same year. The building is of limestone, two stories, 25x80 feet, erected at a cost of $3,500. In the fall of 1872, owing to the death of one of the firm (N. B Olmstead), the two remaining partners, C. E. Olmstead and J. L. Freeland, conducted the business under the firm name of Olmstead & Freeland until 1879, when C. E. Olmstead, having larger business interests in Burlington, Iowa, retired, leaving J. L. Freeland sole manager, who changed the name of the institution to the "Bank of Blue Rapids City." The bank is supplied with modern banking conveniences, including a Hall's safe in a fire-proof vault. A general banking business is transacted by its manager, J. L. Freeland.

Manufacturing Interests.—Since Blue Rapids came into existence it has been noted throughout the State for its superior water-power privileges, and has been termed by some enthusiastic writers the "Lowell of Kansas." With its sixteen hundred horse-power, its fine dam, its two-span iron bridge, and its numerous building sites for mills and factories, it will in a few years be justly entitled to that appellation.

Woolen Mills.—In 1872, a four story woolen mill, 40x80 feet, was completed and supplied with necessary machinery at a cost of $50,0 0. On inducements offered by the Town Company, Messrs. Cook & Chandler, of the Wathena Woolen Mills, transferred their interests to this place and immediately commenced operations with a force numbering forty-five hands. In 1874, owing to financial difficulties, the firm was compelled to make an assignment. In the fall of 1877, the woolen mills were purchased by the Buell Manufacturing Company, of Saint Joseph, Mo., who started the mill and ran it to its full capacity until December, 1879, when it was destroyed by fire. It was immediately rebuilt and remodeled, and filled with the latest improved machinery, and is now employing one hundred hands. An addition was built, 30x60 feet, four stories high, and other improvements made at a recent date. The mill at present is a model institution, lighted by gas, run night and day, and uses 300, 000 pounds of wool annually. Yarns, woolen cloths, flannels and blankets are manufactured in immense quantities.

Flouring Mill.—Situated on the east bank of the river and adjoining the woolen mill on the south, is a four-story stone building, 54x83 feet, which was erected in 1871, by C. E. Olmstead, at a cost of $30,000. The mill was originally intended for seven run of burrs, but only five were used, which gave it a capacity of grinding 1,200 bushels per day. The mill was run for some time under the firm name of Olmstead Brothers, when J. S. Wright became a partner and the firm name was Olmstead & Co. Mr. Olmstead retiring in 1879, R. S. Craft purchased an interest, the firm name being then known as J. S. Wright & Co. until the spring of 1882, when Messrs. Upham & Son purchased J. S. Wright's interest, and remodeled the mill into the "Roller Process," at an expense of $50,000. A car load of wheat could be used each day, or three hundred barrels of flour manufactured. The Roller Mills of Upham, Son & Co were totally consumed by fire November 26, 1882; loss, $60,000, insurance $40.0.0. The mills are to be rebuilt by the same firm in the spring of 1883, and restored to former capacity.

Paper Mill —This mill is located on the west side of the river, and was completed in the early part of 1873. The building, a four-story stone structure, 40x60 feet, was erected by Messrs. G. & J. Green, at a cost of $20,000. The financial crash of 1873 caused the mill to be closed until Rix, Hale & Co. obtained it, and have run it under different managers, at different periods, up to the present time.

Gypsum Mill.—The gypsum mill is located on the west side of the river, south of the paper mill, and is a three story stone structure, 40x60 feet, erected by Messrs. J. V. Coon & Son, at a cost of $12,000. The mill was run with a capacity of eighty barrels of plaster of Paris per day until 1877, when the interior was destroyed by fire, which was rebuilt and again put in operation for a short time, when it ceased running. The gypsum used is found in exhaustless quantities two miles up the river, from which point it is transported in flat-boats.

Foundry and Machine Shops—Are located on the west side of the river, west of the gypsum mill, and were established by Messrs. Price Brothers, in 1877, since which time they have been in successful operation. The motive power in this foundry is supplied from the river by means of an iron shaft running across the street under ground.

Situated in the wide spread valley of that winding stream, with its pure clear waters and timber-covered banks, the Blue, it unquestionably has a pleasant location. Irving has, and always will have, a good trade, arising from the fact of its being located in one of the best settled and best cultivated portions of Marshall County.

In the autumn of 1859, a small colony of fourteen families organized in Lyons, Iowa, and sent W. W. Jerome to prospect and secure a suitable site for the location of a town. After traveling several hundred miles in Kansas, he recommended the lands on which the present town site of Irving is located.

In February, 1860, the Irving Town Company was incorporated by the Territorial Legislature. Following were the corporators: W. W. Jerome, L. A. Ellis, W. D. Robinson, J. H. Flint, J. T. Wilson, M. D. Abbott, G. M. Gifford, Joel Parker, C. Raymond, B. W. Powers, T. H. Baker and C. E. Gaylord.

About one hundred families in Iowa and Illinois had made preparations to locate near the town of Irving, and quite a number had already moved out, but met, as their first experience, the severe drought of 1860, and many went back, and by their reports kept others away. C. E. Gaylord is the only member of the Irving Town Company now living in Irving.

EARLY EVENTS.

Irving received its name from Washington Irving, "whose sweet literary productions will ever live to give lustre to the memory of that immortal and beloved American author."

Irving, during its infancy, seemed to be linked with a destiny fated to its advancement. Alluding to the drought of 1860, we should mention that the climax of the year's discouragements occurred in July, in the shape of a severe wind and thunder storm. Most of the buildings in Irving at this time were new and unfinished, and offered but little resistance to the wind. Buildings were blown down, houses unroofed, smoke-stack of the colony saw-mill destroyed, and many narrow escapes reported. Some of the colonists went back to Iowa, others located in different parts of Kansas, but the majority remained, and soon others came in and Irving was again on the ascendency.

In 1860-1, was built at Irving the first church in Marshall County—there being none nearer than Manhattan, Riley County. The church was built mainly through the efforts of friends of the colony in New York. The first religious services were held in this building by the Rev. Charles Parker.

Neither records nor traditions state anything in regard to the first marriage, birth, or death.

The survey of what was then known as the Atchison & Pike's Peak Railroad, was completed to Irving in November, 1865. In the fall of 1867, the railroad, under the name of the C. B. U. P., was completed, and during the next winter the depot was built.

A frame building, occupied as a hotel, was erected in 1870 by J. F. Joy, at a cost of $2,500, and known as the Irving House. After passing through different managements, it was purchased by William Connor—the present proprietor.

Corporation.—Irving was incorporated as a city of the third class in 1871, George C. Crowther being elected as the first Mayor. The first city election was all that was ever carried out by Irving as a city. The officers elected did not qualify; the charter was surrendered, and the "City of Irving" soon became a thing of the past.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Postoffice.—Was established in 1860, with M. D. Abbott as postmaster. Abbott was succeeded in a few months by S. H. Warren, who retained the office a number of years, when he turned it over to H. E. Smith. Smith was succeeded by S. H. Warren, again, who in 1872 turned the office over to John Thompson, who officiated until 1879, when he was succeeded by Thos. Gaylord, the present Postmaster. August 5, 187[illegible], Money Order No. 1, was issued from the Irving Postoffice, Levi Chase, remitter.

Wetmore Institute.—Was established in 186[illegible], by Eastern friends of the Colony, prominent among whom was Hon. A. R. Wetmore, in honor of whom the Institute received its name. The Institute building was erected on a slope overlooking the town from the west, was a three-story structure 44x50 feet, and built of limestone. The first teachers were the Misses Blakely, who were succeeded by the Rev. J. L. Chapman, who taught three years. In 1879 a portion of the building was destroyed by a cyclone, and in 1880 was totally destroyed by fire.

In 1868, School district No. 2, erected a stone school building 30x40 feet. The contract price was $[illegible], but before the building was completed, $6,000 was expended. A. Jeffers taught the first term, in 1869. In the summer of 1879, this building was destroyed by the Irving cyclone. In the fall of the same year, a new building—frame—30x40 feet, was completed at a cost of $1,500. Prof. H. C. Robinson, the present teacher.

The First Presbyterian Church was organized October 26, 1862, by the Rev. Chas. Parker, with the following named persons as original members: A. Gorr, C. A. Freeland and wife, C. E. Gaylord and wife, Mrs. A. Parker, Mrs. J. L. Freeland, Mrs. W. W. Jerome. In 1869, a stone edifice, 42x52 feet, was erected at a cost of $5,000. In 1879 the church was destroyed by a cyclone; but not being discouraged, a new edifice 42x52 feet, was commenced during the same year, and completed in the summer of 1881, at a cost of $3,500.

The following named pastors have had charge of the organization: Revs. C. Parker, J. L. Chapman, Mr. Shelden, G. F. Chapen, J. R. Brown, J. Wilson, I. B. Smith and Rev. J. A. Griffes. Since January 1, 1883, the church has had no regular pastor. Present membership, fifty four.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1867, by Rev. Mr. Devaul. In the summer of the same year efforts were made toward the erection of a church edifice, but after a little progress was made the work stopped. In 1871 a stone building was purchased, and meetings were held in it until 1878, since which time services have been held in the Presbyterian church. The pastors up to date have been: M. D. Tenney, T. B. Grey, B. F. Smith, W. H. Underwood, E. W. Vandeventer, S. A. Green, G. W. Miller, S. L. Hunter, and the Rev. C. S. Freark, who is their present pastor. Present membership, twenty-eight.

The Episcopal Church was organized in 1867-8, by the Rev. Chas. Holmes. Meetings were held for a number of years in the schoolhouse, when the organization disbanded. In April, 1874, the church was reorganized by Bishop Vail, Rev. C. Holmes, pastor. In the fall of 1879 a small frame edifice was built at a cost of $1,200. Present Rector, Rev. Geo. Turner. Present membership, twenty.

The Press.—October 31st, 1868, Geo. C. Crowther, having bought out the Marysville Enterprise, removed the material to Irving, and commenced the publication of the Irving Recorder. May 21st, 1869, Mr. Crowther sold a half interest to Harris E. Smith, and the Recorder was published under their management for some time, when Mr. Crowther retired, leaving Mr. Smith sole proprietor, who published the paper until the summer of 1872, when for want of patronage it was suspended. In 1875, John Thomson purchased the material of the defunct Recorder establishment, and started the Irving Blue Valley Gazette. This paper, a Republican journal, was conducted by him till 1879, when it was again suspended. In 1880, W. J. Granger purchased the Gazette material and started the Blue Valley Citizen. Mr. Granger conducted the paper nine months, when it was discontinued.

In the spring of 1879, himself, J. F. Forey, William Glenn, W. Merrick, John Burnham and George Vickers, left Wichita with the express purpose of founding a new town to the west. This expedition resulted in the platting of Harper City, in what is now Harper County, by Mr. Glenn. Each of the colonists laid claim to a quarter section of "Mother Earth," and bought an interest in the town site. Mr. Glenn built the first house, the first hotel, and was the prominent man. Mr. Merrick built the first store.

Mr. Petersen is a young man who has gradually increased his stock, until he is now doing business in a room 22x75 feet, with an addition of 14x25 feet, and carries a stock of $12,000. Thus can be seen what energy and enterprise will do in the great State of Kansas, if a man has the true grit and perseverance. He was married in Irving in the year of 1877, to Emma Heines.

W. H. SABINS & SON. W. H. was born in Oneida County, N. Y., June 25, 1823; moved to Illinois, thence to Marshall County, Kan., in 1870, and engaged in farming and stock-raising; has a farm of 320 acres; keeps 50 head of cattle, and 50 to 100 head of hogs. H. and Nana J., in all eleven children. R. D. Strong was married to Esther M. Douglass, September 1, 1881.

FRANKFORT.

Frankfort, the third city in size, in a business point of view, is located in the south-central part of the county on a beautiful slope stretching back from the Vermilion, eighty-seven miles west from Atchison, on the Missouri Pacific Railway, and twenty-three miles on an air line from Marysville, the county-seat. Situated in the midst of what is acknowledged as the richest agricultural part of the county, and surrounded by a wealthy class of farmers, it has advantages possessed by few towns in the county.

SETTLEMENT OF THE VERMILLION VALLEY.

The following notes of the early settlement of the Vermillion Valley, were furnished us by an old settler in that region. At the risk of some slight repetitions, since some of the individuals here mentioned have been alluded to in the general history, we reproduce it here as given:

In 1855 came the first actual settlers in the Valley of the Black Vermillion. One of them was Louis Tremble, a Frenchman, who had married a Sioux squaw, and who had been driven from the Rocky Mountains in accordance with an order of General Harney, expelling everyone of that nationality. In the fall of that year he operated a puncheon toll bridge across the Vermillion River, at the old Mormon or Hollenberg crossing. Mr. Changreau, another French settler, had also a Sioux wife. John D. Wells, present Representative of the Fifty-fifth District, arrived during the early part of 1855. Daniel M. Leavitt, still a resident of this county; Henry Hollenberg, a German, the father of Washington County, now buried in the Atlantic; Frederic, Henry and Hans Brockmeyer, now of the above named county; Soren Jason, now in California; and Dr. Ackerman and family, all settled on the east fork in 1855. Joseph Langdon and family also settled near the mouth of the Vermillion in the fall of 1855, as did Thomas Warren and family, whose location was on Section 31, Town 4, Range 9. Among the early settlers of 1856 were Captain S. B. Todd, of Pittsburg, Pa., since of Frankfort, Kan.; Dr. William Blackburn, now in Ohio; John McKibbins, now of Westmoreland, Kan. The inciting cause of the coming of this party was the speeches made, late in 1855, in Appolion Hall, Pittsburg, by Horace Greeley, S. N. Wood and a well known Senator of Michigan, on the subject of "Kansas." Captain Todd and fifteen others enlisted that night to come to Kansas as Free-state voters and settlers. Within a few weeks they were joined by about twenty-five others. The party of forty left Pittsburg for Kansas, April 1, 1856. Under the auspices of the Massachusetts Free-state Emigrant Society, they arrived at Kansas City, and from there scattered over the State. Captain Todd and his companions arrived on the Black Vermillion, April 19, 1856. Later in that year the few settlers of the Ohio Colony Company came to this valley. A surveyor named Johnson, accompanied by A. G. Barrett, now County Treasurer of Marshall County; John Roland, Hon. D. C. Ault and others came to this valley in May, 1855, and laid off a tract of land, 5x8 miles, called the Ohio Colony Survey. They also platted "Ohio City" on the northwest quarter of Section 31, Town 4, Range 9. It is now a farm. Each member of the colony paid into the general fund $25 for every quarter section he desired to secure, the money to be used in the purchase of a steam saw-mill. The mill was bought by A. G. Barrett, as agent of the colony, and brought out in the fall of 1855. This location is still known as Barrett Station, formerly Barrett's Mills. The Ohio Colony came to naught, as no books, papers or accounts were ever sent to Kansas, and but few of the members ever came. Mr. Barrett bought and for many years owned the saw-mill, which is still running, though the old boiler and engine were disposed of and transported to Clyde, Kan. Although Messrs. Barrett and Roland built log houses on the west fork of the Vermillion in 1855, they did not live in them until after Mr. Todd had built his in May, 1856. He, therefore, must be considered the first settler on the West Fork, and his son, William H., born August 13, 1856 is, perhaps, the first male white child born in Marshall County. Among those who settled on the Vermillion in 1856, were the Hon. A. G. Barrett and family, Hon. D. C. Ault and family, Isaac Walker and family, H. W. Swift, a bachelor and first Postmaster at Barrett postoffice; John Radcliffe and family, the two brothers Frame and their families, the Shirk family, also Enoch Pugh, the first blacksmith (who died there about 1857), and others whose names are not now recalled. Other early settlers who may be mentioned are: W. H. Wilson, then a bachelor, who came in May, 1856; James Wilson and family, and W. T. Grinnell, in 1857; J. Burrell and family in April, 1858, and Peter Trosper and family in 1859. Mr. Auld was the first Justice of the Peace, and M. V. Hall and Miss Ann J. Trosper, were the first couple married by that functionary, in 1857. Mr. Todd was the second Justice of the Peace, and the first one to serve under Free-state rule. During the years 1857, 1858 and 1859, few settlers located in the valley, and in 1860 most of the pioneers were driven away by the stress of hard times. From 1860 to 1865 this part of Kansas remained much as it was in 1856, as the uncertain issue of the Rebellion discouraged settlement.

In August, 1856, Timothy Clark and Judy North, were married at the house of James Smith, by Squire Ault. James and Samuel Smith settled in the fall of 1855. James is now in Missouri, and Samuel died a few years ago. Ellis Meyers came in the spring of 1856, and froze to death in a terrible storm which raged during the winter of 1856 and 1857. John Harris and family, now residing in Osage County, Kan., came in 1856. Lawrence Kelly and family came during the same year. Mr. Kelly is dead. James P. Malone and family came also during the same year. He is now a Catholic missionary in Wabaunsee County. James Goldsberry and family came in 1856, and also Mr. Musgrave and family, who still reside in the county. Alexander Moore and family came from Ohio. He is now a resident of Illinois. Mr. Fletcher and family came during 1856, but he died in the fall of that year. His family left the country after a few years.

HISTORY OF THE CITY.

In 1867, the Frankfort Town Company was organized at Marysville with the following members: F. Schmidt, C. F. Koester, J. S. Magill, John McCoy, P. H. Peters, John Bollinger, Perry Hutchinson, J. Weisbach, R. S. Newell and J. E. Smith. In August, of the same year, the company purchased Section 16, Township 4, Range 9, and laid out a town site, which was originally called Frank's Ford, but soon adopted its present continental appellation. On consideration of receiving a station, depot and side-track, the town company gave the Central Branch Railroad Company one-half of the town site.

The railroad reached Frankfort in October, 1867, and in the fall of the same year the depot was erected. The first houses were built that year by J. S. Magill, R. S. Newell and Frank Schmidt. O. C. Horr established the first store in December, 1867. In 1868, seven buildings were erected, among them being two business houses operated by Jacob Weisbach and O. C. Horr. The next year, 1869, showed a marked increase in the building operations, as there were fifty-four good substantial buildings erected, among which was one of the largest hotels in the county, at that time. Since that time the town has made steady progress.

In April, 1869, occurred the death of an infant daughter of O. C. Horr. Of this child it may be stated as being the first birth, a few months previous. The next birth was a child of Jacob Weisbach, born in the fall of the same year.

A serious affray occurred in Frankfort August 14, 1869, in which one of the oldest and most respected citizens, James Vaugham, was shot by a questionable character named Gus Quarles. It appears there had been for some time previous to the shooting, an antagonistic feeling between the two parties—Quarles having circulated the report that Vaugham was a bushwhacker and had served with Quantrell during his raids. On the day of the shooting, Quarles, who had been hunting, stopped in Jacob Weisbach's store, where he met Vaugham, who desired an explanation in regard to the report circulated by Quarles. Quarles did not deny what he had said, and from this an excited altercation arose, in the midst of which Quarles raised his gun and placing the muzzle within three feet of his victim, fired, the charge taking effect in the arm and side of Vaugham. As the wounded man did not fall Quarles fired at him again, but in his excitement missed his antagonist. Quarles immediately jumped on his horse and left for parts unknown. It was afterwards ascertained that he had gone to Missouri, where he soon after died. Mr. Vaugham finally recovered from his wounds and is still a resident of the place.

This building was used until 18[illegible], when it was sold and is now used as a private residence. During the same year a new edifice built of limestone, was completed at a cost of $4,000. In 1874, an addition was made to the main building, and is used for primary purposes.

He located one and a half miles east of the present site of Frankfort, and in September, 1861, enlisted in Company D, of the Eighth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and his record is identified with that of his gallant regiment up to the battle of Chickamauga, where he was captured. The first nine days of his captivity were spent in burying the dead and carrying off the wounded. He was then taken to Richmond, and put in the third story of a large tobacco warehouse, an adjunct of Libby Prison, and there, with only one blanket to cover three men, he spent the fall of 1863. In November he was put into similar quarters in Danville, Va., and spent the long, wretched winter in that way, fed on decaying bacon, corn bread and sweet potatoes. In the spring of 1864, a removal still worse was made to Andersonville, and it was in that hideous prison pen that he fully realized the full extent of the devilish barbarities of the slave-holding, women-whipping fiends, who sought to disrupt the nation. His only clothing was the same uniform in which he was captured—merely pants and a blouse in tatters; no shirt, boots or blanket, and the fare a pint of "cow peas" or a pint of corn and cob meal in twenty-four hours. Scurvy, caused by exposure and dry diet, was very common, and many a poor wretch walked deliberately over the "dead line" to be shot down in order to escape his tortures. Men were promiscuously shot by the guards who desired a furlough, and such a reign of misery and terror, as Mr. Haskett says: "is beyond the power of language." He was exchanged at Charleston, S. C., in December, 1864, and returned to Kansas. He has now a valuable 160 acre farm, forty acres in timber and the balance in cultivation. On this he has a good frame house, and other substantial improvements. Mrs. Haslett was born in Michigan, and there are four children living, three boys and one girl.

BARRETT.

John C. Fremont crossed the Big Vermillion June 20, 1842, on his way to the mountains, at some point near where Barrett is now located, and made the following mention in his note-book: "We crossed at 10 A. M., the Big Vermillion, which has a rich bottom of about one mile in breadth, one-third of which is occupied by timber."

The first settler after the Frenchmen and their Sioux families, was G. H. Hollenberg, afterwards founder of Hollenberg, Washington County. He located in the fall of 1854 on a claim in Section 2, Township 5, Range 9. As there was at this time considerable California travel that way, Mr. Hollenberg opened a small store and stocked it with provisions and articles such as the immigration demanded.

John D. Wells, D. M. Levitt and Joseph Langdon were the next to settle on the Vermillion, in 1855.

In the spring of 1855, a colony of sixty members was organized at Cadiz, Ohio, with the intention of settling on the Vermillion in a body. They selected a tract of land five miles square, and as the government surveyors had not extended their surveys this far at that time, they laid out the five mile tract themselves. A. G. Barrett, D. C. Auld, John Roland, J. G. Radcliffe, W. S. Blackburn and a Mr. Poe, all members of the colony, settled on the five mile tract in the spring of 1855.

In 1858, the Trosper Brothers and others came in and located, and from that time to this the settlement of the Southern part of the county has been rapid.

Organization.—Barrett was laid off as a town site in 1868-9, by A. G. Barrett, who deeded one-half of the site, forty acres, to the C. B. U. P. R. R. Co., who agreed to erect a depot and build a side-track. About $1,200 was donated by the neighborhood for the privilege of having a station at that point.

A post-office was established at Barrett in 1857, with E. Pugh as Postmaster, J. P. Farrant being the present post office official. During the time previous to the establishment of a post-office, the settlers obtained their mail at St. Mary's Mission, Pottawatomie County, Ft. Riley, Davis County, and at Marysville.

A saw-mill was built by Joseph Langdon, on the Vermillion in 1856, and was operated for several years. In the winter of 1856, occurred one of the first births in the settlement—a child of a Mrs. Teller having that honor. The first marriage ceremony took place in the summer of 1857, the contracting parties being Solon Jassen and a Miss Wright. One of the first deaths was the wife of a Mr. Shirk, in 1857. The first religious services were held in 1857, in the old saw-mill, by various members of the "circuit riders." A Methodist class was organized in 1860, and attached to the Frankfort Circuit. Services were, and have been, held in the schoolhouse up to the present time by pastors having charge of the Frankfort organization.

Education.—School District No. 1, was organized in 1859 and a small schoolhouse 14x20 feet, was built on the site of the present edifice; during the same year John Crawford had the honor of teaching the first term of school in the first legally organized district in the county. In the fall of 1869 a new building was erected at a cost of $3,000. This building is the largest one story schoolhouse in the county, its dimensions being 30x46 feet.

In the summer of 1855, A. G. Barrett brought out a grist-mill from Ohio. He shipped it by steamer to Leavenworth, and hauled it around by the Ft. Riley road and the California trail, to the Vermillion. The mill commenced operations in the fall of the same year, and has been in successful operation up to the present time. The present owner, J. Reodocker, purchased the mill of A. G. Barrett, in 1881, and has enlarged it, put in new machinery, and constructed a tunnel 400 feet long, to bring the water from the Vermillion to the mill, which had formerly been run by steam-power. The present building is two-stories high, 36x45 feet, and has three run of burrs.

At the capture of Arkansas Post a piece of shell cut away three fingers of his hand, which wound laid him up for six months. Re-entering the service, he drove ambulance up to the engagement at Yazoo Pass, when a ball through the calf of his leg ended his military service, and honorably retired him, a pensioner. Returning to Maquoketa, Iowa, he came in 1872 to his present farm in Clear Fork Township, Marshall County. Mr. Hight has done good work here, as 130 of his 160 acres are under cultivation, and his ten acre orchard of all kinds of fruit is one of the largest and best in the county. His wife was Lucy Battles, married in Jones County, Iowa, where were born their two eldest children, Asa E., and Fannie E., the youngest, Rhoda O., being born in Maquoketa. Mr. Hight and family belong to the United Brethren Church.

VERMILLION.

Vermillion, a pleasant little town of about 150 inhabitants, is located on the South Fork of the Black Vermillion, seventy miles west of Atchison, on the Central Branch of the M. P. R'y.

Early Settlement.—Among the settlers who located in the vicinity of Vermillion, prior to 1860, were J. Klapp, E. Lewis, W. Warren, Major Beattie, S. Smith, I. Blades, J. Kenworthy and S. Osgood. Among those who located in town, were Theo. Collier, J. E. Watson, G. R. Kelley, W. H. Dickinson, R. Shields, A. Dilley and others.

The town of Vermillion was laid off in the fall of 1869, by Messrs. G. R. Kelly and Theo. Collier and the C. B. U. P. R. R. Co. The original town site, consisting of 240 acres, was owned as follows: R. R. Company, 40 acres; T. Collier, 40 acres, and G. R. Kelly 160 acres. Messrs. Collier and Kelley gave one-half of their interests to the R. R. Company, who laid off the town and built a depot and side-track.

Early Events.—The first building erected on the town site was put up by W. H. Dickinson, in the spring of 1870, and was used as a store. This was followed by a large store building erected by Robert Shields. This building was used in 1872 as a hotel, managed by a Mr. Byron, until 1875.

Irregular services of this denomination were held up to February 9, 1879, when an organization of thirteen members was perfected by the Rev. T. Hill, D. D., and Rev. I. B. Smith, who took charge of the church until April, 1882, when he was succeeded by the Rev. H. W. Woods, of Frankfort. In 1879, a church building erected in 1876 by the people of the "Church of God," was purchased at a Sheriff's sale for $834—the original cost being $2,500. The building is a frame structure 32x60 feet, and since its purchase by the Presbyterians, $500 has been expended on improvements. Present membership of the church, nineteen

Miss Martha Lewis and W. Spear were among the first teachers. When the district was divided, the schoolhouse was moved within one mile west of Vermillion, R. Middleton being the first teacher after the schoolhouse was removed. In 1872, a new frame school building, 24x44 feet, was erected at a cost of $3,000. The first teacher in the new building was L. B. W. H. DE WALT, proprietor Eagle Hotel, was born 1844, in Perry County, Pa., and enlisted in 1861, in Company B, Seventh Pennsylvania Reserves. He fought with his regiment at Antietam, Mechanicsville, Second Bull Run and Fredericksburg, where he and a few others captured the only trophy of that blood-clouded day—a rebel flag. After fighting at Gettysburg and the Wilderness campaign, and that of Richmond and Petersburg, he came, uninjured, out of the service. Came from Pennsylvania to Kansas in 1870, engaged in farming for a few years, then built his hotel, the first and only one in Vermillion. He has of late done a brisk real estate business in connection. Mrs. DeWalt was Margaret E. Lauck, and they have one son—Charles, born November, 1866, in Shermansdale, Pa. Mr. DeWalt is a Republican.

G. R. KELLY, Vermillion, born in Ohio, January 13, 1818. He moved to Indiana in 1831, and from there to Marshall County, Kan., in 1874, and engaged in farming. He is the owner of 800 acres of land, 470 acres of which are under cultivation. The town of Vermillion is located on part of Mr. Kelly's land. He has given to each of his children a farm, amounting to about 1,200 acres in all. Mr. Kelly is a member of the Masonic Order, having taken the degrees up to Knight Templar. Was married in Indiana in 1838, to Anna King, and has the following named children living: Martha, Della, George W., and Laura.

GEORGE W. WARREN, carpenter, is a son of W. W. Warren (see sketch of W. O. Warren), and came to Kansas in 1859, with the family. Upon the death of his father in 1862, the family "broke up," G. W. engaging in farming etc., until 1873, when he settled in Vermillion, where he has a pleasant, cosy, home and interesting family, his widowed mother finding his roof her home during her descent of the plane of life. The family are Methodists in religious faith. Those of them who have been residents of Kansas are William O., George W., C. F., Esther, Mrs. John Corey, J R., and T. W. Warren.

WILLIAM O. WARREN, farmer, Section 34, P. O. Vermillion. Is a son of W. W. Warren, a relative of General Warren, of Bunker Hill fame, and who was born in Cheshire, Vermont, was reared a "bound boy" in Vermont, and married in Warren County, Pa., Lydia Osgood. William O. Warren was born here in 1811. He removed to Stephenson County, Ill., thence to Green County, Wis., and there married Sybil Morton. He came to Kansas in 1857, and laid claim to his present farm, built a log house and began pioneering. His only neighbors were Major Beaty and E. Sweet. Mr. Warren has a valuable 170 acre farm, which he entered at the United States Land Office, July 4, 1859. The log house of early times is replaced by a substantial frame one, and that is now surrounded by orchards and groves of his own planting. Mr. and Mrs. Warren have only three living children of the ten born to them. Mr. Warren well remembers his early experiences.

J. F. WATSON, retired farmer, came to Kansas from Iowa, June 4, 1857, taking a claim on Vermillion Creek. Though but eighteen years old he successfully held the claim through the kindly co-operation of the "Claim Club," against the few who tried to dispossess him; though his land warrant, costing him $200 at sixty per cent interest, nearly beat him eventually. He enlisted with the Thirteenth Kansas Volunteers, fought at Cane Hill, Prairie Grove and Van Buren, and served out his time with the regiment. At the close of the war he returned to Kansas, bought a 200 acre farm in Noble Township, operated it until 1879, then sold out, and has since lived in Vermillion village, operating in grain and stock. He was born in Brown County, Ind., and married Frances Hutchinson, by whom he has six children, born in Kansas.

AXTELL.

The difference in the location of Axtell and that of other places in Marshall County, is apparent to the observer. Instead of finding the town located in the valley of some stream, he finds it situated on the high prairie land, from which an extended view may be had for miles. The town is situated in the eastern part of the county—one mile from the Nemaha County line—and is on the line of the St. Joseph & Western Railway, eighty-nine miles west of St. Joseph and twenty-four miles east of Marysville, the county seat; ten miles north of Vermillion, the nearest point on the C. B. M. P. R'y., and nine miles south of the Nebraska State line.

The town site of Axtell was surveyed and laid off in January, 1872, by the St. Joseph Town Company. The first building erected was put up by "Shoestring" Dickinson during the same year, and used by him as a store for one year, when he was succeeded by R. F. White. During the same year a depot and side-track was built by the Railroad Company and a postoffice established, with R. F. White as postmaster. August 2, 1880, this office was made a Money Order office, money Order No. 1 being remitted by Thomas Hynes.

The first birth occurred early in 1872,—a son of W. H. Dickinson. In 1874, occurred the death of George W. Earl, the first blacksmith in town. His remains were taken to Seneca for interment. No marriage took place until 1879–80.

Owing to adverse circumstances the town did not improve until 1879—at this time there being four families in the place. In the fall of 1879 and the winter of 1880, the place received an impetus in the shape of a colony of twenty families from Deep River, Iowa. Among the colonists may be mentioned the names of Reuben, Joseph, Harry, John and Lewis Wasser, J. H. Seaman, J. Axtell, A. E. Axtell, J. Johnson and others. The colony immediately commenced making extensive improvements, which are now manifest in the thriving little village of Axtell.

Churches.—Axtell has four church organizations, namely: Catholic, Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational. Of the four, the Catholic denomination has a house of worship, and is one of the oldest religious organizations in that part of the county. Rev. T. Luber, O. S. B., is their present pastor.

The First Presbyterian Church at Axtell was organized in April, 1879, with twenty-three members, by the Revs. J. Brown and James A. Griffes. The society has, at present, no regular pastor, but holds services in the schoolhouse. Present membership, forty-one.

An organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church was perfected in the winter of 1880, with thirteen members, by Rev. Maher. Regular services are held in Axtell's Hall.

The Congregationalists organized themselves into a body in the summer of 1882, with fifteen members. Services are held in the schoolhouse.

School district No. 56, was organized ten years ago, the first term of school being taught by John Watkins in a house owned by A. Watkins, located one mile northeast of town. In 1872–3, a frame schoolhouse, 20x30 feet, was erectedon the town site at a cost of $750. Miss Jennie Newland taught the first two or three terms. In 1880, the school building was sold to the Catholic denomination, who used it for church purposes. A new building 26x42 feet, was erected during the same year at a cost of $2,000. A. M. Billingsly, teacher.

GEORGE GUITTARD, deceased, came to Marshall County, Kan., in the spring of 1857, settled on Section 4, in Township 2, south of Range 9 east, on the Vermillion, which was afterward called Guittard Station. At the time of Mr. Guittard's settlement, it was a complete wilderness, his nearest neighbors being fourteen miles distant. In the fall of 1858, the great overland thoroughfare was located through his farm, and at the point where it crossed the Vermillion, Mr. Guittard established a trading-post, which was named Guittard Station. Mr. Guittard erected a large and commodious building, and when the stage line was put on this great thoroughfare, they made his place a division headquarters, and it was known to be the best ranch between the Missouri River and the Rocky Mountains. Here Mr. Guittard entertained many of the most celebrated men of the nation in their travels to and from the Pacific Coast. When Ben Holliday assumed control of the overland stage line, Mr. Guittard became his confidential agent, and in cases of peril and danger was entrusted by him in superintending his affairs, and many times received from Mr. Holliday in person substantial tokens of his respect and esteem. In the early settlement of the county Mr. Guittard took an active part in advancing the public interest, and by the exercise of cool judgment and wise counsel materially aided in subduing the fierce and turbulent spirits who at that time ruled the frontiers, and knew no higher power to appeal to than the revolver and bowie-knife. He assisted in the first organization of the county, and in the establishment of law and order, and when it was divided into municipal townships, the one in which he lived was named Guittard Township, in honor of her first and best citizen. For nearly twenty years the township affairs were managed and controlled by him, and his son Xavior; and to bear testimony to their good and wise management it became the most peaceable and prosperous township in the county. On the 5th day of March, 1881, he passed away, full of years and honors. It may well be said of him that he did more than any other man for the advancement of the early interests of Marshall County, and when its history is written, his trials and achievements will be among its most important events He left a family consisting of wife and three sons—George, Joseph and Xavior, who continued to reside on the old homestead, and are among the wealthiest and most respectable citizens of the county. Xavior is the postmaster at Guittard Station, and is the oldest continuous postmaster in the county, having filled the position for twenty-three years.

In 1840, his father, John, with his wife and ten children, settled in Platte County, Mo., where he was reared. At twenty-four he located on a farm of his own in DeKalb County, Mo., and married Margaret Henry, a native of Cooper County, Mo. In 1861 he enlisted as a private in the State Militia, and during the rebellion of 1861–'65, was several times called into the field to repel bushwhacking invasions. After trying Fremont County, Iowa, and Gentry and Worth Counties, Mo., he came to Kansas, made, and later abandoned a claim in Graham County, and finally bought one in Rock Township, where he now lives. Mr. Cunningham and wife united with the Baptist Church in 1864. They have eight children—Francis R., Aldophena, John, Benjamin, Elizabeth, Martha, Mary and Aaron. For many years past Mr. Cunningham has been a very successful grower of broom corn and manufacturer of brooms.

Z. E. EWING, farmer, P. O. Frankfort, was born in Baltimore County, Md., October 24, 1826, and lived thirty-four years in Baltimore County and City. In 1860 he located in Whartonsburg, Ohio, thence removed to Hancock County, Ohio. He married in June, 1851, in Baltimore, her native city, Matilda Creager, and they have nine children—Margaret A., born in Baltimore; Sarah, Elizabeth and Jane, born in Texas, Baltimore County, Md.; Wm. J., born in Whartonsburg, O.; Alice J., Lovi I., Henry Z. and Charles, born in Hancock County, Ohio. Mr. Ewing brought his family to Kansas in October, 1869. Three teams, household goods and $1,200 comprised his possessions, and his first permanent location was where we now find him. His farm comprises 160 acres fenced with hedge, an orchard of 150 trees, a stone house, stables, etc., and all needed teams and implements for modern farming.

WILLIAM A. SUTTON, farmer, P. O. Beattie, was born 1834, in Chippewa County, Wis. Soon after his parents removed to McHenry County, Ill., thence to Floyd County, Iowa, and thence, in 1859, to Kansas. At this time the worldly effects of the family, comprising parents and five children, were drawn in a wagon, and their means, very limited, were all consumed during 1860 or the "bad year." W. A. Sutton enlisted in 1862 in the Eighth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, Company D, and served with that grand regiment of fighting patriots until Appomattox decided the fate of rebeldom. Since the war, Mr. Sutton has lived quietly as a Kansas farmer, following his threshing machine for about nine years. He is a member of Chase Post No. 101, of Beattie, has been J. P. four years, and can rightfully be looked upon as one of the substantial early settlers of Rock Township. He married in 1860 Miss Julia A. Life, whose father, Martin Life, was a settler of 1858 in Rock Township. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton have five children—Henry B., Mary E., Edward, Melissa and Wm. A.

WELLS TOWNSHIP.

JOSHUA HOWE, farmer, P. O. Frankfort, was born 1832, in Delaware County, Ohio. Eight years later his parents, Aaron and Sarah Howe, removed to Knox County, Ill., thence, in 1864, to Bedford, Iowa, where his mother died and father yet resides. Joshua Howe came to Kansas in May, 1861, and rented a farm west of Frankfort. He finally secured a farm of his own, and is now prospering in spite of the dread effects of the cyclone of 1879, which utterly destroyed his home, killed his only son and badly injured his wife. Misses Jonn Howe, Ida Osborn and Mr. J. T. Vaughn were in the house and escaped injury, with the exception of Miss Howe, who sustained slight bruises. Mr. Howe himself was saved by clinging desperately to a small tree in his orchard, but his son, John A. Howe, was blown over the orchard and killed instantly; all farm implements, wagons, etc., were blown away and wrecked, and but little save the bare land left to Mr. Howe, whose energetic spirit at once led to his rebuilding and final success.

J. B. McCONCHIE, farmer, P. O. Frankfort, was born in 1837, in Kirkcudbrightshire, Scotland. He came in 1853 to America and located in Illinois. In 18 2 he enlisted from Knox County, Ill., in Company I, One Hundred and Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry as a private, and served during the entire rebellion. His regiment was first employed in guarding Kentucky and Tennessee railroads, and in 1864 joined Gen. Sherman at Resaca, Ga., taking part in the great battle at that point. Thereafter, for eleven days, the regiment was under an almost continuous fire, then came the battles at Dallas, Kenesaw Mt., Peach Tree Creek, and the desperate battles about Atlanta, in all of which he was engaged. Marching with Sherman to the sea, Mr. McConchie's company was detached as foragers, and for many days the brave fellows were "corralled" on an island in the Savannah River, with forces of rebel cavalry all about them. The One Hundred and Second Illinois was the first of Sherman's regiments to enter South Carolina, and made a good record through to the surrender of Johnston and the collapse of the rebellion. Returning to Knox County, Ill., Mr. McConchie brought his wife out to Kansas in August, 1866. They lived four years in Home Township, Nemaha County, and from there came to the farm on which they now live. Mr McConchie has a prosperous record to show as regards Kansas. His farm comprises 240 acres, well improved and fenced, 1,000 peach and 200 apple trees, etc. They have eight children—William, Mary, Grant, John, Hattie, George, Edwin and Jennie. Frederick, the eldest son, died October 25, 1879, aged 21.

GEORGE N. MORSE, farmer, P. O. Frankfort, was born in 1844 in Troy, N. Y. Lived there until the age of fourteen, when he went with his father, J. M. Morse, and the family to Knox County, Ill. From Illinois he came to Kansas in August, 1866 homesteading his present farm. There was then but one or two houses between him and Marysville, and many a horseback chase he had after deer and wolf over the present site of Frankfort. He was one of the first to settle on the high prairie, and for a few years worked land for others, in order to get a start upon his own, and also followed house painting, etc. To-day we find him in a house of his own, consisting of seven rooms, on a well fenced and cultivated farm. He has one of the finest maple groves in Marshall County and a thrifty young orchard. His wife, married February 14, 1867, was a daughter of Robert Osborn, a substantial farmer near Frankfort. They have four children, all born on the Kansas farm.

CENTRE TOWNSHIP.

JOSEPH GREENLEAF, farmer, P. O. Reedsville; was born in 1844, in Onondaga County, N. Y. His parents settled two years later in Calhoun County, Mich., where he grew to manhood, and enlisted in 1864 in the Seventh Michigan Cavalry. His service was in the Shenandoah Valley, and the battles of Cedar Creek and Five Forks. His horse having been shot he was detailed for hospital duty, and served in Burkeville Station until near the close of the Rebellion. From 1865 to 1869 he lived in Michigan, then came to Kansas, and settled a year later on his present farm. Mr. Greenleaf has his farm in a good state of improvement and cultivation. His wife was Annie Hawkins, married June 28, 1876, and their three children, Mary A., Frank and Elizabeth, were all born on the Marshall County farm. Mr. Greenleaf is a stalwart Republican in politics, and a stirring well-to-do farmer.

ISAAC N. MARSHALL, farmer, P. O. Wells, was born May 16, 1848, in Guernsey County, Ohio, and reared in Hocking and Benton counties. He enlisted September 2, 1864, in the Union army, and was assigned to the Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Infantry; served under Gens. Sherman and Thomas, and participated in the desperately decisive battle of Nashville; was then transferred from Alexandria, Va., by water to Moorhead City, N. C., and to Sherman's army at Goldsboro. After the war he spent the summer of 1865 in Cass County, Mo., then resided a farmer in Fort Madison, Iowa, until his settlement in Kansas. Mr. Marshall is unmarried; is in religion a Methodist, and in politics a Republican.

JOHN MASSEY, farmer, P. O. Marysville, is a native of County Armagh, Ireland, born in 1839. His parents, James and Jane (Alderdice) Massey, emigrated to America and settled in Adams County, Ohio in 1848. From 1851 to 1868 he resided in Mercer County, Ohio; then came to Kansas, took a claim in Osage County, and engaged in the lumber business sawing out thousands of feet of United States timber, and thus secured a start in a small way. In July, 1869, he married Miss Sarah A. Allen, daughter of O. C. Allen, then the Central Branch land agent, and settled on his present farm bought of Major Jones, who had built an excuse for a house. In this old house Mr. Massey lived until his 160 acre farm was developed in the best state of improvement, and means secured to build just such a house as he had fixed upon, resulting in the erection of one of the best in Marshall County. It is two-stories, 20x30 with an L addition 16x18, the whole finished, fitted up, and painted in the best modern style, with ornamental porticos, verandas, windows, etc., rarely seen on a Kansas farm. In connection he has a well, so arranged as to supply his dairy and milk house, under which he has an excellent cellar. Mr. Massey served 100 days in the One Hundred and Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry during the Rebellion. His father died in Centre Township in 1880, aged eighty-two, and his mother still survives at the age of seventy-eight. Mr. and Mrs. Massey have seven children—Alberta, Mary B., Lillie M. and Minnie E., (twins); Julia, Jennie and Jessie, all born on the Centre farm. The only son died an infant. Mr. Massey has always been a Republican in political faith, and is rightfully looked upon as one of the most successful and enterprising farmers of his county.

CHARLES SATTERFIELD, farmer, P. O. Frankfort, was born in 1830, in Locust Grove, Adams Co., Ohio, and raised there a farmer. In August, 1862, he enlisted in the First Ohio Heavy Artillery; served in West Virginia, and helped build forts at Covington, Ky. He was then sent with part of the Battery to Johnson's Isle, Lake Erie, to guard against a suspected invasion from Canada. Spent another year guarding Covington, and at the end of the Rebellion located on a farm in his native county, where he lived until November, 1875, when he came to Centre, Marshall County, Kan. Was two years a renter, then bought his present eighty acre farm, where he has a good house, granary, stock lots, etc., and forty acres in cultivation. His wife was Christina Kisling, of Highland County, Ohio, and they have four children, born in Adams County, Ohio, viz.—Emma E., Alice, George W., and Sara V., and two—John N. and Ida L., born in Centre Township. Mr. Satterfield is a Democrat.

OSBORNE COUNTY.

TOPOGRAPHY AND GEOLOGY.

OSBORNE COUNTY is bounded on the north by Smith County, on the east by Mitchell and Lincoln, on the south by Russell and on the west by Rooks. It contains 900 square miles and 576,000 acres of land. The north fork of the Solomon River runs diagonally through the two northeastern townships, and the south fork of the same stream runs entirely through the county from west to east, confining itself to the seventh range of townships. The North and South Solomon in Osborne County have an average fall through the county of over eleven feet per mile until they unite at Waconda, in the county east, where the average fall is only ten feet. Hence the frequency of mills along this stream. These streams take up in their course many small streams and rivulets, among the most important of which are Little Medicine, Kill Creek, Covert Creek, Indian Creek and the Twin Creeks. On the North Fork, Joy, Lawrence and Twelve Mile creeks are among the largest. In the south part of the county many streams head which are tributary to the Saline River, and flow nearly south; the largest of these are Salt, Eagle and Wolf creeks. The whole county, except the valleys of the Solomon, is a high, rolling prairie, with about 20 per cent of bottom land. Only 2 per cent of the land of the county is native timber, and this, as is usual in the western counties, is wholly confined to the banks of the streams. The absence of building timber in quantity is atoned for by an abundance of the best building stone, which crops out in nearly every township. It is a cretaceous limestone, almost white in color, easily quarried and worked. Nearly all the business buildings and many of the farm houses are built of this rock.

In 1870 the first census of the then unorganized county, taken by Charles Welch, of Mitchell County, accompanied by a squad of soldiers, reported the inhabitants as numbering thirty-three. In 1880, the report showed that the respectable figure of 12,518 had been reached. The majority of the people are engaged in farming in its various branches, although stock-raising is fast taking the place of agriculture. The soil is very fertile, being composed of a rich vegetable mould with a liberal mixture of mineral substances, sand and lime. It varies in depth from two to fifteen feet, and is particularly adapted to withstand protracted drouth.

The yield of wheat in 1882 was quite large, 26,439 acres having been planted, which yielded twenty bushels per acre, or a total of 528,780 bushels of winter wheat alone. The spring wheat yield was very light, only about 40,000 bushels having been harvested. Of corn 48,764 acres were planted which averaged only twenty bushels per acre, the total amounting to 975,280 bushels. About 8,000 acres of rye was harvested, with an average yield of twenty-five bushels; oats, 2,500 acres with an average of forty bushels; and about 800 acres of Irish potatoes, with a total yield of 65,000 bushels. The broom corn crop did well, 8,766 acres having been planted, and 2,200 tons harvested. About 1,000 acres of sorghum were planted in the county, and the yield of syrup is 112,680 gallons.

made up their minds to abandon this territory; hence the absence of anything startling under this head. In the fall of 1878, when the raid across the western part of the State was in progress, a stampede of the settlers on the creeks southwest of town filled Osborne, the county-seat, full of terrified people. The people of the town read the daily papers, and proved that the savages were in Nebraska, and the settlers fell back and resumed their peaceful avocations.

The earliest settler lived on the north fork, near the mouth of Twelve Mile Creek, and was drowned in the winter or early spring of 1870. Zara M. Hill made the first entry of land in Osborne County on the north fork of the river, between Downs and Bethany. He was then a buffalo hunter, but is now a prosperous farmer living on the land first entered.

In March, 1870, two brothers, named Bullock, made the first permanent settlement in this county on the north side of the south fork, near where the village of Bloomington now stands. They built a rude log cabin, half fortress, which was a place of resort for frontiersmen. These were shortly followed by James Weston and family, who located on Covert Creek. The north Solomon was settled by J. J. Wiltrout, Crosby brothers and Z. T. Walrond, in the vicinity of Portis. Mr. P. Ray located and built a good log house on the river south of the present city of Downs, about the 20th of May, 1870. W. T. Kelly and E. McCormick, settled in Corinth Township about this time, but up to January 20, when the United States census was taken, all told, the county had only thirty-three settlers, four of whom were females, viz: Mrs. Weston and daughters.

John Kaser and family were among the next settlers, and in July, 1871, Mrs. Kaser gave birth to her son Albertus, to whom belongs the honor of being the third child born in the county. While engaged in the subject of first births in the county, the attention of the reader is called to the fact that several young people claim that honor, through their parents. On the 4th day of May, 1871, Miss Bertha Manning was born, and the physician who attended her mother was called, on his return, to attend at the birth of Miss Lilly Dewey, four hours later. This was two months previous to the arrival of Albertus Kaser.

In May following, the town site of Osborne City, was selected by a Pennsylvania colony composed of thirty-five men from Berks and Lancaster counties. They all entered land in this township. Col. W. L. Bear was the President, and Dr. J. P. Moore, Secretary. On the 9th of May they filed upon the present town site of Osborne, and built a log house and stockade, a half mile south of town. The previous fall, in November, the New Haven colony settled on Twelve-mile Creek, in the extreme northern part of the county. Smith County secured the larger part of this wealthy and ever prosperous colony.

In the month of November, 1870, Gen. H. C. Bull founded a city, which received his name, and erected the pioneer store building. The first store in the county was kept by Calvin Reasoner, on the John Kaser farm, near the center of the county.

July 16, 1874, C. H. Cook, a merchant of Bull's City, killed his only child with a hatchet, and then failing in an attempt to kill his wife, committed suicide. He was a noble gentleman, well liked by everybody, and his sudden insanity could not be satisfactorily accounted for by those who knew him most intimately.

On the 12th of October, 1879, Gen. H.C. Bull, of Bull's City, one of the pioneers of the valley—the first Probate Judge of the county, and its representative in the State Legislature—met with a most horrible death. Two friends and comrades, named George Nicholas and Robert Brickell, shared the same fate. Gen. Bull had been keeping several wild animals in a park at his place. A large male elk became unmanageable, and the General attempted to correct the animal, which became infuriated, rushed upon him and gored him to death inflicting forty-four wounds upon his body. Nicholas and Brickell attempted to rescue the General, and were killed upon the spot, Nicholas having sixty-four wounds, and Brickell thirty-two. William Sherman appeared on the scene to assist, and was tossed against the park fence and wounded, but escaped by flight. Over 2,000 persons attended the funerals of these men.

The county is divided into 117 school districts; 2,590 scholars are enrolled out of 3,701 pupils of school age. The average daily attendance for the year ending July 31st, is 1,655, while the expenses for the year for school purposes amount to $17,089.71. The first school in the county was taught in District No. 1, in Independence Township, by Miss Carrie Smith. Among the early schools in the county was that over Markley & Bears store, in Osborne City in 1872, taught by Miss Gates; one at Bull's City in 1872, by Miss Stockbridge. Miss Gates is now Mrs. Wintermyer, of Howard County. This county now employs 121 teachers; there are ninety-one school buildings in the county, and ninety-seven rooms.

Osborne County shared the general grasshopper set-back of 1874. This scourge afflicted the whole northwest, until the cold wet weather of the approaching winter destroyed them. John A. Boring, in the Osborne Times of July 30th, says: "The grasshoppers made their advent into our county the latter part of last week, and are devouring everything before them. We noticed several fields of corn literally alive with them, being almost unable to see, either the corn or the ground. We hear reports of their ravages from every portion of Osborne and Rooks counties, and up to this writing they are still with us, carrying on their work of desolation and ruin among the fields of our farmers."

This variety of the curse came again in 1875, and laid their eggs in nearly all the sandy soil over the county, but the rains of the spring of 1876 totally destroyed them.

POLITICAL HISTORY.

On the 27th of May, 1871, the first meeting was held at Reasoner's store at Arlington, to take preliminary steps towards organizing the county. A census was ordered taken, and C. M. Cunningham, W. W. Bullock and A. B. Fleming appointed Census Committee.

September 12, Gov. J. M. Harvey, by proclamation, declared the county organized, and appointed temporary officers as follows: Commissioners—Samuel Chatfield, C. M. Cunningham, Frank Stafford; County Clerk—Frank Thompson. An election being held on the 7th of November, and the question of the location of the county-seat being before the people, Osborne City was selected, by a vote of 126; Tilden, 30; Arlington, 41; Emley City, 18. The first county officers were then elected as follows: Sheriff—C. M. Cunningham; Treasurer—John Joy; Clerk—C. W. Crampton; Attorney—H. H. Napier; Clerk of Court—C. J. Watson; Register of Deeds—A. B. Fleming; Surveyor—F. R. Gruger; Probate Judge—H. C. Bull; Superintendent of Public Instruction—J. T. Saxton; Coroner—S. B. Farwell; Commissioners—P. W. Kenyon, F. Stafford, J. J. Hays; Representative—W. L. Bear.

In the following February, the Commissioners were petitioned to call another election for the re-location of the county-seat, which was ordered for March 19, 1872. In this election Osborne City received 225 votes; Arlington, 144; Tilden, 49, and Emley, 46. No town having received a majority of the votes cast, another special election was ordered by the Commissioners, and the towns receiving the two highest votes at the previous election only in the field. The result was: Osborne City, 267 votes; Arlington, 217. Township officers were also elected at this election, the county having been divided into voting precincts as follows: Bethany, Bloom, Liberty, Penn and Sumner. The last effort to re-locate the county-seat was made June 22, 1874, when a petition containing 600 names was presented to the County Commissioners, praying for an election to re-locate the county-seat. The Board, after long and mature deliberation, decided, taking the census of 1873 as a basis, that there were not enough legal names on the petition to give them authority to call an election. Thus the rising hopes and aspirations of Tilden and Emley City were doomed.

After the April election in 1872, the Osborne City Town Company, proceeded at once to build a large stone court house, at an expense of $2,000. This was for a few years the subject of considerable litigation; the elements finally foreclosed their claim on the building, and the county officers removed to Reasoner's building in Osborne. In later years, the necessity of a court house being patent to all, the citizens of Osborne again put their hands into their pockets and raised $1,800, with which the present frame court house was built. County affairs are now most prosperously and peaceably handled by the following officers: County Clerk—Frank Stafford; Treasurer—W. F. Cochran; Sheriff—John M. Babcock; Attorney—Z. T. Walrond; Superintendent of Public Instruction—A. W. Robertson; Probate Judge—O. F. Smith; Recorder—Abe. Smith; Clerk of Court—L. A. Linville; Surveyor—J. W. McIntyre; Coroner—A. C. Dillon; Commissioners—David Jewell, J. J. Guyer, Perry Doak.

The assessed valuation of all property in the county, by townships, as reported March 1, 1882, is as follows:

Ross,	$ 150,068 38	Kill Creek,	$ 22,432 00

OSBORNE CITY.

Osborne City was founded by a colony of Pennsylvanians who located here in May, 1871. The town company was composed of thirty-five members, W. L. Bear, President. The plat originally filed January 11, 1873, embraces in the town site the southeast quarter of southeast quarter of Section 18 and the north half of southeast quarter of Section 19, Town 7 south, Range 12 west. Rader's addition was afterward added on the east, Yoxall's on the north, and Hoffman's on the northwest.

July 1, the postoffice was established here and named Osborne, since which time the word city has been dropped as a part of the name.

H. D. Markley was appointed post-master, he was succeeded by F. Yoxall, who in turn gave way to R. R. Hays, who was appointed receiver of the Kirwin Land Office and the Osborne postoffice passed into the hands of C. W. Crampton, the present incumbent. Early in the year 1873 Walter Jerome was born. He was the son of the editor of the Times. A note is made of this event as the lad was presented with a town lot by the Town company, in honor of his being the first to arrive on the town site through the regular channels.

On the 28th of May, 1873, Judge A. J. Banta, of the fifteenth judicial district, proclaimed Osborne a city of the third class. The people failed at that time to organize a city government legally, and on the 21st of December, 1878, Judge Holt again decreed the city a city of the third class and ordered an election, which resulted in the choice of the following city officers:

Mayor, J. W. Elliott; Councilmen—R. G. Hays, E. Smith, J. M. Morgan, A. Smith, Z. T. Walrond; Police Judge, A. Anderson; Clerk, F. E. Leebrick; Treasurer, A. N. Fritchey.

The present officers are: Mayor, Calvin Reasoner; Councilmen, F. Yoxall, A. B. Coates, John Foutz, F. P. Wells; Marshal, R. H. Bell; Police Judge, L. A. Linville; Clerk, A. W. Robertson.

This city is without a regular fire department of any kind. Prairie fires have been the only phase of the scourge to be dreaded. The second school in the county was taught in Osborne by Miss Gates, as before referred to. In 1873 the people of Osborne district voted $2,000 in bonds for the erection of a schoolhouse, which was immediately built of stone. In 1878 $3,000 more bonds were voted for an addition, and District No. 9 now boasts one of the most substantial and handsome schoolhouses in the western part of the State.

Among the other public improvements here worthy of note is the iron bridge across the Solomon, built by Messrs Bolvin & Wise, of Leavenworth, in consideration of $3,000 bonds of Penn township, issued in 1878, August 10. In the fall of 1878 considerable excitement prevailed among the men of capital in reference to a pork-packing establishment at this point. One P. H. Walker, a man of considerable means, was the leader, but owing to petty jealousies the scheme was abandoned, much to the regret of many of the most substantial citizens of Osborne. Mr. Walker is now in Philadelphia.

The school of Osborne City is one of its distinctive features. As heretofore mentioned the schoolhouse was built in 1873 and added to in 1878 until it now is capable of accommodating two hundred scholars, who are under the instruction of four teachers. James H. Whitecotton is principal.

The school board in District No. 9 is composed of C. W. Crampton, Director; S. B. Farwell, Clerk; and C. Reasoner, Treasurer. School has been held regularly in this city since Miss Gates taught early in the winter of 1871 and 1872. The school house is of magnesian lime stone, two stories in height and built in the form of a cross.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

M. E. Church.—The records of this society in this city show that in May, 1871, the church was organized. The membership was then very small, but a pastor was secured in the person of Rev. J. C. Ayers, since deceased. The present pastor is E. H. Fleisher. The church has a convenient parsonage, valued at $550. It numbers forty-three members, and the Sabbath-school has an average attendance of sixty. No house of worship is as yet provided.

Moravian Church.—In June, 1880, this church was organized. It now numbers a membership of over forty. The pastor who was chiefly instrumental in bringing about the organization is Charles Steinfort. Rev. Charles Bickseeker was for a long time pastor, and was succeeded by Rev. H. V. Romiger. In 1881 a splendid stone church was completed on Washington street, at an expense of several hundred dollars. The church property is valued at $3,500. A flourishing Sunday-school of thirty scholars is regularly maintained.

The Presbyterian Church of Osborne was organized October, 1878, with nineteen members, including five trustees and three elders. This organization was the result of the missionary labors of Rev. J. M. Batchelder, acting under the direction of the Solomon Presbytery. He is the present pastor. The present membership of the church is fifty-one. In the spring of 1882 the society bought the property known as the "Library Hall," and reconstructed it into a handsome and commodious church edifice, 30x50 feet in dimensions, and valued at $1,000. A Sabbath-school is maintained regularly, with an average attendance of about forty scholars; it has a fine library of over three hundred volumes.

In connection with this work of Mr. Batchelder, appears the organization of the church of Covert, in March, 1882, with ten members; also the church of Kill Creek, in Kill Creek township, at the same date, with eight members. This latter society has an enthusiastic Sabbath-school of thirty-five members.

In the year 1876, the Rev. H. F. Albright assisted in organizing the Presbyterian Church of Twelve Mile Creek, now Rose Valley; the original organization numbered but fourteen members. Mr. Batchelder is their present pastor, and the church is in a prosperous condition and regularly maintains a good Union Sunday-school, with an average attendance, both summer and winter, of forty scholars. This society has a sufficient fund on hand to commence building a church building which will cost about $900.

Congregational Church.—This was the first church of this faith to organize so far west in the homestead region. On the 26th day of May, 1872, the First Congregational Church of Osborne was organized with R. R. Hays, D. Tindal and J. J. Hays as trustees. Rev. Richard B. Foster was the first pastor, and was chiefly instrumental in building the handsome church building on the south side of town. He remained with the church as pastor for about ten years. THE PRESS AND BUSINESS INDUSTRIES.

In January, 1873, J. J. Johnson and F. E. Jerome, then of Beloit, aided by a small subsidy from the Osborne Town Company, commenced the publication of the Osborne Times, under the firm name of F. E. Jerome & Co. Mr. Jerome was sole and exclusive manager and editor, assisted by a staid and verdant devil. In July the town company assumed charge of the paper, by virtue of a purchase of Mr. Johnson's interest, and Calvin Reasoner bestrode the editorial tripod. Mr. Reasoner was a success in the place. The Times then passed into the hands of John Boring and William Rader, members of the town company. James H. Bower owned an interest in the paper, and for a brief time assisted Boring in the editorial management. In November, 1874, the Times died a natural death, and for two months Osborne City was without a paper. In January, 1875, the town company effected a sale of their material to F. H. Barnhart, who commenced the publication of the Osborne Farmer, a Republican newspaper, which is yet in the field and one of the strong papers of the State and one of the solid financial institutions of Osborne. Mr. Barnhart is a native of Chautauqua County, New York, and has been a printer nearly all his life. His management of the Farmer indicates that as a business man he is a success. A move is now on foot to publish another paper at this point.

Columbus Borin came to Osborne in September, 1879, and commenced the publication of a handsome six-column quarto called the Truth-Teller. Mr. Borin had been for some time a resident of Nebraska, and, although quite a young man, had been chosen to represent his county in the State Legislature. He made the Truth-Teller a respectable rival of the Farmer for nearly a year, but finally realized that his income was too small for his newspaper ambition, and he hastily abandoned the field and returned to Nebraska. He has since returned to Norton County, where he is principal of the public schools and busily engaged as a student for the ministry.

Osborne is now a solidly built town, many of the business houses being constructed of magnesian limestone, artistically built and an ornament to any city.

On the river, southeast of the city, E. M. Beach and sons have a large three-story stone flouring mill, with three run of stone, which makes a good grade of flour, attends to all custom work, and adds materially to the business of the town. The mill was erected at a cost of $8,000, in 1879, and was added to in 1880.

A branch of the Bank of Beloit is in operation here, and has an additional capital of $25,000, under the management of W. H. Burke. Mr. Burke was one of the first settlers of Osborne County, having located in Delhi Township, in 1871, with a large herd of cattle. Having business tact and a desire to do office work, the banking business presented the opportunity, and he availed himself of the opening at the county seat. He still holds large herds of cattle at different points in the county, and is also, in connection with Harry Dobbs, the largest grain buyer in the city. They have a warehouse at the depot, through which a large part of the surplus grain of the county is shipped. Charles Wooley also does a banking business at this point, in connection with a loan and insurance business.

The Lipton House, a four-storied building, is one of the best conducted hotels in the West, and although Osborne has other hotels, the Lipton, owned and conducted by the gentleman for whom it is named, is now the leader of all.

BULL'S CITY.

The little frontier settlement founded by General H. C. Bull, as heretofore mentioned, nine miles in advance of Bullock's ranch, then the frontier settlement in the county, has grown to be one of the leading commercial towns in the State. In August, 1872, the town plat of this town was recorded, and included in the description as the north half of the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of Section 12; and the east half of the northwest quarter of Section 12; and the south half of the southwest quarter of Section 1, Town 7 south, Range 15 west.

A postoffice had been established here through the influence of General Bull in the fall of 1870, and himself appointed postmaster, which appointment he held until his tragic death (heretofore mentioned) when his estimable wife, Mrs. Sarah M. Bull, was appointed his successor, which place she still occupies.

While this town was in embryo, the early settlers provided themselves with the necessary currency by the pursuit of the buffalo for his hide. The nucleus for several large fortunes was here, and in this manner acquired. Mr. S. S. Vansickle, now a prosperous attorney of the town, was in early times a buffalo hunter. At last the rigors of an inclement winter deprived him of his fingers and his toes, but his active mind saved him from a frightful death and now provides him with the means of procuring a good living.

In 1872 the school district in which Bull's City was then located, voted $1,500 in bonds of the district, and built a good commodious stone school building where a good school has been conducted ever since. The first teacher was Miss Stockbridge and the present one is Mr. Frank Borin. The building is too small to accommodate all the scholars of the district, and will soon be enlarged. The present school board is composed of J. B. Taylor, E. F. Robinson and P. Campbell.

Although the city contains a sufficient number of inhabitants, they have never petitioned the Judge for a city government.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The Press.—The Osborne County Key is a six-column folio, established here in the fall of 1880, by George E. Dougherty, who shortly after sold it to A. J. Runyon, the present editor and proprietor. Mr. Runyon came to Kansas from Iowa, and for some time had charge of the Methodist Episcopal church at Bull's City as its pastor. The Key requiring too much of his attention, he resigned the pastorship and devoted his whole time to his newspaper.

Churches.—The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in February, 1880, with only fifteen members. Rev. W. A. Saville was the first pastor. It now numbers thirty-seven members, and is cared for by Rev. E. G. Carey. A Sabbath-school is held regularly, with an average attendance of thirty scholars. They have stone and lumber on the ground for a church building, 28x45, and the walls are well under way. The building is estimated to cost $1,500, $250 of which will be furnished by the Church Extension Society. Hawkeye Center, northeast of Bull's City, has also an organization of this church, containing sixty members, also in charge of Rev. E. G. Carey. Small classes at Little Medicine and Kill Creek are also organized, and under the care of Mr. Carey.

The Congregational Church.—In 1875, Rev. Mr. Eckman, of Osborne, was instrumental in organizing the Congregational church at Bull's City, and was for several years its pastor. The society now numbers thirty-five members, in charge of Rev. L. G. McHenry. The church has no house of worship, although a building is contemplated for the coming season.

Societies.—On the 1st of October, 1882, a Lodge of the Knights of Pythias was established here with about twenty-seven members. The officers are now—J. R. Fitzsimmons, C. C.; F. E. Hall, P. C.; J. B. Taylor V. C.; William Rosegrant, P.; Frank Fifield, K. of R. & S. The Lodge is in a flourishing condition, and anticipates the early erection of a castle of its own.

Gen. H. C. Bull Post, No. 106, G. A. R., was organized here in July, 1882, and now numbers forty members. The officers are as follows: P. H. Campbell, P. C.; R. S. Buell, Adjt.; Charles Guthrie, Q. M.; E. Fuller, Chaplain.

Occidental Lodge, No. 207, A. F. & A. M., was organized under dispensation in November, 1880. The Lodge now numbers twenty-three members, and is presided over by J. M. Babcock, W. M., with E. L. Ives, as Secretary.

Custer Lodge, No. 106, I. O. O. F., Lodge was chartered March 6, 1880. The present officers are: T. M. Walker, N. G.; J. C. Schooler, V. G.; Bert Childs, Secretary; P. H. Campbell, Treas. The number of members at present writing is thirty-eight. The lodge property is valued at $200.

Business Industries.—This city is the present western terminus of the Central Branch Railroad, or that division which extends up the South Solomon. The railroad business of the county of Rooks is all done here, making this quite an extensive shipping point. Broom corn and wheat are the chief exports this season, and the trade in the former product has been immense. The town has several large stores carrying a general stock; two exclusive drug stocks; two large and convenient hotels, bank and lumber yard. It has the reputation of being one of the best business towns in the northwest.

The bank of Bull's City is owned and conducted by Messrs. Loomis, Robinson & Co. Mr. Loomis has for years been the agent of the Central Branch railroad at its western stations while building. Mr. Robinson was formerly a partner in the Bank of Logan. They are energetic and accommodating business men who are well liked. Mr. Rosegrant is the Co. in the concern, and has special charge of the lumber yard branch of their business.

A long combination wood and iron bridge spans the river south of the town; it was built in 1881, the funds for building being procured by voting township bonds for same. The bridge cost nearly $3,000, a part of which was raised by donations from business men and public spirited citizens.

A large three-story stone mill one-half mile south of the town, owned by W. W. Bush, erected in 1875, and improved since with three run of stone in constant operation, is one of the chief manufacturing interests. This mill is valued at $10,000.

Messrs. Chamberlain & Post are proprietors of a mill one mile west of town, which keeps two run of stone in motion night and day. This is commonly known as the Advent mill, and is a good property, valued at about $7,000. These mills add much to the business of Bull's City.

A grain warehouse at the depot is in constant use this fall to accommodate the wheat trade

The original proprietors were John A. Beal, and A. Z. Blunt. The idea of making a town at this point sprang into existence at once when the Central Branch railroad concluded to make this tract of land the place where the road should fork and pursue its westward course up each branch of the Solomon river. Pennington Ray was one of the first settlers on the river just south of the city. (See county history.)

The railroad company made this place the end of the division, located and built a six stall round house, and commenced the erection of a repair shop, which at present employs about twenty men, and in December, 1879, Judge Joel Holt, after considering a petition of the citizens for the purpose of establishing a city government, ordered an election December 30, 1872, which resulted in the election of the following municipal officers:—Mayor, J. B. Craney; Councilmen, G. W. Howell, J. E. Kentzel, L. F. Pennington, O. Denton and John Parish; Clerk, J. G. Poole.

The present city government is administered by the following officers: Mayor, W. G. Harvey; Councilmen, F. P. Voorhees, F. M. Wells, D. G. Gardner, C. C. Vining, Wm. Duden; Clerk, J. G. Poole; J. P., Wm. Willford. The city grew rapidly and in August, 1880, school bonds were issued in the sum of $3,000 and a respectable two story stone school building erected; an after bond of $500 was voted for the completion of the building, which is now one of the best in the county. The present school board is S. A. Getty, Director; E. M. Jones, Clerk, and John Henricks, Treasurer. The teacher is Charles Hahn, with Laura Bradley, Assistant. The first school held in this township was at the house of Z. C. Young, one mile east of Downs, in the winter of 1871 and 1872, and was taught by Smith R. Young.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The Press.—On the 9th day of February, 1880, Thomas G. Nicklin commenced the publication of the Downs Times. Mr. Nicklin is a newspaper man in all that the term implies. He made the Times a success from the start, printed it handsomely, edited it ably, and made it a home production of merit, as well as a financial success. Mr. Nicklin came to Kansas from Pennsylvania, where he had been taught "the art preservative," and in Kansas is now making his way. At present he is the editor and sole owner of the Salina Herald, a note of which will appear in the recorded history of Salina. May 25, George Dougherty, of the Osborne County Key, bought the Times, and has since carried it successfully along. Mr. Dougherty is a young man of ambition and industry, who came here from Illinois. His first business venture was at Glen Elder, in the county east of this, where he printed a weekly newspaper on a press of his own invention. Mr. Dougherty is now by his hard work and easily applied talent, fast working to the front.

Churches.—The first organization of the Congregational Church in this city was brought about October 23, 1879, by Rev. J. A. Covey. The church now has over forty members and a creditable building, which was erected in 1880 at an expense of $1,5 0. The church is at present without a pastor, although a flourishing Sabbath-school of 100 scholars is regularly conducted.

In the winter of 1879, a class of the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in this city and a Sabbath-school immediately placed in working condition, and has been maintained regularly ever since. R. W. Knox, now of the Government works in Leavenworth, was for a time its Superintendent. In 1882 a plain and neat church edifice was erected at an expense of $1,300. A parsonage, which cost over $400, is also provided for the resident pastor, who, at present, is the Rev. J. T. Riley.

As early as April 3, 1876, the Rev. Z. Thomas effected an organization of the Baptist Church at this point, which has been actively in operation since that date. In 1880 a large stone church building was nearly completed when it was destroyed by the wind, and its walls subsequently razed. In spite of the frowns of the elements the church remains in working order, having now a membership of twenty and a Sabbath school with an average attendance of about fifty-eight. The church has been without a pastor for some time, but Elder Archer will officiate during the coming year.

Societies.—An enthusiastic organization of the Knights of Pythias, known as Magnolia Lodge, No. 74, was placed in working order in this town November 1, 1882. The membership, although numbering only twenty-five, is composed of that element which must attract others. The officers are: William Duden, C. C.; F. J. Gardner, V. C.; J. W. Nicholas, P. C.; George Garner, P.; A. Wade, K. of R. and S.; W. G. Harvey, M. of F.; M. Meibergen, M. of F.

Downs Lodge, No. 204, A. F. & A. M., was organized August 2, 1881, and chartered February 15, 1882. The present officers are: John Henricks W. M.; J. W. Huff, S. W.; George Garner, J. W.; W. W. Dimond, S. D.; Henry Jones, J. D.; C. M. Forline, Sec'y; F. D. Young, Treasurer. The lodge numbers thirty-five members and has property to the amount of $4 0.

Business Interests.—The business of the city is chiefly mercantile and the business connected with the railroads. There are two large hotels, an extensive lumber yard, and a branch of the First National Bank of Cawker City. The bank is in charge of J. W. Huff as cashier, and William Mellen, attorney.

A large five-story flouring mill on the river south of the city is the chief manufacturing interest. The mill was built by the Jackson Brothers, who also built and own one four miles east, at an expense of $25, 00. It contains two rollers and four run of stone, and is generally conceded to be the best mill on the river.

A splendid iron bridge, built at an expense of $4,000, spans the river, which runs across the southern borders of the town.

With its railroad connections and interests and the vast scope of agricultural country surrounding it, Downs bids fair to become one of the leading towns of the Solomon country.

PORTIS.

This little town is situated on the north fork of the Solomon, and has been since 1871 a good trading point. It was platted in May, 1879, as Bethany, and included a part of the northwest quarter of Section 5, and northeast quarter of Section 6, Town 6 south, Range 12 west. When the Central Branch railroad made this one of the stations, and then passed into the hands of the Missouri Pacific, that road found itself embarrassed by having two stations named Bethany—the other being in Missouri—and by mutual consent the name of this town was changed to Portis, in honor of the vice-president of the Missouri Pacific. P. A. Judson and Samuel Chatfield were among the first settlers and business men. The town now contains several elegant business buildings, large hotel and newspaper. The Portis Patriot, a well printed seven-column folio was started about the first of 1872 by I. N. Drummond, who is still conducting the paper. Mr. Drummond is a life-long printer, who came to this State in the fall of 1871 from Iowa. He worked for a few weeks at Beloit and then purchased the dormant material at Portis and issued the Patriot. It is a good local paper and fairly reflects the business of the town. A good school and also Union Sabbath-school have been conducted at this place since the spring of 1872.

BLOOMINGTON.

Bloomington is a little hamlet on the railroad, six miles west of the county seat. It was platted as a town site and called Tilden in May, 1873, and the following May the name was changed to Bloomington. It is recorded as occupying the south-east quarter of Section 8, Town 7, Range 13. This town once had hopes of being the county seat, but is now only noted for being situated in the center of a rich agricultural district. In August, 1879, an organization of the Baptist Church was effected at this place. It now has a membership of twenty-three, and conducts a Sabbath-school with an average attendance of about forty. It has no pastor at present writing.

DELHI.

Delhi is in the southeast part of the county, and is quite a trading point, and has great expectations of a railroad from Salina up the Saline Valley, via Lincoln Center. The Catholic Church has an organization here, under charge of Rev. Clemens Newman, of Cawker City.

NEMAHA COUNTY.

TOPOGRAPHY.

NEMAHA COUNTY adjoins Nebraska on the south, and is the third county of Kansas in the northern tier west of the Missouri River. It is bounded on the east by Brown and Jackson Counties, on the south by Jackson and Pottawatomie, and on the west by Marshall. Its size is twenty-four miles east and west, and thirty miles north and south, its area comprising 460,800 acres of land, 247,117 acres of which is divided into farms in the counties; contains about 87 per cent. of prairie and 10 per cent. of bottom lands, the amount of timber being estimated at about 3 per cent. The surface of the land, taken as a whole, is sufficiently rolling to insure good drainage, and hence is admirably adapted for both grazing and agricultural purposes. Good water is abundant—in fact, it may be said of all of Northeastern Kansas, that very few of the prairie States are so generously supplied with streams. The great water-shed in the northern part of the State lies in Town 4, Range 13, in Harrison Township, of Nemaha County. The waters run southward, making the heads of Elk, Soldier and the Red Vermillion, and northward, making the heads of the south branch of Harris, Tennessee, Hickey, Illinois and Wild Cat Creeks, which find their way into the Nemaha, the latter leaving the county in Town 1, Range 12. None of the streams afford water power; but they pervade almost every portion of the county, and no considerable amount of prairie is far from timber. The average width of the creek bottoms is one mile, of the timber belts half that width. The soil is a dark, sandy loam, varying in depth from one to six feet, with a reddish clay subsoil, underlaid with limestone, the latter, of a quality suitable for building purposes, cropping out in various localities. Sandstone is also found in limited quantities. Numerous coal beds abound, of little value, except in Illinois Township, where two shafts are worked, the product being used locally; and in Washington Township, where a vein eighteen to twenty-four inches thick has recently been discovered. The native timber is hickory, oak, hackberry, elm, walnut, cottonwood, locust, sycamore and ash; the agricultural products comprising all almost that are indigenous to the temperate zone, the principal being wheat, barley, corn, oats and rye. Of wheat the yield is from fifteen to twenty-five bushels to the acre, of corn the average yield is about fifty-five bushels, of oats about fifty bushels. Root crops, such as potatoes, sugar beets and turnips do remarkably well.

Wild fruits are moderately abundant, particularly plums and grapes, while the cultivated varieties of these may be found in every township in profusion. Peaches do well if protected from the winter winds, and no better country for the apple orchard can be found anywhere.

Artificial forestry has been carried to such an extent that the prairie farms are nearly all embellished with one or more thriving groves, from one half an acre to four, six and ten acres in extent. The growth of young trees, both fruit and forest, is very rapid.

Nemaha County is pre-eminently adapted to stock raising, the highly nutritious properties of the native grasses being best seen in the rapid change which takes place when cattle that have been poorly wintered, luxuriate on the young grass of May and June, the hair rapidly becoming smooth and glossy, and the animals taking on flesh very quickly.

The climate is salubrious, mild winters and healthful summers being the rule, for while the summer day may be such as is best for the great staple—corn—the night atmosphere is certain to be cool and bracing. The averagerain fall for the past five years, from 1876 to 1881, both inclusive, has been 44.03 inches per annum.

EARLY HISTORY.

The territory now known as Nemaha County was originally, or at the time of the earliest white settlement, in the possession of various tribes of Indians, notably the Pottawatomies and the Foxes. Prior to this settlement, however, and to any knowledge we have of its native occupants, is the record of the history of its discovery, the soil of Nemaha County being pressed by the foot of civilized white men before a vestige of settlement other than that of the aborigines had touched any of the thirteen original colonies. In the Smithsonian Institute are the records of an expedition, under the command of Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, a Spaniard, which marched from Mexico to the northern boundary of Kansas, passing through the territory now known as Barbour, Kingman, Reno, Sedgwick, Harvey, McPherson, Marion, Dickinson, Davis, Riley, Pottawatomie and Nemaha Counties, reaching the fortieth degree of latitude, the northern boundary of Nemaha County and of the State, in the month of August, 1541. Coronado says that the country north of the Kaw was called by the Indians, Quivira. He says: "The earth is the best possible for all kinds of productions of Spain; for while it is very strong and black, it is very well watered by brooks, springs and rivers. I found prunes (wild plums) like those of Spain, some of which were black; also some excellent grapes and mulberries." Before reaching this point, he had traversed "mighty plains and sandy heaths, smooth and wearisome, and bare of wood." He says: "All that way the plains are as full of crooked-back oxen (buffalo) as the mountain Serena, in Spain, is of sheep." The expedition appears to have originally consisted of three hundred and fifty Spaniards and eight hundred Indians, but, provisions failing the party in the neighborhood of the present site of Wichita, the main body turned back; the indomitable Coronado, with thirty-six picked men, passing on in hope of finding the cities of gold, which tradition and their guides, told them, lay "just beyond." This then, as nearly as can be ascertained, was the strength of the party which reached Nemaha County.

No other expedition of any importance is known to have crossed the territory in question, until the second journey of Fremont—that of 1842—his route extending across Nemaha County, entering the county south of Sabetha, extending northwest to Baker's Ford, turning south to near Seneca, and leaving the county at Town 1, Range 11; the tortuous path of the expedition being due to its inability to cross streams, and of course, to its entire want of knowledge as to where the streams were. This road, with slight modifications, was afterward traveled by the Mormons in 1844, at the beginning of their exodus to Utah. In 1849, it was the trail of the California gold-seekers, and subsequently, the military road, along which passed many of the troops bound for the far West.

About 1852, Benjamin Harding, an Indian trader, settled on the site of Wathena, in Doniphan County, there being no other settlement effected in this section to the west of that point until 1854. In January of that year, W. W. Moore came from St. Joseph and located in the proximity of Baker's Ford on the Nemaha, some nine miles from Seneca, the name of Moorestown being subsequently given to the eighteenth election district. This point was afterwards known as Urbana, though as a settlement it hardly deserved a distinguishing name, except as it was near the centre of immediately subsequent settlements. In February of the same year, Walter D. Beeles settled to the north of Moore's place, and in March, Greenberry Key; Thomas, John C. and Jacob B. Newton locating upon the Nemaha, and somewhat to the south, in April. John O'Laughlin, formerly of Iowa, accompanied this party from St. Joseph and took a valuable claim on Turkey Creek. On the 4th of July a meeting of the settlers was held at Urbana, the object being to arrange for the protection of each other in their claims. Of this meeting John Castle was Chairman, and George T. Bobst, Secretary, both residents of Nebraska, where the latter had arrived on June 11, 1854, accompanied by Robert Turner, proceeding north from Urbana, and settling just over the future Territorial line. At the time of this meeting, no settlement, except in the vicinity of the Nemaha, had been effected west of the Wolf River and Harding's station; the early settlement of Nemaha County, preceding the formal ceding of the Northern Kansas lands by the Indians, being due to the understanding that a twenty mile strip along the valley of the Nemaha, and extending southward some ways, was "neutral land," to which the Indians had no claim.

Of the settlers above mentioned, all who are known to have located in the county in 1854, but few records are to be found; most, if not all of them, have long since passed away. Elder Thomas Newton, then 58 years of age, accompanied by his wife, their sons and sons' families, settled five miles from the present site of Seneca, on what is now known as the Bloss farm. Elder Newton represented the Regular Missionary Baptists, and during his first year on the Nemaha, preached occasionally when he could get a half dozen or more settlers, emigrants or claim hunters congregated together. He preached the first sermon, performed the first marriage ceremony, and officiated at the first funeral, that of his son, Jacob B. Newton, who died in September, 1854. He died in February, 1881, after a residence of twenty-seven years in Kansas, and a useful life of eighty-four years. W. W. Moore and Walter D. Beeles, built the first bridge on the Nemaha in 1854, about half a mile below what was afterward known as Baker's Ford, a toll-bridge which the public was, for a time, obliged to use, by reason of its proprietors felling a large elm tree in the ford, rendering it impassible. In the spring of 1855, during the period of a great freshet, as the owners were on the bridge guarding it from drift, they saw the elm tree carried away by the rush of waters, and just as they left it, the structure itself, struck by the tree, loosened from its moorings, and swept towards the Missouri, a fair example of poetic justice.

In January, 1855, there arrived in the vicinity of the Newton farm, Mrs. Mary A. Lanham, with her two sons, Samuel and Joseph, her husband, H. H. Lanham, accompanied by Horace M. Newton, reaching the Nemaha on March 8th of the same year, the former having left Fayette County, Illinois, from St. Louis, and come up the Missouri river to St. Joseph on the old "Banner State," in seven days' time. During the following month Rev. Thomas R. Newton, accompanied by his wife and children, arrived; and about the same time William Harris settled on the creek to which he gave his name. Others who settled in close proximity to these, during the summer of 1855, were James Thompson, Cyrus Dolman, John S. Doyle, Elias B. Church and John S. Rodgers; all of the last mentioned, together with the Newton family, and H. H. Lanham, locating within the boundaries of the present Richmond Township. The first settlement in the east of the county —in Capioma Township—was made during the same year, by James McCallister, Robert Rea, William E. Barnes and Samuel Magill. William M. Berry and L. J. McGowan settling in Valley Township, and David M. Locknane in Granada Township. Hiram Burger left Canada in the spring of 1855; his family stayed in Jackson County, Iowa, and in June, with Henry Medcalf and Joshua R. Brown, he came to Nemaha County, returning for his family in the fall. On November 9, having accomplished his mission, and accompanied by George Frederick and George Goppelt, he arrived in the vicinity for the second time, settling on Turkey Creek. With Frederick and Goppelt was a negro, named Moses Fately, who took a claim, sold by him to Edward McCaffrey the following year for $200. This negro bought his freedom of a Mr. Speer of Boonville, Missouri, and also the freedom of his wife, sister, and the two children of the latter.

Among the early settlers in Rock Creek Township were Jubal Brown, Archibald Moorhead, Z. Archer, Levi Joy, William Z. and Robert Carpenter, Isaac Ferguson, L. R. Wheeler, Thomas C. Priest, Joseph Haigh, John L. George, William G. Graham, L. P. Hazen, A. W. Williams, James Oldfield, David Taber, John Ellis, Edwin Miller, Elihu Whittenhall, William B. Slosson and N. H. Rising. Thomas Carlin, Michael Rogers, Peter McQuaid, Andrew Brewer and Alexander Gillespie were among the earliest settlers in Nemaha and Clear Creek Township. In Granada Township, besides, and following Locknane, were Uriah Haigh, George D. Searles, Augustus Wolfley and sons, Jacob Geyer, Frederick Shoemaker, M. H. Terrill and Thomas S. Wright. The earliest settlers in Red Vermillion Township were Garrett Randel and D. Arnold, followed by Tobias Shaffer, William H. McCart, Joseph Hannum, Samuel Sandys, Jacob Jacobia, Peter Hamilton, and the Shepards. In Neuchatel Township, a settlement was effected in the spring of 1857, by Charles Aldolphe, Amie E. Bonjour and D. S. Veale. In Home Township, among the early settlers, were the Armstrong Brothers, William Meyers, J. Barnes, Hezekiah Grimes, Samuel Mitchell, George L. Squire, Dr. John S. Hidden, A. W. Slater, Stephen Barnard, Joseph W. Franks, T. A. Campfield, Drs. J. J. Sheldon, D. B. and N. B. McKay, R. Mozier, and William J. and Timothy McLaughlin. On the Nemaha, Illinois and Tennessee, south and southwest from Seneca, were William R. Wells and sons, Thomas Rich, Isaac Pliss, Thomas Carter, William Hickey, James F. Long, William M. Houston, John S. Doyle, Alonzo Whitmore, Elias B. Church, and others.

Of the above mentioned pioneers, H. H. Lanham became the first Postmaster in the county, the first Justice of the Peace under Free-state laws, and was, for thirteen years, Probate Judge. He is still a resident of the county. Horace M. Newton, after a long residence in Richmond Township, farming and milling, removed to Marshall County. Rev. T. R. Newton, from 1855 to 1867, devoted himself faithfully to missionary work, his field of labor extending from Burr Oak bottom, in Doniphan County, to Blue River, in Marshall County, and from Manhattan, in Riley County, to North Nemaha, Nebraska. On the 20th day of January he performed his last work, in preaching his last sermon in Seneca, his text being the passage from Job: "If a man die, shall he live again?" He died of cerebro-spinal meningitis, on the 25th of the same month. A characteristic incident of the man, occurring in April, 1856, may not be out of place in this connection. Through Isaac Hanby, a Free-state man, notice was given him that he would not be allowed to preach at Burr Oak Bottom. At the appointed time he appeared, met the mob, many of them armed with revolvers, with mild words, but an unyielding determination to preach the gospel of Christ as he understood it; the result being that he secured attention, delivered his address, and in the future was unmolested. Cyrus Dolman became the first Probate Judge, remained in the county a few years, and then went further West. William Harris, the first Justice of the Peace under Pro-slavery laws, remained in the county only about two years.

The first birth in the county, of which any record is to be found, is that of Mollie Key, born to Greenberry and Polly Key in March, 1855. The first marriage solemnized was in Nemaha Township, by Rev. Thomas Newton, on the 12th of November, 1854, the contracting parties being Charles Leachman and Mrs. Caroline Davenport, a widower and widow, who had emigrated from Iowa, to which State they shortly after returned. The first death is a question of some little doubt. In September, 1854, Jacob B. Newton, son of Rev. Thomas Newton, died of typhoid fever, the record further saying that the first husband of Mrs. Davenport died in Nemaha County and was buried on the Henri Korber place, his coffin being made by Christian Bobst and Robert Turner, out of his wagon box. As Mrs. Davenport was married a second time, on November 12, 1854, and without evidence to the contrary, it must be supposed that a decent interval elapsed between the funeral and the wedding; the question of priority as regards Mr. Davenport or J. B. Newton remains a question. The first sermon preached in the county was delivered by Rev. Thomas Newton, early in 1854. The first church was a Congregational organization effected at Albany, in Rock Creek Township, in 1857. There were twelve charter members, of whom Hon. George Graham, now deceased, was the leading spirit. The first church edifice erected was that of the Catholics, built at Wildcat, in 1859, and, with additions, still in use. The first school taught in the county was in 1856, in Granada Township, a small building for school purposes being erected during the same year. Various efforts in the cause of education were made at an early date, of which, unfortunately, but few records can be found. A school building was erected at America City, in Red Vermillion Township, in 1857; 1858 saw the establishment of the first school in Seneca, taught by Addie Smith; and 1859 witnessed the first school in Central City, under the charge of Mahlon Pugh.

The first claims were taken, necessarily, without warrant, there being no facilities for entry, or place at which payment could be made to the Government. The earliest payments for land in the county were as follows, all made in 1857: October 26, Frederic Shoemaker, Section 6, Township 5, Range 14: November 2, I. G., J. D. and R. N. Ramsey, Sections 13 and 14, Township 1, Range 4; November 10, Augustus Wolfley, Section 6, Township 5, Range 14; November 11, Hugh R. Magill, Section 10, Township 3, Range 14; November 13, David P. Magill, Section 11, Township 3, Range 14; November 16, Elizabeth Farrar, Section 14, Township 3, Range 14; November 19, Peter Hamilton, Section 27, Township 5, Range 12. Preemptions were made up to the autumn of 1860, and the Land Office for the district of which Nemaha County was a part was at Kickapoo.

The only Indian scare, in which the early settlers of Nemaha County were concerned, was one occurring in the spring of 1856. In the fall of 1855, and during the succeeding winter, they gathered from the signs and preparations of the Pottawatomies that as soon as the grass had grown sufficiently to support their ponies the war paint would be put on and the war path taken. The settlers naturally supposed that they were the intended victims of savage hate, and accordingly they gathered in force, early in the spring, at Baker's Ford. After some days of anxiety, they learned that the Pottawatomies, so far from premeditating an attack upon them, had gone forth in search of their ancient enemies, the Pawnees, whom they found, by the way, and by whom they were disastrously defeated. Assured of their own safety, the settlers dispersed to their farms.

The first towns in the county were Central City, Richmond, America City, Granada, Ash Point, Pacific City, Urbana, Wheatland, Centralia, Lincoln, Seneca and Sabetha.

Central City was laid out in 1855, by William Dodge, for Thomas Newton and sons, and H. H. Lanham. It never was incorporated by legislative enactment. Its location was Section 1, Township 2, Range 12, now known as the Bloss farm. There was a postoffice, the first in the county, under charge of H. H. Lanham; a blacksmith and wagon shop, and a horse-power saw and grist-mill, all run by the Newton and Lanham families. There was also a store kept by Benjamin Shaffer, afterward sold to Beeler & Williams, of Iowa Centre, but managed by and in the name of Lanham and Newton. The mill was bought at Kansas City, brought to its destination by teams, and run for a time by ox-power. In 1857 or 1858 its proprietors built a dam across the Nebraska, but failing by this means to secure sufficient power to run both branches of the business, they put in an upright boiler and small engine, using the water power for the mill stones, and steam-power for sawing. During the high water of 1858 and 1859, when the Nebraska was a mile in width, the dam and grist-mill works were carried away. What remained of the establishment was moved to the prairie, and leased to Leslie & Barnbrick, who put in a bolt and other necessary machinery, and for a short time ran a saw, grist and flour mil.. Destroyed by an incendiary fire it was rebuilt, sold and moved away. In 1863 Lanham & Newton bought a steam-mill at Pawnee City, Neb., bringing it to Central City, and a few months later removing it to Seneca. As has been said, the first school in Central City was taught by Mahlon Pugh, in 1859. It was select. Its first teacher was soon succeeded by Mrs. H. M. Newton, who taught till some time in 1860. The Central City Baptist church was organized August 1, 1857, with Elder T. Newton and wife, Rev. T. R. Newton and wife, and H. H. Lanham and wife as charter members. A few additions to the membership were made. The first pastor was the Rev. T. R. Newton, who alternated with Rev. Thomas Newton for several years, when Robert Turner assumed the position. The members built a small church structure, afterward used as a school-house. On September 12, 1875, the society formally united itself with the Seneca Baptist church.

Richmond was started in 1855, at the crossing of the Nebraska on the Fort Leavenworth and Fort Kearney and Leavenworth routes. The owner of the claim was Cyrus Dolman, a Pro-slavery man, and the first County Judge. An act to incorporate the Richmond town company was passed by the "Bogus" Legislature of 1855, constituting as a body politic and corporate by name and style as above. F. T. Marshall, David Galispie, John Doniphan, A. G. Woodward, R. C. Bishop, James E. Thompson, John A. Dolman, Frederick J. Ebert, Cyrus Dolman, James O. Donoghen, Augustus Leist, John Donaldson and Daniel Vanderslice, and their successors. The second section gave the corporation the power to purchase and hold, and enter by pre-emption or otherwise, any quantity of land where said town of Richmond is located, not exceeding 1,000 acres, and to lay the same off into lots, parks, streets, squares and avenues, and to sell, dispose of and convey the same. As events proved, the entire 1,000 acres permitted by the act, were not required.

Two buildings were at once erected for the proprietors by Lanham & Newton; one occupied as a dwelling, and the other as a store-room and hotel, the latter being the individual property of A. G. Woodward. It is now on the farm of Festus M. Newton, the dwelling being removed to W. B. Stone's place, north of Seneca. This was the official business centre of the county; the first county warrants issued were drawn here, it being the temporary county seat, by legislative enactment; an honor it might have retained had it not been for its established Pro-slavery character.

Ash Point embraced the south half of the northeast, south half of the northwest, north half of the southwest, and north half of the southeast quarter of Section 8, Township 2, Range 11. John O'Laughlin was the main man of the town, which was made a postoffice, he being the official incumbent. He also established a general store and a hotel, these buildings, with one or two dwellings, constituting the town. Other residents in the immediate propinquity were Josiah Blancett and John Short. Ash Point was a stage station on the overland road, a fact which kept it from entire extinction until 1871 or 1872, though for the last ten years of its existence it had nothing but a store building to mark the town site, which is now a farm. It is situated at the junction of the old overland and California roads.

Farmington embraced the northwest quarter of Section 26, and the northeast quarter of Section 27, Town 1, Range 12, being southwest of old "Urbana," a paper town started by W. W. Moon, at Baker's Ford. Thomas Smith and James Parsons succeeded W. W. Moon at that point, where there was a store building, while Rosalvin C. Perham and John E. Perley directed their energies to the up-building of Farmington. They erected a hotel, store building and blacksmith shop, the last continuing in operation for some years. The old town site is now a pasture.

Pacific City was situated on Section 14, Town 3, Range 13, occupying high prairie land. It was once a place of high expectations, though the town consisted of a hotel building, owned by Orrin Gage, and a good well, used by travelers to a considerable extent. The town site is now fulfilling its destiny as a farm.

Lincoln was the property, and its future glory the dream, of J. E. Hawkes. Its plat was filed for record November 20, 1860. At this point there were, for a time, two stores, a harness shop, a blacksmith shop and a mill, the last being subsequently sold to William Robinson, and removed to Capioma Township, where its machinery is still in operation.

The other early towns that have been referred to, having yet an existence, will be found treated of in the proper place, together with something of their early rivalry, and their struggle for the county seat.

WAR HISTORY.

In August, 1861, A. W. Williams, then of Sabetha, acting under proper authority, and with the commission of captain, succeeded in securing 150 volunteers from the counties of Marshall, Nemaha and Brown. These, as they enlisted, went into camp near Sabetha, where they remained for about a month at Capt. Williams' expense as to rations, and making use of extemporized barracks. In September, they proceeded to Leavenworth, where they were sworn in, 100 of them as members of Company D, of the Eighth Kansas Volunteers, and fifty of them in other companies. The other commissioned officers of Company D were—R. Todd, First Lieutenant; John Graham, Second Lieutenant. Of the 150 men, Nemaha County contributed about one-third, the roster of whom will be found in the proper place in the military history.

Subsequent to this, Hon. George Graham enlisted about thirty men from Nemaha County, the squad dividing when it reached Leavenworth, the members connecting themselves with various regiments, notably the Ninth and Thirteenth Kansas. The county had about forty men in the Seventh, and seventy in the Thirteenth, thirty-seven of whom were enlisted by Lieut. Hensel, and the remainder by Lieut. Cline and others. Company D, Eighth Kansas, was detached for service along the border, being stationed at Fort Kearney for a time, and afterwards at Atchison. In 1865, it was in Texas, whence it was ordered home for discharge. The Thirteenth Regiment was mustered out at Little Rock, Ark., in June, 1865, the Nemaha County men arriving home in July.

In addition to the volunteers from Nemaha County, about 200 in number who enlisted early in the action, there was a call July, 1864, for a regiment of 100 days' men, known as the Seventeenth Kansas. The quota demanded from Nemaha County numbered eighteen, of whom eight enlisted and ten were drafted—the only draft made in the county, and one which need not have been made had time been given for volunteers to come to the front, notwithstanding that nearly all of the able-bodied citizens of the county were already in service, Sabetha having but one man left. These men were taken to Leavenworth and discharged the same month.

On November 3, 1865, occurred in Seneca a reception for returned soldiers, the welcoming address being delivered by Gen. Sherry, and the response by Hon. George Graham, the exercises concluding with a banquet and merry-making Nemaha County did her duty, and more than her duty, in the war for the Union. To her, as much as to any county in the State, is the world indebted for the blow which struck off the fetters of the slave—the fetters which became links to bind the States, both North and South, more closely together.

IMPORTANT EVENTS.

The section of Kansas in which Nemaha County is situated, while it has not enjoyed immunity from disaster, has certainly suffered as little as any part of the State. Its climate is mild, the temperature even, and the rainfall generally sufficient to assure good crops. No cyclones have swept its prairies; no great droughts at any time afflicted it.

The first great storm of which there is any record was one occurring July 13, 1871, blowing from west to east through the central tier of townships. A number of buildings in its path were demolished, and three lives were lost—those of Peter Westfall and his two daughters, who perished in the ruins of their dwelling. The residence of Howard Chilson, situated just south of Seneca, was blown several feet from its foundation, and the brick dwelling of S. B. Smith blown down; these disasters, with the loss of various barns and outbuildings, constituting the effects of the storm. On May 30, 1879, a strong wind swept a limited section of the county, demolishing several frame buildings insecurely constructed, but resulting in no loss of life.

In 1866 occurred the first serious raid of the grasshopper army. They put in an appearance in the early summer, swarming in immense clouds, and coming from a southwestern direction. During their brief stay of two weeks they did great damage to the growing crops, and deposited their eggs, after which they passed on to the northeast. In 1867, those eggs, which were deposited on light and sandy soil, exposed to the sun, hatched out in great numbers. The result, while bad enough, might have been a great deal worse, the fruit being comparatively uninjured, and the farmers securing about half a crop of small grain. In 1868, they came from the northwest, did immense damage to the growing crops, and also deposited their eggs in great quantities, of which, owing to the severity of the winter, but a few hatched out in the spring. In 1873, the swarms were comparatively small, but managed to effect considerable damage.

The year 1874 was one of drought, not sufficient in itself to have utterly prevented the results of good farming, but so severe as to leave the farmers absolutely nothing as the result of their labors when taken in conjunction with the devastating hordes of grasshoppers which came from the northwest, arriving in the county July 31, and laying everything waste. The Courier says: "The corn fields resemble well poled bean patches, while the apple trees have been stripped of their leaves, and in many orchards this year's growth of wood destroyed."

The succeeding winter was that of the famine, when Kansas cried for help. Nemaha County had suffered less than some of its neighbors, and was richer than most of them; while aid was rendered her in a few cases from outside sources, she rendered at least an equal amount of assistance to Jewell and other counties. It was not until New Year's that the suffering really began, at about which time relief committees were organized in Wetmore and Granada townships, which reported fifty families then in need. In January and February, Illinois, Neuchatel, Harrison and other townships appealed for help, and received it, the first mentioned of these reporting forty destitute families within its boundaries. The Granges did good work systematizing the work of distribution, Hon. G. W. Brown deserving special mention as the county agent for the Grange relief system. With 1875 came good crops, and with these prosperity.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION AND OFFICIAL ROSTER.

The first election held in the county was on March 30, 1855, for members of Council, and representatives to the Territorial Legislature. There were ten Council Districts with thirteen members, and fourteen Representative Districts with twenty-six members. Nemaha Precinct with Wolf River and Doniphan constituted the seventh Council District and the eleventh Representative District. The entire vote of the district, 478 ballots, was cast for John W. Forman, a merchant, a native of Kentucky, and a resident in the Territory for twelve years. The vote of Nemaha Precinct was 61. The representatives chosen were: R. L. Kirk, a nine months' resident; and John H. Stringfellow, who had been in the Territory for one year. Nemaha Precinct gave the former 50, and the latter 48 votes. At this election George H. Baker, Jesse Adamson and Samuel Cramer were judges; Samuel Crozier and Thomas Cramer, clerks. Most of the voters were non-residents, the following being the list of those actually entitled to the right of suffrage: W. W. Moore, W. D. Beeles, George H. Baker, Jesse Adamson, Samuel Cramer, Samuel Crozier, Samuel L. Miller, William Bunker, Thomas Newton, Horace M. Newton, H. H. Lanham, John O'Laughlin, Greenberry Key and Uriah Blue.

The Legislature convened on the first Monday of July. Its acts took effect as soon as they were passed, being now best known as the "Bogus laws of Kansas." Among other things, provision was made for the organization of nineteen counties in the Territory, including that of Nemaha, the boundaries of which were defined, as they have been given, and as they yet exist.

Cyrus Dolman was appointed Probate Judge; James E. Thompson, Sheriff, the latter being soon superseded by James E. Hill; and Edwin Van Endert, County Treasurer. The first County Commissioners were Jesse Adamson, of Nemaha; David P. Magill, of Capioma, and Peter Hamilton of Red Vermillion Townships. Richmond was made the temporary County seat, remaining the official business centre until 1858, when the County seat question was decided by the people.

On October 6, 1856, the Pro-slavery men held an election, at which Cyrus Dolman was elected a member of the second Territorial Legislature, receiving 12 votes. At this time the counties of Doniphan, Brown, Nemaha, Marshall, Riley and Pottawatomie, constituted the Council District, and those of Nemaha and Brown the Representative District. On October 5, 1857, the former of these elected Benjamin Harding, of Doniphan, and Andrew F. Mead, of Riley; the fourth Representative District choosing E. N. Morrill, of Brown County. The members of the Council held office for two years, the representatives for one session only. This, the third Territorial Legislature, placed Nemaha County with Brown, Pottawatomie, Marshall and Washington, in the fifth Council District; constituting Brown County the eighth, and Nemaha the tenth Representative District. When it came to the election of State Senators and Representatives, the districts were again changed, Nemaha being at present associated with Marshall in the election of Senator, and herself entitled to two Representatives. In the official roster which follows, no further account is made of these changes, the list merely showing Nemaha's representation, whether solely her own or in conjunction with other counties. The first election for county officers was held November 8, 1859, the incumbents prior to that time holding their positions by appointment. Samuel Lappin had been Register of Deeds; R. N. Torry performed the duties of County Clerk, Clerk of the District Court, and succeeded Edwin Van Endert as County Treasurer. The Probate Judges from 1855 had been, in the order named, Cyrus Dolman, Morton Cave and Haven Starr. J. C. Hebbard, and subsequently J. W. Fuller, had been County Superintendents of public instruction, the former making the first annual report of school matters of the County to Samuel W. Greer, Territorial Superintendent.

The election resulted as follows: County Clerk, R. U. Torry; County Treasurer, Charles F. Warren; Register of Deeds Samuel Lappin; Sheriff, John S. Rogers; County Superintendent, J. W. Fuller; Probate Judge, Haven Starr.

The first Court House stood on lot 4, block 74, on Main street. It was a small two-story frame building, the lower room of which was used for general meeting purposes, and the upper part by the county officers. In December, 1861, it was burnt. A building for Court purposes, but too small for county offices, was at once erected, on the corner of Main and Castle streets, in Seneca, and in this the first term of District Court in Nemaha County was held November 11, 1861, prior to this time Nemaha having been associated with Brown County for judicial purposes. Albert H. Horton, of Atchison, was at this time District Judge, having succeeded Judge Albert L. Lee, who had received a commission as major in the Seventh Kansas. The District Clerk was I. C. Hebbard, to whom Homer L. Dean, the Clerk of Brown County, had turned over the books and papers relating to Nemaha. The Grand Jury who served at this term of Court, consisted of John Downs, Thomas Carlin, Isaac H. Steer, Elias B Church, James Larew, Salem B. Dodge, Samuel Dennis, T. A. Campfield, H. A. Goodman, Hezekiah Grimes, John Hodgins, William Histed, John Kilmer, Augustus Wolfley, H. D. Channell and James M. Randel. Wm. Histed was the foreman. The most important case upon the docket was that of the State of Kansas vs. Josiah Blancett, wherein the defendant stood charged with the murder of Thomas Wilson. The verdict was "not guilty." The indictment failed to state that the murder was committed in Nemaha County. In 1855 three County Commissioners were appointed. From that time until the spring of 1860, the Chairman of the Township Board was the Supervisor in the County Board. In 1860 three Commissioners at Large were chosen, a like number being elected each alternate year until 1878, when the system was changed, so that one was elected each year, to hold office three years. The population of the county at various times has been as follows: 1855, 99; no returns were made at this census of the number of voters. 1857, 512, voters 140; 1860, 2,436; 1870, 7,296; 1880, 12,463; 1881, 13,476; 1882, 15,078.

As originally divided the county had, for municipal purposes, nine townships: Rock Creek, Nemaha, Clear Creek, Richmond, Capioma, Valley, Home, Granada and Red Vermillion. These have at various times been sub-divided, forming Washington, Gilman, Illinois, Harrison, Neuchatel, Reilly and Wetmore. In July, 1882, the Commissioners further changed the local geography, by the creation of Mitchell Township, from Home, Richmond and Valley; and of Adams Township, from Valley and Capioma, the two dividing Valley equally between them and blotting it from the map.

COUNTY SEAT TROUBLES AND COUNTY BUILDINGS.

Upon the organization of Nemaha County, in 1855, the legislature established the county seat at Richmond, the official business center for several years being the combined store and hotel building of A. G. Woodward, now on the farm of Festus M. Newton. For judicial purposes Brown and Nemaha Counties were united, the District Court of both being held at Hiawatha, until 1861; but the first county warrants were issued from Richmond, and it is probable, considering its very favorable location, that it might have remained the county seat, permanently, had it not been for the pronounced Pro-slavery opinions of its proprietors, these making them and their embryo city unpopular with the Free-state men, who were in the majority. By an act of the Legislature, approved February 12, 1858, a special election was ordered to be held April 4, of the same year, for the purpose of selecting a permanent county seat. It being provided that if no choice be made at the first election, it be continued from month to month, but after the second election the votes should be cast only for the three places having the highest number. At the first election the contesting places were Central City, Richmond, Seneca, Wheatland, Centralia and Ash Point, all of nearly equal unimportance. All of the towns mentioned offered to give the county one-half of the town lots, to be taken alternately, but Seneca, besides this, promised in case it secured the county seat, to build a court house, donating the same to the county for five years. The first election resulted in no choice. The next occurred in May, when several of the aspirants had withdrawn, and the third in June, when the struggle lay between Richmond, Seneca and Wheatland, Central City having retired from the contest in favor of Seneca, the idea of its proprietors being that Seneca was at a sufficient distance to allow Central City to amount to something, while Richmond was so near that its prosperity must necessarily be fatal to its neighbor. At the last election the vote of Graham Township was contested. With it Seneca had won; without it she was defeated and Richmond successful. The vote of the Board of Commissioners regarding it was a tie, the question remaining to be decided by the chairman, Hon. George Graham. His vote was cast for Seneca.

The removal of the county seat has been agitated at various times since 1859, notably when the court house was destroyed by fire in 1876. Sabetha, in the extreme eastern part of the county, seemed, at that period, disposed to bring the question to an issue, but nothing definite was done, and the probabilities are strongly against a change ever being made. Seneca being but a few miles from the geographical center of the county, and the public buildings—the court house, erected in 1876, and the jail in 1879—being altogether too valuable to abandon, the question may safely be considered as settled for all time.

Court House.—In 1858, the Seneca Town Company, comprising S. and F. Lappin, R. U. Torry, J. B. Ingersoll and C. G. Scrafford, in order to secure and retain the county seat, entered into a contract with the commissioners, giving them, in trust, alternate lots to the number of one-half of those on the town site, the amount arising from the sale of the same to be used for the erection of public buildings. In addition to this, the company agreed to build a structure suitable for court house purposes, donating the use of the same to the county for five years.

Prior to this, official business had been transacted in the combined store room and hotel of A. G. Woodward, at Richmond.

Upon the removal of the county seat to Seneca, the town company, in accordance with its agreement, erected a two-story building, near the corner of Main and Buffalo streets, the first floor of which was used for meeting purposes of every description, and second floor by the county officers, of whom Byron Sherry, the county clerk, was generally the only one to be found, the other incumbents engaging in other than official business, of which there was little to attend to, Nemaha being attached to Brown County for judicial purposes, and court held, until 1861, at Hiawatha.

In December, 1861, a religious meeting was held in the court house, on Sunday night, the building being closed about half past eight o'clock; about half past two the next morning it was discovered to be on fire, and by three o'clock it was completely destroyed—probably the work of an incendiary

The Town Company immediately made arrangements with the Board of Commissioners for the erection and donation, in fee-simple, of a one-story frame building on the corner of Main and Castle streets. This was first occupied in November, 1861, by Judge A. H. Horton, the first term of the district court in Nemaha County being held at the time. The county officers did not occupy the building, which comprised but one small room, but remained in different stores and offices about town.

In January, 1871, an order was passed by the board, locating all the offices, except that of the Treasurer, in the second story of the postoffice block. The Treasurer's office remained where it had been for some time on Main and Court streets, and court was held elsewhere, the building of 1861 having been abandoned.

In the meantime the city lots owned by the county had been sold, the last of them in August, 1870, netting to the court house fund the sum of $17,473.83. The question of building a court house was submitted to the people, carried by a majority of 289, and on March 30, 1871, a contract for its erection entered into with James A. Storm, of St. Joseph. On April 30, 1871, ground was broken for it by Major Sargent, of Seneca, and in 1872, the building, 57x80 feet, ninety-six feet in height, from the basement to the top of the tower, of brick with sawed stone trimmings, was completed. Its cost was $39,172.78.

On March 4, 1876, fire was discovered in the southeast attic jury room, and notwithstanding the strenuous efforts of the citizens, the building was totally destroyed. The books and papers, with the exception of most of those in the superintendent's office, and the records of surveys prior to 1872, in the Surveyor's office, were saved. The fire was supposed to result from children playing with matches. The offices were temporarily located, those of the Clerk, Register of Deeds and Treasurer in the Universalist Church building; the others in various parts of the city.

The insurance on the buildings, amounting to $30,000, being promptly paid, the Commissioners immediately advertised for bids, awarding the contract for the erection of a duplicate structure to James A. McGonagle, of Leavenworth. The new edifice, in almost every respect similar to the previous one, was completed in June, 1877, at a cost of $30,138.47. The first floor, divided by a wide hall, contains the various county offices; the second floor being used for court purposes. The grounds surrounding the building comprising an entire city block, are well fenced, and planted with trees now several years of age, and will ultimately make a fine grove.

County Infirmary.—At the election of November, 1868, by a vote of 581 to 276 it was decided to levy a tax of one mill on the dollar of assessable property, for the purchase and improvement of a poor farm. At the January meeting, 1869, the Commissioners advertised for plans and specifications for a building to be erected on the land, 160 acres, which they had purchased one and one-half miles west of Seneca, and on February 8th proposals were invited for putting up a building according to specifications on file, and for breaking not less than forty nor more than eighty acres of farm land. The contract was let and the building erected at once, the building being completed the same year. It is a two-story stone building with basement, situated on ground sloping to the south and east, and is capable of comfortably accommodating thirty persons. The cost of the building was about $2,500. The farm itself is a good one, and under efficient management has been made to contribute not a little to the support of the unfortunate inmates of the infirmary.

County Jail.—Prior to the year 1860, the few prisoners with which Nemaha County was concerned, were lodged in various places, usually under guard, the tedious delays of the law being less noticeable than at present, and there being little occasion for a jail. In 1859, however, the county seat question having been definitely decided, the Commissioners erected in the court house grounds a one-story stone building, about 20x20 feet in size, and containing four cells, two light ones and two dungeons. This was completed in 1860. There is nothing remarkable concerning it to be noted, except its insecurity. Escapes from it were not only frequent, but the usual thing.

In October, 1878, the question of building a new jail was put to the people, the vote standing 1,439 to 162 in favor thereof. The contract was at once let, and the structure completed for occupancy on October 1, 1879. It is situated opposite the public school building, near the court house. It is a two-story brick structure with an L, the main building, 32x35 feet, containing six rooms conveniently arranged for the residence of the jailor. The L, 20x26 feet, contains three of J. Pauley's patent steel cells, each of sufficient size to accommodate four persons, while above the jailor's residence are two rooms used for the incarceration of female prisoners and those retained for minor offenses. In connection with the building is a large cistern and facilities for using the water to the best advantage in case of fire. The building cost $9,965, and is in every way a credit to the county.

RAILROADS.

Central Branch, Union Pacific.—This road, proposed and surveyed as early as 1863, received as substantial aid from the Government as any railway corporation in the West. It was granted $16,000 a mile for the distance of 100 miles, from Atchison to Waterville in Marshall County, and in addition to this, alternate sections of land on both sides of the track, and the territories back of these sections to the distance of ten miles. It needed and received no aid from the county. It was completed to Wetmore in 1866, and to the present site of Centralia a year later, the company virtually establishing both towns; though a postoffice of the latter name was in existence before the arrival of the road. The Central Branch enters Nemaha County at Wetmore, about five miles north of the south line, traverses it in a northwesterly direction, touching at Sother, Corning and Centralia, and leaving the county about ten miles from the southern boundary. In Marshall County it connects with the B. & M. in Nebraska, which renders close connection with east and west roads, at Lincoln, possible, while at Atchison the road connects with lines traversing the south and southwest, the north, east and northeast.

St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company—Early in 1860 an effort was made to build a railroad from St. Joseph west through the northern tier of counties in Kansas, and four miles of track were laid connecting Elwood and Wathena; but the war stopped all work on it and nothing further was done for several years.

In September, 1862, a railroad convention in which the various counties interested were represented, was held at Troy in Doniphan County, but little appears to have been done then, or in 1864, when the question was again agitated, a meeting being held at Seneca, March 24 of that year. In 1866 the State Legislature passed an act granting the 500,000 acres of land that had been donated by the general government to Kansas, under the act of September 4, 1841, to four railroad companies, among which was the Northern Kansas, from Elwood west.

In April, 1866, a petition was presented to the Board of County Commissioners of Nemaha County, for an election on bonds to the amount of $125,000, to aid the building of said road, the election being held on May 8, 569 votes being polled, 322 of which were for, and 247 against the issue of such bonds.

On May 12, 1866, a meeting was held at Hiawatha for the purpose of final organization of a company, prepared to receive and make available the donation from the State, and various county grants, of which Nemaha's has been mentioned. This organization was perfected by the election of Samuel Lappin, President; F. H. Drenning, Secretary; W. B. Barnett, Treasurer, and of a Board of eleven Directors, of whom three were from Nemaha County.

On October 9 of the same year, a joint meeting was held at Elwood of the stockholders of the St. Joseph & Denver City and the Northern Kansas roads, the conference resulting in the consolidation of the two roads, the union to be called the St. Joseph & Denver Railroad. Various delays occurring, the road did not reach Nemaha County until 1870, and the county objecting to the payment of bonds to a corporation other than that to which they were voted, sustained suit for such payment, the Supreme Court deciding for the defendant. Prior to its entry, however, an agreement was entered into by C. G. Scrafford, Samuel Lappin, J. H. Peckham, J. P. Taylor, W. G. Sargent, D. B. McKay, and forty-nine others, guaranteeing the road the right of way, 100 feet in width, through the county, and donating to it depot grounds to the extent of ten acres, at Seneca. This agreement was strictly kept. The road was afterwards leased to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, being now known by that company as the Union Pacific (Kansas Division). It enters the county at Sabetha, about eight miles from the northern line; touches at Oneida, Seneca and Baileysville, and leaves the county eleven miles from the Nebraska line. At Marysville it makes connection with the B. & M. in Nebraska, at Hiawatha, Brown County, with the Missouri Pacific, and at St. Joseph with various lines running north, south and east.

COUNTY SOCIETIES.

Nemaha County Agricultural Society.—As early as July 28, 1864, an effort appears to have been made looking towards the organization of an agricultural society, the Courier of that date containing a leader on the subject, and urging the importance of holding a fair at some time during the fall for the exhibition of farm products. No energetic efforts appear to have been made, however, and, at all events, no fair was held.

The organization of the Nemaha County Agricultural and Horticultural Society was effected June 27, 1868, with C. G. Scrafford, President; J. P. Taylor, Secretary, and Samuel Lappin, Treasurer. Land suitable for fair purposes was donated to the association, comprising Blocks 32, 33, 34 and 35 of the town site of Seneca, the grounds being enclosed early in the fall of the same year, and the first annual fair of the society held October 22, 1868.

In 1869, a building 28x60 feet in size was erected for the reception of the display of farm products and manufactured articles of various kinds, and the second fair held September 22, 23 and 24 of the same year. In 1870 and 1871, exhibitions were made, and in 1872, on September 18, 19 and 20, the fifth and, as it proved, the last annual fair of the series was held. The officers at this time were: Wm. B Slosson, President; N. Coleman, Vice-President; William Histed, Secretary, and H. H. Lanham, Treasurer. The cause of the discontinuation of of displays and the practical disintegration of the society was due to financial troubles, it having gone in debt in the improvement of its grounds, and incurred other liabilities, the total amount of the indebtedness being $1,140.50. In August, 1873, this burden was assumed by George Graham, Jacob Van Loon, D. R. Magill, J. P. Cone and Mrs. C. G. Scrafford, as consideration for a warranty deed of the property of the association.

On October 4, 1877, a charter was issued by the Secretary of State, incorporating A. H. Burnett, Willis Brown, West E. Wilkinson, Richard Johnson and Edward Butt as the Nemaha County Agricultural Society. No other record of the new organization is found.

As has been seen, there has been no county fair since 1872. The recently-organized Board of Trade of Seneca, deploring this state of things, in July, 1882, appointed a fair committee, consisting of William Histed, Abijah Wells, George A. Marvin, C. G. Scrafford and M. Matthews, to devise ways and means for the holding of a fair, if possible, during the fall of 1882. Learning that the only piece of ground near Seneca in every way fitted for fair grounds was about to sold, and if secured for fair purposes must be bought at once, the sum of $2,300 was raised by subscription, and the property purchased, William Histed, Willis Brown and George W. Williams being appointed trustees in behalf of the new owners. The object of the proprietors is to hold the land subject to the acceptance of the people upon repayment of their investment, the law providing that the county may purchase and improve fair grounds, appropriating not to exceed one and three-quarter mills on the dollar of the taxable valuation of the county for that purpose. The question of the purchase of these grounds was voted on at the November election of 1882. The proposal was voted down by the county, but the existence of the society and the purchase of the ground is an assured fact.

Old Settlers' Society.—A meeting of the old settlers, preliminary to the organization of a society, was held at the court house in Seneca on August 14, 1880. Committees on permanent organization were at this time appointed from each township, and on September 2 the organization was perfected by the election of the following officers: D. B. McKay, President; J. S. Hidden, Vice-President; Abijah Wells, Secretary; George F. Roots, Treasurer. The first annual re-union was held October 7, 1880, 127 genuine old settlers being present. Speeches were made, toasts given, and a bountiful dinner in the court-house yard enjoyed.

The second annual re-union occurred October 6, 1881. The day was raw and cold, preventing very many from being present, there being in consequence only seventy-five in attendance. Great interest in the history and traditions of early Kansas was manifested. The officers elected were: A. W. Slater, President; E. F. Bouton, Vice-President; Abijah Wells, Secretary; Peter McQuaid, Treasurer. In addition to these, an executive committee was appointed, as follows: Rock Creek—William Graham; Washington—Jacob Spring, Jr.; Nemaha—James Gregg; Clear Creek—M. Keegan; Marion—Robert Bronaughs; Richmond—D. B. McKay; Gilman—David Adamson; Capioma—Samuel Magill; Grenada—A. M. Hough; Valley—D. R. Magill; Home—S. Barnard; Illinois—G. F. Roots; Harrison—J. H. Dennis; Wetmore—S. C. Shumacher; Reilly—G. W. Hannum; Red Vermillion—N. B. McKay; Neuchatel—Alfred Bonjour.

SENECA.

Seneca, the county seat of Nemaha County, is favorably situated on high rolling prairie land, surrounded on all sides by well cultivated farms and pleasant groves, those on its east being divided from it by the current of the Nemaha, whose banks are fringed with a goodly growth of natural timber, and whose waters serve to render yet more picturesque its beauty and that of its surroundings. It is on the St. Joseph & Denver Railroad, seventy-seven miles west of St. Joseph and one hundred and fifty miles southeast of Hastings, Neb., while it is easily accessible from all points by connecting lines. The city is well built. There are, in Seneca, very many handsome residences, the grounds surrounding, which are highly ornamented with shade trees and shrubbery, giving a home like and finished appearance to the town, that is rare in new states, while the business portion of the place is rapidly approaching the appearance of that which belongs to a city.

GENERAL HISTORY.

The town site of Seneca was regarded as a favorable point for a town, by J. B. Ingersoll, who staked off a claim to which he gave the name of Rock Castle. This was early in 1857. A town company was soon afterward organized comprising Samuel Lappin, Charles G. Scrafford, Royal U. Torrey and Finley Lappin, the name of the town, which was immediately surveyed and platted, being changed to Seneca.

The first house built in Seneca was erected in the fall of 1857; it was a double log house, with a wide hall through the centre, or rather, two houses connected with a wall of logs at the rear. It was built by John S. Doyle for Finley Lappin, who immediately occupied one end of it for a hotel, while Downing & Stewart opened a grocery store in the other end. The hotel portion of the building also served as the office of register of deeds, Samuel Lappin holding that position. One end of the structure was afterward used as a dwelling; the other end as a shoe shop and carpenter shop successively. It passed from Samuel Lappin to Albert Clark, finally returning to its former owner, who demolished it to make room for what is now known as the city drug store.

During the same year a blacksmith shop was put up, consisting merely of four poles covered with brush, with a few boards over the forge. Its owner was Levi Hensel, who was able to utilize his powers either as a son of Vulcan, or as correspondent of the New York Tribune, for which paper he made one of the most valuable contributions descriptive of this immediate section of county.

The next house properly belonging to Seneca, was Smith's Hotel. John E. Smith came from Derry, N. H., in March, 1858, accompanied by his wife, two sons, W. H. and F. E. Smith, his brother Stephen, and his sister, Addie Smith, and by Charles, George W. and Eliza Williams. He brought with him the machinery of a mill, purchased in Massachusetts, brought to St. Louis by rail, to Atchison by river, and to Seneca by means of ox-power. The mill was erected about half a mile west of the town site, and a log cabin, 10x12 erected, in the immediate propinquity. The hotel referred to was built in the summer of 1858, being the kitchen, and rooms above it, of the present Wilson House. In this building the first school was taught, by Miss Addie Smith, in the fall of 1858.

The next house erected in Seneca was a concrete stone building, put up by Downing & Stewart; the latter soon after selling to A. M. Smith. Downing & Smith sold to L. J. McGowan, who finally pulled down the building and erected the substantial stone structure in which Hazard & Sons now do business.

The building next erected, with the exception of unpretentious dwellings, was the one on Main Street now occupied by Stein's furniture store. It was built by the Town Company, and first occupied by James P. Brace, formerly of Elwood. His stock of goods was afterward bought by C. G. Scrafford, who, subsequently taking Samuel Lappin as a partner, in connection with him built the Central Store on Main Street in 1861.

Prior to this change, however, a second blacksmith shop had been built by John Sufficool, one end of it being used as a grocery store. This was subsequently sold to John W. Furrow, was added to and used as a boarding house by H. H. Lanham and others, and was finally demolished by Finley Lappin.

Succeeding this, in order of time, and omitting residences, came the Court House, built in 1860, and burned during the same year.

The first birth in Seneca was Esther Hensel, daughter of Levi Hensel, born in 1859. She only lived about three years; upon her birth a town lot was conveyed to her by the town company in honor of the event.

The first school in the new city was one taught by Miss Addie Smith, sister of John E. Smith, in the fall of 1858. It occupied what is now the pantry of the Wilson House, and what was then the "living room" of Smith's Hotel. In the fall of 1859, the overland stages commenced stopping here, continuing to do so for eight years. The immigration to the far West was at that time very great, their frequently being as many as twenty-five passengers at the hotel table, all of whom were charged one dollar a piece. In connection with this becoming a station on the overland road, in place of Richmond, it is related that certain prominent citizens of Seneca, in order to divert travel from the old road, sowed oats, under the most favorable conditions for a long distance along that road, which grew so rapidly and well, as to practically block the comparatively little used thoroughfare.

Seneca was also, and for many years, a station of the Pony express from St. Joseph to San Francisco.

For the first seven years of its existance, notwithstanding the civil war which occupied the most of that period, the city grew rapidly. In 1858, she had one house and a blacksmith shop, as unsubstantial as an Indian wigwam. The actual population upon the town site was about six. In 1865, she had three general stores, one hardware store, one jewelry store, a grist and saw mill, two hotels, a newspaper, and various other establishments, the entire number of buildings, business houses, dwellings, schoolhouse and public buildings, being fifty-six. At that time she had a population of three hundred and one. In 1870 came the railroad, and with it the telegraph, connecting it with the great East and the no less great West. From that time to the present immigration has flowed in, unrestricted by the inconveniences and privations of stage coaching, and the other primitive methods of travel, which retarded to an extent the growth of the great West.

The city in 1879 had a population of 1,000; in 1880, of 1,203; in 1881, of 1274, and in 1882 the number of its inhabitants had increased to 1,519.

CRIMES AND CRIMINALS.

The Nichols' Case.—The first murder in the immediate vicinity of Seneca, occurred October 10, 1864, the victim being Joseph H. Nichols, his assailant, John Craig. The cause of the trouble was a dispute in which Nichols so far lost his temper as to apply insulting epithets to Craig, who immediately used his revolver, the result being the immediate death of Nichols. Craig was taken before a Justice and discharged, the plea of self-defense being held good.

The Murder of John H. Blevins.—On February 23, 1865, John H. Blevins, of Holt County, Missouri, accompanied by Edgar Nuzum, of Doniphan County, Kansas, arrived at Seneca, representing himself in search of two horses, stolen in Missouri, and believed to be in the possession of one A. M. Smith. Calling on C. G. Scrafford for information and assistance, and accompanied by him, Blevins and Nuzum proceeded to Smith's stable, reaching it just as Miles N. Carter and Milton R. Winters had mounted the horses preparatory to decamping. As the pursuers approached the premises, Nuzum asked Blevins if the horses were his, and receiving an affirmative reply, ordered the thieves to stop, taking out his revolver to enforce his demand. A. M. Smith also drew a revolver, firing first at Nuzum and then at Blevins, shooting the latter in the left side, the ball passing through his lungs. He survived only a few hours. While this was going on, Carter and Winters rode away, only to be thrown from their horses, the latter returning to the stable, followed by the thieves; Winters fired several shots at Nuzum as he approached, none of which took effect.

At the time of the tragedy, William Boulton, the Sheriff of the county was absent from town, and no measures were taken for the arrest of the guilty parties until his return on the following morning; Smith and Winters taking the opportunity to abscond.

Miles N. Carter was arrested on February 27, and being brought before John W. Furrow, J. P., the case was continued to the next day at one o'clock. Carter was taken to jail, and that night about eleven o'clock, a mob of about twenty men overpowered the guard, George Monroe, took the prisoner from jail, and the next morning his body was found hanging to the limb of a tree, at Baker's Ford, about eight miles from Seneca. An inquest was held, and a verdict found that the deceased came to his death in the manner stated, at the hands of person or persons unknown to the jury.

On March 6, 1865, Milton R Winters was returned to Seneca, having been arrested by the City Marshal of Atchison. A preliminary examination was held, and the prisoner remanded to jail, held to appear at the April term of the District Court.

At the trial the State was represented by Attorney General Brumbaugh, and J. P. Taylor, County Attorney; the defense, by Byron Sherry, of Seneca, and H. C. Hawkins, of Troy. Two indictments were found, one for aiding and abetting Augustus M. Smith in killing John H. Blevens, the other for assault with intent to kill Edgar Nuzum. On the first charge the jury returned a verdict of murder in the second degree, the prisoner being sentenced to hard labor in the penitentiary for fifteen years. On the second charge he pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to hard labor for ten years, making his term of imprisonment twenty-five years in all. The principal criminal, Augustus M. Smith, avoided discovery and escaped retribution.

The Baughn Tragedy.—On November 12, 1866, four men came to Seneca with a team and wagon, and with three loose horses; the latter, as it was afterward proved, stolen by them at Elwood, in Doniphan County. On the 19th, three pursuers arrived at Seneca, procured writs, and proceeding west, on information obtained, found the thieves encamped on the Vermillion, about ten miles from town. Making no attack, the pursuers returned, obtained the Sheriff with a small force of citizens, and again started out to make the arrest, going out on the North road, the men they were seeking coming into Seneca on the same day by the South road, passing through and stopping a little east of the town. Here they divided; two of them, named Jackson and Strange, remaining where they were, and being arrested, while the other two, Baughn and Mooney, started out on foot, eastward. The Sheriff summoned a posse of men, who started in pursuit, and overtook the men they were after, on the Capioma road, at the crossing of the Muddy.

Three of the pursuers, Charles W. Ingram, Henry H. Hillix and Jesse S. Dennis, were in advance of the rest, and on seeing the men rode nearly up to them, Ingram remarking, as they did so, "We have come for you." At this, one of the men, having a double barrelled shot-gun, discharged both barrels at Ingram, neither of which took effect. The other one had two revolvers, and shot at both Hillix and Dennis, one shot passing through Hillix's clothing, another striking him just below the shoulder blade, making a severe but not dangerous wound. He returned the fire, but without effect.

Dennis received a bullet in the back, which passed diagonally through the body, through the lungs, and in close proximity to the heart. He was fatally wounded, living only a few moments. The one having the gun, after getting over into an adjoining corn field, again fired at Ingram, who jumped from his horse, thus avoiding the shot. Both men escaped.

A proclamation was at once issued by prominent citizens of Nemaha County, offering a reward of $1,000 for the delivery of the bodies of Baughn and Mooney, to the legal authorities of said county within ninety days, a description of both desperadoes being given.

On January 6, 1867, Melvin Baughn, the chief offender in the tragedy, was arrested in Leavenworth, on a description or warrant sent from St. Joseph for a gang of burglars who had plundered a store in Wathena, a few days before. Upon being recognized as the murderer of Dennis, he was brought from Leavenworth, delivered to the county authorities, and lodged in jail, a preliminary examination having been held and the prisoner bound over to await trial at the next term of the District Court. On January 10 an unsuccessful attempt was made to lynch Baughn, going no further than demands for the prisoner and threats, but being only satisfactorily settled by the crowd appointing a Deputy Sheriff to have special charge of the prisoner until his trial. On February 6, Baughn with another prisoner confined in the jail, succeeded in forcing open the doors and escaping, helping themselves to arms and ammunition in the passage of the jail.

Efforts were made at recapture; unsuccessful until June, 1868, and then only due to the fugitive's committal of lesser crimes than the one for which he was wanted in Nemaha County. On May 25 a house was robbed at Sedalia, Missouri; the next day a suspicious looking carpet bag was expressed by some one, to Joseph King, Otterville. Officers there were posted, but in endeavoring to make the arrest of King, wounded him severely, but nevertheless allowed him to escape for the time being, capturing him, disabled by his wound, two days after he was shot. On its being discovered that the prisoner was none other than the notorious Baughn, and after the necessary legal formalities, he was returned to Seneca on June 27, and recommitted to jail.

On August 2 his trial commenced, concluding on the 6th, the jury returning a verdict of murder in the second degree. On the 7th, Judge R. St. Clair Graham pronounced sentence, that on the 13th of September, 1868, the prisoner should be legally executed.

This sentence was duly carried into effect, at three P. M. of the day mentioned, the condemned man showing extraordinary nerve at the approach of death, and freely forgiving the community who had "tyrannized" over him, attributing their "ill-feelings to ignorance and bad whiskey." It is unnecessary to state that he announced his reconciliation to God.

Thus ended the Dennis murder case, with the first and last judicial execution the county has seen.

INCORPORATION AND CITY ROSTER.

Prior to the year 1870, Seneca had no government of its own in any way separate from that of the townships; trustees being elected annually who had full control of its affairs, in common with those of the country surrounding it. On February 25, 1868, an act of the Legislature was approved, entitled an act to incorporate towns and villages, and in accordance with its provision H. H. Lanham, Probate Judge, issued a certificate on May 17, 1870, duly incorporating the northwest quarter and the north half of the northeast quarter, the north half of the southwest quarter, and the north half of the southeast quarter, in Section 34, Township 2, Range 12 east, as a city of the third class. The certificate further appointed as Town Trustees: James P. Taylor, Charles G. Scrafford, J. B. Meyers, Abijah Wells and John F. McGowan. These were sworn into office May 21st of the same year, Charles G. Scrafford elected Chairman, and J. H. Williams, Clerk. An ordinance of the board, approved February 27, 1871, provided for the further acceptance of the legislative act, and ordered an election for city officers, to be held April 3, 1871. At this election 180 votes were cast with the following result, certificates of election being issued to the new officers on April 5: W. G. Sargent, Mayor; George Graham, J. H. Peckham, John H. Larew, Jacob Meisner, Mathias Stein, Council. Abijah Wells was subsequently appointed Police Judge, the Council approving the act, April 18, 1871. The city has always been well managed, having had no bonded indebtedness, and no floating debt of any moment. Following is the official roster of the town by years:

SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES.

In writing something of the history of education in Seneca, it may not be out of place to extend the record—saying something of the attention paid to instruction in the county generally. The first report of school matters in Nemaha County was made in 1860, by J. C. Hebbard, the County Superintendent, to Samuel W. Greer, the Territorial Superintendent of Public Instruction. This report shows that in the county at that time, there were 181 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one years, and six organized school districts, the same number of schools being taught.

Twenty years later, in 1880, the county, with a school population of 4,478, had eighty-six organized districts, with ninety schoolhouses. The schools giving employment to one hundred and thirty-three teachers. The total valuation of school property at this time was $57,904. As early as 1864 a teachers' association was organized, with T. D. Shepherd, President; Abijah Wells, Secretary, and William Histed, Treasurer. This, in a somewhat different form as to object and method, is still in existence, and has done good work.

The first school taught in the county has already been noticed; the first in Seneca was one taught by Miss Addie Smith in the hotel building, erected by John E. Smith. This was in the fall of 1858, a select school of which their is no further record. The school district was not organized until some years later. The School Board of this, the eleventh district, advertised on April 21, 1864, for proposals for building a one-story brick schoolhouse in Seneca, the contract being let early in May, to L. J. McGowen and George Monroe. This building, 24x30 feet in size, and erected at a cost of $1,700, was first occupied in the spring of 1865, the school then being under the charge of Abijah Wells and Miss Kate Webber. The building was used for the purpose for which it was designed until 1869, when it was found totally inadequate to the increased demands of the school population. The board, forseeing this, advertised in April, 1868, for bids for a new and much larger edifice, the contract for which was let to C. G. Scrafford, and the building completed the year following, the old schoolhouse being sold to the Catholic Society for church purposes. The new building, as originally erected, was of stone, 45x58½ feet, two stories in height, and with a bell tower and pinnacle sixty-six feet in height above the surface.

In 1879, an addition was built, of the same height as the main building, and in harmony with its design; 30x60 feet in size, the completed structure making not only one of the largest, but one of the handsomest buildings in Northern Kansas. Its entire cost was about $25,000.

On the 12th of September, 1870, the school was graded into three departments: primary, intermediate, and high school. In the spring of 1871 a German department was added. The school is now under the principalship of D. F. Hoover, and embraces the above mentioned departments.

The first sermon preached in Nemaha County, in all probability, was by Elder Thomas Newton, of the regular Baptist Church, who came from Illinois in 1854. For a number of years he ministered regularly to the settlers, first at Central City and afterward at Seneca. Following him, as regards the ministerial profession, was Elder Thomas R. Newton, who arrived in 1855. The Methodists gained a foothold in the county in 1857; the Catholics in 1859, the Presbyterians a few years later, and the Congregationalists, as an organization, in 1866. There are now in Seneca five religious societies: the Universalists, Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodists and Catholics, all but one of which have church buildings, commodious, handsome exteriorly, and well fitted up. The combined membership of the societies is about five hundred.

Baptist Church.—The first society of this denomination was the Central City Baptist Church, organized at Central City, August 1, 1857; the members at that time being Thomas and T. R. Newton, H. H. Lanham and their respective families. The first pastor was Rev. T. R. Newton, he and Rev. Thomas Newton alternating as leader of the little flock, for several years, and being succeeded by Rev. Robert Turner. A small church building was erected, afterward used for a schoolhouse. On September 12, 1875, the society united itself with the Seneca Baptist Church.

The Seneca Regular Baptist Church was organized April 25, 1866, in the schoolhouse. The constituent members were Elder Thomas Newton, H. M., Ursula M., John C. and Mary J. Newton; H. H. Mary Ann and M. S. Lanham; Rosanne Cordell, Eli Story and Silas G. Wicks. The pastors have been as follows: Rev. T. R. Newton, April 1866 until his death in January, 1867; Rev. Thomas Rice, to 1868; Rev. Robert Turner until 1870. From 1870 to 1875 a hiatus occurred, Rev. J. S. Henry assuming the pastorate in 1875 and retaining it for one year, there being no incumbent from 1876 to 1879. At that time Rev. E. F. Strickland took charge of the congregation, retaining it until 1880, from May of which year to October, 1881 there was again a vacancy. The present pastor is Rev. D. H. Cottrell. From 1866 to 1875 the society worshiped in the schoolhouse and in private residences; from 1876 to 1881 they made use of the Universalist Church building; under the present pastorate returning to the schoolhouse. The church membership is about forty.

Methodist Church.—As early as the year 1857, Rev. Leonard Nichols was appointed to what was then known as the Kansas and Nebraska Circuit, Seneca or some point in the near vicinity being one of the places visited by him in the line of his regular duty. He served one year. In 1858 Rev. James Lawrence was pastor in charge, and Rev. William Robbins, assistant. The first camp meeting in the vicinity was held during this year near Seneca. In 1859, the church was organized, Rev. Asbury Clark becoming its pastor, in connection with other duties he performed in surrounding towns. For years the organization made use of private residences and of the schoolhouse for church purposes, and finally, upon its completion in 1869, of the Universalist building. In 1877, the society erected a handsome edifice, in a convenient location, and with a seating capacity of 216. Its cost was $3,150. This church building was dedicated June 10, 1877, the Rev. D. J. Holmes officiating. The pastors have been as follows: 1859-'60, Rev. George A. Riack; 1860-'61, Rev. Asbury Clark; 1861-'2-'3, Rev. A. G. Channel; 1864, Rev. H. G. Murch; 1865-'6, Rev. J. S. Griffin; 1867, Rev. T. H. Hawley; 1868, Rev. T. B. Gray; 1869-'70, Rev. T. B. Bracken; 1871-'2, Rev. D. T. Rodabaugh; 1873, Rev. L. L. Lence; 1874-'5-'6, Rev. J. A. Amos; 1877, Rev Nathaniel Taylor; 1878, Rev. W. R. Kistler; 1879, Rev. William Holman; 1880-'81, Rev. R. E. McBride; the last mentioned being the present incumbent.

Presbyterian Church.—The First Presbyterian Church of Seneca was organized June 14, 1863, Hiram Johnson and Demmon Miner being chosen Elders, and J. C. Hebbard, Clerk. The only further record of the church known to be in existence, is the following petition, showing the constituent members and the objects of its organization:

"Believing it to be a duty we owe to God, to our fellow-men and to ourselves, to 'let our light shine,' and labor efficiently for our own and others' spiritual elevation, as a means to such an end, we, the undersigned, residents of Seneca and vicinity, do desire you, the Rev. Charles Parker, to organize us into a Presbyterian Church, on Sunday June 14, 1863. (Signed) J. C. Hebbard, J. W. Tuller, Lizzie P. Tuller, Leora Loveland, Henry P. Dryden, Sarah S. Dryden, Demmon Miner, Elvira Johnson, Eliza Williams.

The membership of the Presbyterian Church, up to 1867, was as follows: June 14, 1863, Hiram Johnson, Mrs. Elvira Johnson, Demmon Miner, Henry P. Dryden, Mrs. Sarah S. Dryden, Mrs. Leora Loveland, Miss Eliza Williams, J. C. Hebbard; December 18, 1864, C. S. Knox, Mrs. Jane S. Knox, Mrs. Martha Grover, Miss Harriet Grover; April 1, 1865, Mrs. Rosetta N. Hebbard, A. O. Loveland, Alfred Chilson, Mrs. Mehitable Chilson, Miss Sarah O. Chilson, James N. Weir, Mrs. Mary Jane Weir, John H. Sherman, Mrs. Angeline Boyd; August 5, 1866, Miss Frances S. Chilson; October 8, 1865, Mrs. Isabella Smith; February 10, 1866, Josiah Boston, Mrs. Elizabeth Boston, Mrs Semantha Scofield, David Neal, Mrs. Nancy Neal; November 17, 1866, Mrs. Mary J. Hensel, Mrs. Jane Hornbeck, Miss Marcia McKay.

The Rev. Mr. Nash was sent out by the Board of Missions and ministered to the society for a few months, but the church soon became disorganized, and its members united themselves with other denominations. In 1867 an effort was made to secure a new membership which should be permanent, by the erection of a church building to be known as the Presbyterian, but to be used by all denominations in common. The sum of $2,050 was subscribed, but the Universalists, desiring the honor of the name, offered to do even more for the common cause, and finally built the church, used for many years by the Baptists and Congregationalists. No combined effort has since been made to establish Presbyterianism in this immediate vicinity, most of the members of that organization belonging to the Congregational church.

Congregational Church.—This society was organized in Seneca, on December 8, 1866, its charter members being Reuben and Harriet Cone, E. W., Emily and T. A. Cone, George and Mary J. Graham, Keziah Mitchell and Lizzie P. Tuller. In 1870, a handsome frame edifice was erected, at a cost of $4,000; the dedicatory services being held on Christmas day of the year mentioned. The pastors of the church have been as follows, in the order mentioned: Revs. W. C. Stewart, George Bent, R. B. Guild, A. G. Bergen and G. C. Louckridge, the last named being the present incumbent. George Graham acted as Chairman as the time of organization, and was, until his death, a leading and valued member of the society. The membership of the church is fifty-five.

Universalist Church.—Preceding the year 1867, Seneca had no church buildings, and no combined or energetic effort had been made toward the erection of any. On April 30th of that year a church meeting, in which all the denominations represented in the community took part, was held to consider the matter of building a church. A previous canvass had resulted in getting subscriptions for the purpose to the amount of $2,050; it being understood that the edifice was to be known as the Presbyterian Church, but was to be used in common by all the denominations. At, or immediately subsequent to this meeting, the Universalists offered to pledge $1,000 additional to the $2,000 already subscribed, if the previous subscription should be transferred to them, and consent given that the name "Universalist" should be substituted for "Presbyterian," the church to be used by all, but to be the property of the former organization, when instituted. To this proposition the Presbyterians and others freely consented, and a new subscription paper was drawn in accordance with the above conditions.

On May 2, the Universalists met and organized their society, electing five trustees, as follows: C. G. Scrafford, J. H. Peckham, William Histed, J. P. Taylor and D. B. McKay. During the same month a contract was let for the erection of a church building, and a site purchased on south side of Main street, in an excellent location. On October 20, 1867, the stone work was completed, and on January 1, 1868, the building occupied for the first time, the occasion being a donation party offered to Mr. Ballou, the Universalist pastor. Soon after, this work was temporarily suspended for lack of funds, the edifice not being altogether finished until nearly eighteen months later.

The first services in the church were held July 17, 1869, Rev. G. W. Skinner, of Leavenworth, preaching morning and evening, since which time, and until very recently, it has been used by the Methodists, Baptists and Congregationalists in common with the organization owning it. The building is of stone, is 39x55 feet in size, thirty-two feet from foundation to gable, with a belfry thirty feet in height additional. It is lighted by six windows, and is, altogether, a commodious and handsome edifice. Its entire cost was about $7,500.

The pastorate of the Universalist organization has been occupied successively by Rev. J. H. Ballou, Rev. R. M. Bartlett, Rev. A. Barnes, Rev. Joseph Wilson, and lastly by Rev. J. F. Rhodes, who has filled the position satisfactorily since. The church membership is about fifty.

St. Mary's Catholic Church (Wildcat).—A society, as above named, was organized in 1859, at Wildcat settlement in Richmond Township, about four miles northwest of Seneca. It comprised John P. and Joseph Koelzer, Mrs. Margaret Draney and family, P. J. Assenmacher, Thomas Morgan, John Koch, Frederick Shumacher, Thomas Carlin and M. Rogers. During the same year a frame building was erected 18x30 feet in size, this being enlarged in 1864, and again in 1880, it present dimensions being 35x75 feet. It has a bell weighing 1,800 pounds, cast in St. Louis, and costing, delivered in Seneca, $514. The Rev. Peter Augustine was the first priest, the Rev. Ferdinand Wolf, O. S. B., now having charge of the eighty families, which comprise the congregation. In 1881 a small school building was erected near the church, the school being conducted by the Sisters of St. Benedict.

St. Peter and St. Paul Catholic Church.—This society was instituted in 1869, principally through the efforts of Mathias Stein, who contributed largely toward the purchase of the district brick schoolhouse in Seneca, during the same year; the building, in connection with a block of land, costing $1,000, and being used for church purposes without material alteration until 1880. In the year mentioned a large frame addition was built, prior to which time a parsonage had been erected. The following reverend fathers have had charge: Rev. Father Pemine M. Koumly, O. S. B.; Rev. Timothy Luber, O. S. B.; Rev. Thomas Bartol, O. S. B.; Rev. Emanuel Hartig, O. S. B.; Rev. Thomas Bartol, O. S. B. In connection with the church is St. Ann's school building, erected in 1877 at a cost of $4,000. It is a preparatory school under the charge of the St. Benedictine Sisters. From three to five teachers are employed, and the average attendance of scholars is about fifty.

NEWSPAPERS, SOCIETIES AND OTHER ORGANIZATIONS.

The first newspaper issued in Seneca and in Nemaha County, was the Nemaha Courier, the initial number of which appeared November 14, 1863, with John P. Cone as editor and proprietor. It was a six-column folio, Republican in politics, its principles being evidenced by its motto: "When Freedom is in danger, all who are not for her are against her." In its first issue the editor takes occasion to say: "The Courier, as pioneer of the art preservative in Nemaha County, to-day sends greeting to all, friend and foe—Rebels and Copperheads excepted. Issued upon soil never before settled upon for a 'pry' to the 'world's lever,' it stands first and yet alone to herald that happy day when types first—

"'Were taught
To act the happy messengers of thought.'"

The office of publication was in Lappin & Scrafford's building on the main street, whence the paper was issued for years without change, until January 23, 1868, when it ceased to profess a protection of freedom, and began to "Protect Home Industry." On March 25, 1869, the name of the paper was changed to that of the Nemaha Kansas Courier, "vincit veritas," being taken as a motto, the principles and proprietorship of the paper remaining the same as before. On February 10, 1871, Frank A. Root and West E. Wilkinson purchased the establishment, taking the name of the Seneca Courier. On March 29, 1872, Frank A. Root withdrew from the paper, since which time West E. Wilkinson has continued its publication as sole editor and proprietor. Notable epochs in its career under its present management have been the publication in its columns of a history of the county, on July 7, 1876, prepared by George Graham, H. H. Lanham and J. C. Hebbard; and of a ten-page immigration edition, presented to its patrons on March 1, 1878. After various changes in form, the paper is now an eight-column folio, and, as ever, aggressively Republican.

The second paper issued in Seneca was the Mercury, established by the Mercury Printing Company, in 1869, the first number appearing on September 19 of that year. Its editor was Thomas S. Kames. After a precarious existence of a few weeks, it suspended publication.

The Independent Press was issued under the auspices of the Nemaha County Printing Association, with George W. Collins, as editor. The first number appeared January 1, 1870. Paul Conner assumed editorial control on June 18 of the same year, the paper suspending on December 25th following. On March 3, 1871, it was revived and published by L. A. Hoffman. In August its proprietors were L. A. Hoffman & Co., and in January, 1872, L. A. Hoffman again became the sole owner. On January 19 of the same year, W. D. Wood purchased the Press, and March 14, 1873, changed its name to the Nonpareil. It ceased publication February 6, 1874.

The Seneca Tribune was started by George W. Wrenn and George W. Clawson, April 16, 1879, as a seven-column folio, with Democratic proclivities. October 2, 1879, the property was transferred to, and the publication continued by, George & Adams, H. C. Adams becoming sole proprietor on December 18th of the same year. Under his management an immigration edition was issued on January 1, 1880, giving a complete and accurate description of the various townships and villages in the county, with their several advantages. On January 8, 1880, Abijah Wells purchased an interest in the paper and became its editor, the firm name being Adams & Wells. Under the new management the paper assumed a Republican tone. June 1, 1881, Andrew J. Felt, formerly of Nashua, Iowa, purchased the concern, and has since continued its sole proprietor. The Tribune is now an eight-column quarto, and a success.

The Nemaha County Journal, a monthly publication devoted principally to real estate matters, made its first appearance in August, 1879. Its proprietor, J. P. Taylor, continued to issue it but a few months when its light went out.

Seneca, and the adjacent country have always treated the press well. For its part the press has deserved nothing worse, its energy and the ability displayed in its columns having done very much to induce immigration, and to give the county the high relative place in relation to the surrounding counties which it now enjoys.

The first post office in the county was at Central City, with H. H. Lanham as Postmaster, that at Seneca not being established until December, 1858. At this time John E. Smith received the President's commission, Seneca being made a station on the overland mail route. The first post office was kept in the rear part of the present Wilson House, a building which J. E. Smith had erected for hotel purposes in the spring of 1858. In 1861 John H. Peckham became the official incumbent; during his administration in 1864 mails being received as follows: Eastern mails, tri-weekly, by overland daily coach line, received on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, returning on the alternate days. Western mail, semi-weekly, received by horseback from Marysville via Guittard's Station, Ash Point and Fairland, proceeding to Albany, Carson, Hamlin, Ununda, and as far as Highland, on Tuesdays and Fridays.

In January, 1865, J. H. Peckham was superseded by D. B. McKay, who retained the office until January, 1875, when West E. Wilkinson, the present incumbent, was commissioned. The office was changed to one of the third class, under an order dated December 17, 1878, taking effect January 1, 1879. There are now daily mails from the East and West by way of the Kansas Division of the U. P. R. R., and Eastern mails also received by stage from Centralia on the Central Branch, besides prompt and frequent connection with various parts of the county, away from the railroads.

The Seneca Cemetery Association was organized according to the statute in May, 1863, Samuel Lappin being elected President; Thomas Cave, Vice-President; J. H. Peckham, Secretary, and B. Scofield, Treasurer. A necessary amount of land was purchased, about one mile northwest of the city, surveyed and platted, and a few years later a substantial board fence put up, at a cost of about $150. The land is admirably situated, its physical advantages being all that could be asked; and while private improvements have been made, and a number of tasteful monuments erected, but little as yet has been done by the city or association beyond the enclosure of the site.

Fire Department.—A preliminary meeting, toward the organization of a fire department, was held in Seneca, December 14, 1880. On January 11, 1881, this organization was perfected by the election of the following officers: President, Simon Conwell; Foreman, A. H. Martin; First Assistant-Foreman, S. E. Gallaway; Second Assistant-Foreman, W. S. Dillon; Secretary, J. L. Brockman; Treasurer, J. F. Curran. On March 18, of the same year, the Council decided to purchase hook and ladder trucks, with four Babcock extinguishers, six ladders aggregating ninety-six feet in length, ten oak-tanned fire buckets, and other accessories. These were bought, and a suitable place secured for their reception. The fire company, numbering twenty-two members, are provided with neat and tasteful uniforms, and have devoted much time to practice, there having, however, been little occasion for their services up to this time. No change has ever been made in the officers.

Seneca has had no fires of importance, except those which occurred in 1860 and in 1876, by which the county each time lost a court house. The first of these was of little value; the last, costing $20,000, entailed a loss upon the insurance companies of $20,000. A fuller account of both fires will be found in that of the county.

Seneca Lodge, No. 39, A. F. & A. M.—This lodge was organized September 5, 1863, with officers as follows: Byron Sherry, W. M.; A. K. Moore, S. W.; J. H. Peckham, J. W.; L. B. Jones, Sec'y; Hiram Johnson, Treas. The lodge continued under its first charter until October 18, 1876, when it surrendered it, a new one being granted, under which the name and number of the lodge were the same. Its present officers are: Joshua Mitchell, W. M.; R. M. Emery, S. W.; N. H. Martin, J. W.; John F. Curran, Sec'y; J. H. Hatch, Treas. The present membership is about fifty.

A lodge of Royal Arch Masons was organized in the fall of 1877, with Willis Brown, High Priest; S. B. Murphy, King; John F. McGowan, Scribe; J. E. Black, Secretary. Its present officers are: Abijah Wells, High Priest; Joshua Mitchell, King; Thomas Bennett, Scribe; W. P. Harrison, Sec'y.

Nemaha Lodge, No. 19, I. O. O. F.—There appears to have been a call issued by Delos Acker, J. H. Peckham and J. P. Taylor, as early as 1864, for a meeting whose object it was to organize a lodge of the above order. Nothing, however, came of it. Nemaha Lodge, No. 19, was instituted March 31, 1866, the charter being granted October 12, of the same year, to George Graham, George L. Squire, John N. Cline, Thomas D. Shepherd and Delos Acker. Its first officers were: Delos Acker, N. G.; William Histed, Secretary. Elections have been held regularly from that time to the present, with the exception of that which should have taken place June 30, 1871, during six months subsequent to which date there is no record of any meetings being held. In the court house fire of 1876 the secretary's books were destroyed. The present officers are: L. Cohen, N. G.; Henry Belshaw, V. G.; J. H. Williams, Sec'y; John Larew, Treas.

Seneca Lodge, No. 60, was organized, September 27, 1880, with twenty-two members and the following list of officers: W. M., T. B. Collins; P. M. W., J. C. Hart; Foreman, A. L. Stone; O., J. F. Curran; G., V. Martin; Recorder, W. Drowns; Fin., C. E. Carter; J. W., C. E. Wilson; O. W., R. M. Emery; Receiver, S. E. Gallaway. Its place of meeting is, and has been, Wilson's Hall. The present officers are: M. W., W. Jenkins; P. M. W., W. Drowns; Foreman, W. E. Young; O., J. F. Curran; Fin., C. E. Wilson; Recorder, J. C. Hart; Guide, L. J. Leeds; O. W., W. S. Dillon; J. W., R. M. Pressler; Receiver, S. E. Gallaway. The membership is now thirty, and the lodge is in a flourishing condition.

Seneca Library Association.—In preface to the history of this organization, it may be well to mention previous attempts at the institution of somewhat similar societies in Seneca. The first of these began its existence in January, 1864, lasting but a few months. It was known simply as the Seneca Lyceum, and all records of value regarding it are lost, beyond the fact that on February 28, W. F. Wells and H. P. Dryden discussed the question whether the miser exerts a more baneful influence upon society than the spendthrift.

On November 16, 1869, a preliminary meeting, with the purpose of organizing a literary society, was held in the schoolhouse, and a week later the question debated whether or not Seneca should be incorporated—the affirmative being taken by Abijah Wells, J. H. Cotton and H. P. Dryden; the negative by G. W. Collins, John Cave and Prof. Gause. An election of officers was also held, resulting as follows: President, Thomas Moore; Vice-President, S. L. Hamilton; Secretary, J. H. Cotton; Treasurer, Alice Church; Sergeant-at-arms, H. P. Dryden. Considerable interest seems to have been manifested for some weeks, when the society ceased to exist.

The Seneca Literary and Library Association was organized, December 12, 1871, with A. Wells, President; W. G. Sargent, Secretary, and Joseph Sharpe, Treasurer. On the 15th, a constitution and by-laws were adopted, and the question discussed: "Resolved, That the cause of temperance in our midst can best be promoted by licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors"—a question which in one form or another has been under discussion ever since. This, and organizations in legitimate succession to it, lasted a number of years; a library was established, consisting of three hundred dollars' worth of books, in addition to a number of donations.

On September 23, 1878, a charter was secured for the present society, the Seneca Library Association. The library previously referred to was secured, and important additions made, it consisting at present of nearly 500 well selected volumes, in all departments of literature. The officers elected September 30, 1878, were: Edward Butt, President; P. P. Fuller, Secretary; J. H. H. Ford, Treasurer. On September 30, 1880, J. H. Hatch became President; J. H. Williams, Secretary, and Willis Brown, Treasurer. The last election, held January 31, 1882, placed in office A. Wells, President; J. H. Hatch, Vice-President; J. H. Williams, Secretary, and L. Cohen, Treasurer—these, with the following persons, constituting the Board of Trustees: R. C. Bassett, Simon Conwell, J. H. H. Ford, R. M. Emery and R. E. Nelson. The society has commodious and pleasant rooms in the rear of the law office of Wells & Curran, and is now in a very flourishing condition, a decided public interest being manifested in its success.

Company D., First Kansas State Militia.—The organization of this company was perfected in the year 1878, with the following list of commissioned officers: Willis Brown, Captain; Lewis Sheely, First Lieutenant; Edward Butt, Second Lieutenant. In September of the same year, arms were issued them by the State, the company went earnestly to work, adopted a suitable uniform of the regular United States Army Blue, drilled regularly, and soon showed fine progress in the art of military maneuvers. In November, 1879, the ladies of Seneca presented the company with a fine stand of colors. Willis Brown being promoted to the coloneley of the regiment, preceding his commission as General of the State Militia, Edward Butt was promoted to the captaincy, and Lewis Sheely commissioned First Lieutenant. In the summer of 1881 the company disbanded.

Seneca Light Artillery Company.—This is both a civil and a military organization, chartered under the laws of Kansas, on July 4, 1881. The officers of the civil organization are: Secretary, A. H. Burnett, President; A. Wells, Vice-President; J. F. Curran, Treasurer; Joshua Mitchell. Those of the military company, which consists of twenty men, are: Willis Brown, Captain; W. F. Troughton, First Lieutenant; C. E. Wilson, Second Lieutenant. In the fall of 1881, an armory was erected, a two-story frame building, 30x50 feet in size, in which meetings are held, and wherein is kept a six pound brass cannon, the property of the State. The members of the company are each provided with two uniforms, fatigue and dress costumes, and as an organization, possess a fine fifty dollar flag, presented by the city.

Seneca Band.—The organization of a brass band was effected in November 1875, with L. A. Hardon as Leader, a position which he yet retains. Various changes have been made in the membership, the band, as at present constituted, being as follows: A. H. Gehr, Eb. Cornet; W. W. Felt, First Bb. Cornet; F. E. Jacks, Second Bb. Cornet; J. W. Larew, First Eb. Alto; N. R. Bouton, Second Eb. Alto; J. H. Gleason, First Bb. Tenor; W. N. Snyder, Second Bb. Tenor; B. C. Weaver, Baritone; F. Smith, Eb. Tuba; F. Doty, Snare Drum; W. S. Nash, Bass Drum and Cymbals. The Seneca Silver Cornet Band, a defunct organization, was constituted in 1869, with L. A. Hardon as Leader, and Anton Coblitz, John Norton, E. C. Gibbons, J. W. Stickney, J. B. Meyers, George Graham, W. S. Nash and Clarke Smith, as members. It continued in existence but a few years.

The Seneca Orchestra is a comparatively recent organization. Its leader is A. H. Gehr; its other members being: J. W. Larew, Second Violin; J. H. Gleason, Bass; F. E. Jacks, Cornet; J. C. Hart, Flute; — Weaver, Trombone. The orchestra is provided with good instruments, and is in excellent practice.

Seneca Board of Trade.—An organization, under the above name, and consisting of the principal citizens of Seneca, was effected on March 17, 1882, a preliminary meeting having been held on the 14th of the same month. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, J. H. Williams; Vice-President, J. H. H. Ford; Secretary, Leopold Cohen; Treasurer, J. F. Curran. It was instituted "for mutual benefit, and the encouragement of every local enterprise, to induce and encourage immigration and manufacturing industries to locate in Seneca, to work for low rates of freight, to encourage home patronage, and the maintenance of home manufactures and home institutions," and for various purposes in accordance with the objects above indicated.

But little work has as yet been accomplished beyond that, which must necessarily precede any thing definite, the awakening of public interest in the prosperity of the city. In July, 1882, a committee was appointed, consisting of William Histed, A. Wells, George A. Marvin, C. G. Scrafford and M. Mathews, to devise ways and means for holding a County Fair some time in the fall of 1882. The sum of $2,500 was almost at once raised by subscription for the purchase of land suitable for fair purposes; the land was bought, William Histed, Willis Brown and George W. Williams being appointed as trustees of the same, in behalf of the owners, those buying the land, holding it subject to the acceptance of the county upon repayment of their investment.

BANKS, HOTELS, AND OTHER LOCAL MATTERS.

Lappin & Scrafford's private bank was established in 1870; the firm as above mentioned erecting a substantial and handsome brick building, for banking purposes on the north side of Main Street. After a successful business of several years duration, other capital became interested, and in January, 1875, the affairs of the bank were wound up, the concern being succeeded by the State Bank of Kansas.

The State Bank of Kansas, succeeding to the business and location of Lappin & Scrafford, was organized in December, 1874, with a capital stock of $100,000, and Samuel Lappin, President; Edwin Knowles, Vice-President; Willis Brown, Cashier; Simon Conwell, Secretary; the four officers with C. G. Scrafford, constituting the Board of Directors. The bank went into operation January 25, 1875. In January, 1876, Samuel Lappin and C. G. Scrafford withdrawing, Edwin Knowles was elected President and D. B. McKay, Vice-President; the latter taking C. G. Scrafford's place on the board. D. B. McKay was afterward superseded by Edward Butt, who, as Vice-President gave way to D. J. Firstenberger; Edwin Knowles retains the Presidency, and no change has been made as to Cashier since the bank was established. The Assistant Cashier is George Black. The present Board of Directors are: I. T. Hosea, Edwin Knowles, Willis Brown, D. J. Firstenberger and George W. Williams. The amount of capital stock is the same as upon organization.

The Nemaha County Bank was organized in the month of July, 1881, commencing business March 1, 1882, with a capital of $50,000, and with the following officers: R. J. Emery, President; J. A. Hatch, Vice President; J. H. Johnston, Cashier; the Board of Directors consisting of the above officials, together with L. Cohen and T. W. Johnston. No change has been made in the management.

The first hotel in Seneca was also its first business house of any kind. It was a double log house, with a wide hall in the centre; erected in 1857, by John S. Doyle, for Finley Lappin. One end of it was used by the owner for hotel purposes, the other end by Downing & Stewart, as a grocery store. It was situated on the site of the present city drug store, and was only used as a hotel for a few years.

In the summer of 1858, John E. Smith built what is now the kitchen, and the rooms over it of the Wilson House; calling it Smith's Hotel. In 1860, he built the front on Main Street, and continued as landlord of the establishment until the fall of 1879, when he leased it to J. Q. A. Jeffreys, who retained it for one year, when the property was sold to P. Joseph Assemacher. In November, 1880, T. B. Collins took possession, and in 1882 P. Joseph Assemacher built a fine brick addition at a cost of $3,000, leasing the entire building to Charles E. Wilson, the present proprietor, who changed its name from the Collins House, under which it had been run for a time, to the Wilson House. The hotel has eighteen rooms for guests.

The Union House, a frame building was erected by Edward Ingram, in 1859; a brick addition being put to it in 1862, and another at the end of the first in 1878. At the owner's death, in 1875, the hotel passed into the hands of John Shumway, who called it the Sherman House. Its next proprietor was C. R. Fairchild, the house taking his name. James Martin, who succeeded Fairchild, named it the City Hotel, and no change in the appellation was made by Levi Petty, who was the next proprietor. In 1879, C. E. Wilson became a partner of Petty's, subsequently buying the entire building, remaining landlord of the hotel until July, 1882, when he leased the house to H. G. Stites; under Wilson's management it was called the Wilson House, resuming the name of City Hotel when Stites took possession. The house contains thirteen rooms.

The Seneca House was erected by John Kaune in 1871; it is a substantial frame building, containing twelve rooms, and is under its original proprietorship.

MANUFACTURING INTERESTS.

Seneca Mills.—The first mill at, or in immediate propinquity to Seneca, was a saw-mill the machinery of which was purchased in Massachusetts, brought to St. Louis by rail, from St. Louis to Atchison by river, and drawn by ox teams from Atchison to a site, just southeast of Seneca, in the spring of 1858. Its owner was John E. Smith, who continued to operate it for several years, it being finally sold to Bolivar Scofield, who moved the machinery to Marshall County, and resold the mill site to Newton & Lanham. This firm in 1864 moved a saw and grist-mill which they had been operating at Central City to Seneca; putting in wool carding machinery in 1865, which they ran until 1866, when H. H. Lanham withdrew from the firm, the property passing to H. M. and J. C. Newton. In January, 1867, the Newton Brothers sold the mill to D. A. Starkweather and L. Sheeley, the machinery being moved away, shortly subsequent. The Seneca mills, as at present constituted, were established in 1871, by Knowles & Son, of Galesburg, Ill., who received financial encouragement to a large amount from the citizens, and notably from the firm of Lappin & Scrafford. The engine, of sixty-horse power, and the machinery, were moved from Galesburg to Seneca, and several run of burrs at once put in. In the winter of 1881, improved machinery was purchased, and the capacity increased, there being now four sets of stones. The mill, under the superintendency of J. W. Bergen, does custom and merchant work, and furnishes employment to six men.

Seneca Foundry.—In 1881, W. M. Butler and W. F. Troughton, entered into a copartnership, under the firm name and style of Butler & Co., establishing the Seneca Foundry. They erected a building on Main street, 30x60 feet in size, put in a fifteen-horse power engine, and began work in November of the year mentioned. From five to ten men are employed in general contracting and job work.

Keystone Barb Wire Works.—The manufacture of the L. T. Lostenwing patent, barb wire, was introduced into Seneca in 1879, by G. A. Marvin and W. H. Tyler, who erected a good frame building on Main street, and put in five barbing machines, and two barb manufacturing machines. These they have continued to operate from the first. The patent covers a four pointed barb on a single wire. The product of the establishment is about 1,000 pounds a day.

Seneca Creamery.—In the fall of 1880, a creamery was started on Main street, in Seneca, by W. H. Fosmer, who continued as proprietor for some months, the establishment passing into the possession of John A. Gilchrist, in the summer of 1881. A building was erected during the same season, about two miles north of the city, and fully fitted up, the creamery being managed according to the Davis & Fairlam system. It has a five-horse power engine, by which the oscillating churn is operated. Its capacity is 3,000 pounds of butter per day; its usual product being about 1,000 pounds. The actual cash value is $3,000.

Seneca Elevator.—This institution was established during the winter of 1877 and 1878, by W. W. Stewart, who erected a building adjacent to the railroad, 24x30 feet in size, with an engine room contiguous, 12x24 feet. All machinery, other than the engine, is in the basement. The storage capacity of the elevator is 6,400 bushels. In 1879 it was sold to Ferdinand Cleve, subsequently passing into the hands of Gregg Brothers, of St. Joseph, Mo., its present proprietors, represented by William Scott, manager.

J., September 1, 1814; is a son of John Emery, of the same county, who removed his family to Clermont County, Ohio, in 1815. His farm was situated twenty miles from Cincinnati; and here E. J. Emery grew to manhood, finally settling on a small farm of his own, which he conducted very successfully for many years, and sold just before coming to Kansas in 1878, having acquired a competency in Ohio. Mr. Emery, by judicious loans and investments in Kansas, has come to be looked upon as one of the solid men of Nemaha County. At the organization of the Nemaha County bank in 1882, he as one of its largest stockholders, was made its President. Mr. Emery married in Clermont County, Ohio, Eliza V. Johnson; of Hunterdon County, N. J. Her parents settled in Ohio in 1828, her father removing thence to a farm in Cook County, Ill., where he died. ANDREW J. FELT, editor Seneca Tribune, was born December 27, 1833, at Victor, Ontario County, N. Y.; educated at the Hamilton Academy, Madison County. At the age of sixteen commenced teaching, following that profession three years. Then began the study of law, with Thomas Frothingham, of Rochester; completed his legal studies with Judge Nichols, of Sherburne, Chenango County, but becoming enthusiastic as to the West, emigrated to Iowa, before being admitted to the bar. This was in the autumn of 1855; and during the following winter he taught school in a blacksmith shop upon the present site of Luana, Clayton County. In 1856 Mr. Felt assumed editorial control of the North Iowa Times, of McGregor, published by A. P. Richardson. Remained in that position until March, 1857, and was shortly after admitted to the bar of Chickasaw. Instead of actively commencing the practice of law at the time, he commenced the publication of the Cedar Valley News, at Bradford, opening a law-office in connection with his newspaper business, as soon as the latter became established. One year later he sold out his interest in the paper, and entering into partnership with M. V. Burdick, devoted all of his energies to the practice of his chosen profession. In 1860 renewed his editorial connection with the North Iowa Times, but the war breaking out, enlisted very soon after as a private in Company B, Seventh Iowa Infantry. Was taken prisoner at Belmont, Mo., on November 7, 1861, remaining in the hands of the enemy for nearly a year. Was then in hospital at Annapolis from October, 1862, to February, 1863. Joined his regiment at Corinth, Miss.; was promoted to Sergeant, and returned to Iowa in the spring of 1864. Mr. Felt proceeded immediately to West Union, Fayette County, and established the Public Record; conducted it until 1866, when he sold out, and in May, 1867, started the Nashua Post. This he disposed of in 1874, when he purchased an interest in the Waterloo Courier. In October, 1875, he abandoned journalism for a time, and established a private bank at Nashua. Mr. Felt was postmaster at Nashua from 1869 to 1874; was delegate to both Grant Conventions, being one of the Secretaries of that of 1868, and was Chairman of the Congressional Convention which nominated W. C. Deering, in August, 1867. In January, 1880, disposed of his bank, and removed to Seneca, where he established the Tribune, building a magnificent brick office for its accommodation, at a cost of $8,000. The first issue of the Tribune appeared June 7, 1881. It is a handsome seven-column quarto, Republican in politics. Mr. Felt was married at Bradford, Iowa, on February 21, 1858, to Emily Rutherford, of Fairfield, Ohio. They have three children—Edward, Harry and Bertha.

JOHN FULLER, of Fuller & Son, hardware firm, Seneca. John Fuller is a native of Horsham in the county of Sussex, England. His parents took him when a child, to Dorking, in the county of Surrey, where, under the tuition of his father, he learned the trades of tinman, brazier and coppersmith. After serving seven years, he left home at the early age of seventeen, and by perseverance and close application, he mastered the various branches of those trades so as to be entitled to the name of a general sheet-metal worker; he also learned, in his spare time, the trade of shoemaker, and made shoes for his family in what would have been, otherwise, leisure time for ten years. In April, 1870, he left England for Nemaha County, Kan., bringing with him six children, with barely enough means to get through to Atchison; on arriving at Atchison, was compelled to beg a passage for the rest of his journey to his destination, of Mayor Downs, superintendent of the C. B. U. P. R. R., who kindly gave him a pass, and accompanied them to their destination, wishing them a hearty success. The eldest of his six children was thirteen years old, and as no opening offered for his trade, he tramped on foot to Centralia, Waterville, Marysville, and finally to Atchison, Leavenworth and Kansas City, without money, with no better success; and in order to sustain life, was compelled to "grub" trees for men clearing land, near Leavenworth—working with a gang of negroes, working at any and everything that offered any kind of pay. Finally, he was introduced to John Roots, another sterling Englishman, living near Centralia, whose son, Aaron Roots, offered to put $850 into the hardware business, against Mr. Fuller's knowledge of the business and his trade, which proposition Mr. Fuller gladly accepted. Thus was founded a business that to-day occupies a front rank in the list of Seneca's enterprises, in the early days of Kansas. Mr. Fuller prides himself on the record of his wife and children equally with his own; his good wife, though frail, was yet endowed with the same earnest spirit of independent ambition, and desire to lift themselves to a better position in the world—labored hard, like himself, at any and everything she could find to do, early and late, for nearly three years, earning from $250 to $300 a year, besides giving a mother's care to her six thrifty children; the eldest son, Henry W., by working, while yet a boy, on the track for the St. Joe & Western Railroad, earned a goodly sum, which assisted his sire to buy out the interest of Mr Roots in the business in January, 1875. Since then, father and sons have steadily prospered as they have deserved to do, having all done their utmost to insure success, and as evidence of it have for inspection a $5,000 stock of hardware, stoves and tinware, etc., owning the building they now occupy, and real estate to the value of at least $10,000. Mrs. Fuller was the eldest daughter of Henry Fagg, (many years engineer on the Southeastern Railroad) of Ashford, county of Kent, at which place her six children who came with her were born. They now have seven living—Henry W., John, William E., Walter, Martha L., Herbert and Beatus F. The two youngest were born in Kansas.

JAMES FULTON, proprietor of Elm Park, is a native of Seneca County, N. Y., was reared in Seneca County, Ohio, and in 1866 removed to Seneca, Kan. In 1870 he bought twenty acres of heavy timber skirting the Nemaha to the south of Seneca. Here he planted an orchard and small vineyard, meanwhile working at his trade of carpenter—building houses, barns, fences, etc. Elm Park, so named for a noble specimen of that beautiful variety of trees that stands near its centre, was opened to the public July 1, 1882. It comprises about four acres of walnut, oak and elm timber, along the south bank of the Nemaha, and promises to become the popular resort of Nemaha County for pleasure seekers. Mr. Fulton and sons are constantly improving the grounds, naturally adapted to the use of picnic parties. A pavilion for music and dancing will soon be built, and numerous tables and seats provided. Mr. Fulton is also erecting a new residence for himself opposite the Park. He married in Ohio, Margaret J. Moore. They have five children—David A., James C., Mayflower, Ella and Maggie.

H Gleason was elected to his present office in the fall of 1880. He is a member of the Seneca Lodge, No. 39, A. F. & A. M., and is a Republican in politics. Mr. Gregg located in Lyons, Iowa; where he worked three years on farms and railroads. July 3, 1857, was the date of his settlement on his present farm, and while living in his log house, both wife and himself suffered six months with malarial fever. His crop of 1858 was hauled to Atchison, fifty-eight miles, and sold at 2½ cents per pound. In Iowa Mr. Gregg married Janet (Anderson) Baird, a native of Perthshire, Scotland. Her first husband, Alexander Anderson, died in Iowa they having come to America in 1830. Mrs. Gregg died, childless, in March 19, 1876. Upon her death Mr. Gregg gave to nephews of his deceased wife, 240 of their 1,000 acres acquired since 1857.

J. H. HATCH, lumberman, is a native of Maine, and in early life ventured on the sea, rounding Cape Horn as second mate of a sailing vessel. In 1850, resolving to stake his fortune in the Golden State, he engaged in mining with good success for two years. During the next nineteen years he followed the manufactory of lumber in California. Returning to the Pine Tree State in 1869, he married in his and her native county—Sagadahock, Maine, Sarah D. Tallman. Since 1873, Mr. Hatch has been actively engaged in the lumber trade in Seneca, carrying a $5,000 stock of mainly Michigan lumber. He is a Republican, a Free Mason, and is a stock-holder and Vice-President of the Nemaha County Bank. Besides his interests in Seneca, Mr Hatch owns a half interest in the Marysville Lumber Company, with S. K. Martin, of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs Hatch have four children—Lucine, Nellie, Lizzie and Lester. The son was born in Kansas, and the daughters in California. It is worthy of remark that the father of Mr. Hatch is still living, at the age of eighty-seven years, though his mother died at the age of thirty-five; and that the father of Mrs. Hatch died at the age of eighty-two, and her mother reached the age of only thirty-five.

NOAH HAYES, M. D., is a native of Henry County, Ind., and was educated in the common schools, and in Newcastle, Ind.; he enlisted, at seventeen, in the Thirty-sixth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and served three years during the Civil War in the armies of the Cumberland and Tennessee, participating in the battles of Pittsburg Landing, Shiloh, Corinth, Stone River, Chattanooga, and the great battles preceding the investment of Atlanta. Was granted a furlough about this time, and returned in time to take part in the battles of Pulaski, Franklin, and Nashville. At the close of the war he returned to his native county, and attended and taught school until 1871, when he went to Washington, D. C., and in June of that year, sailed on the ill-fated "Polaris" for the North Pole. A history of this disastrous government expedition need not be repeated here; suffice to say after wintering in latitude eighty-two degrees north, and spending nearly two years in the icy polar regions, he, with others, was picked up by the Scotch ship "Arctic;" landed at Peterhead, Scotland; made his way, by way of Dundee, to Liverpool, and thence to the United States. On his return to Washington he was in the employ of the United States Patent Office for about two years; was then on the National Bank Bureau, with J. D. Knox for one year. Entering the medical department of the Georgetown College, he graduated in 1876. He came west to Fairbury, Neb., in 1878, and on the outbreak of the Leadville excitement, went thither to make or break, and succeeded in accomplishing the latter. After two years' varied experiences in railroad surveys and other business, he located at Seneca in August, 1881, forming a partnership with Dr. A. C. V. McNeil, the firm having since enjoyed a lucrative and increasing practice, which leads Dr. Hayes, as he looks back over the tumultuous and exciting episodes of the former years of his life to fully appreciate his present prosperity.

J. E. HAZZARD, merchant, is a native of Scott County, Ind., born in 1831. He was reared in Washington County, Ind., and in 1859, left his native State, for Kansas. In the spring of 1860, he went to the mountains of Colorado. During 1861-'62 he was in the employ of the Overland Stage Company. In 1864 he bought a farm near Capioma, in this county, where he lived peaceably and prosperously until 1877; then sold out and bought a farm near Seneca, where he farmed with equal success until the spring of 1881, when the mercantile firm of Hazzard & Son was formed, and the stock of L. J. McGowen purchased; Mr. Hazzard since devoting himself to the business. He married Miss Jane Gordon, in Indiana, who died in Seneca. They had two children—Gordon and Nancy. The present Mrs. Hazzard was Mary Myers, of Seneca.

In 1846 he was ordained as deacon, and in 1850 ordained as elder by Bishops Heading and Morris. He has preached forty-one years. Four years he was presiding elder of Dover District, New Hampshire. During the war, he served under the Christian Commission, at Chattanooga, and also was appointed by Bishop Simpson, under an order of the War Department, to re-organize the Methodist Episcopal Church of Tennessee, and lately did the same work in Florida. He came to Kansas in 1869 and has since served two years as presiding elder of the Manhattan District, and four years as presiding elder of the Atchison District, and is still at the work, preaching at Corning and Axtell. Mr Holman has made a fine record in temperance labors as well as co-operating with Neal Dow and other temperance workers of national reputation. As a politician, all that need be said is, that his very first vote was cast for James G. Birney. He married in Putney, Vt., Lucy T. Underwood. They have five children living.

Dr. Hunter built up a large practice in New York City, where he commenced in 1858, and another nearly as large in Addison, N. Y. Having suffered for years from asthmatic troubles, the doctor decided to test the dry air of Kansas, which resulted in his location at Seneca, August, 1878, although his family still remain in Addison. The doctor married, in his and her native county, Mary Sherwood, by whom he has two children. Mrs. Hunter is a sister of the Hon. Henry Sherwood, of New York.

Leroy Johnson lived in Van Buren County until he was twenty-two, then spent about eight years in Shelby County. In 1859, he began as a freighter, traversing the great plains from Atchison, St. Joe and Plattsmouth, to Denver. He removed in 1850 to Fayette County, Ill., and in 1859 left with his team for Kansas. When he arrived, his father sold him eighty acres on which he lived about five years. The failure of the crop in 1860, and the distress and privations, incidents thereto, fell heavily upon him and his. He began teaming to Kearney and other western points, and to Atchison; one trip made that fall occupied eleven days, he unloading his 3,200 pound load eleven times on the way. He was paid $60 per hundred for hauling supplies for the sufferers from Atchison, and thus made some money. Since 1864 he has lived where we now find him; has owned a section of land here in all, but has given each of his sons and foster sons an eighty acre farm, now reserving 130 acres for himself and wife. Thomas Newton, whose manly fearlessness in preaching in the midst of a howling Burr Oak bottom mob, that had threatened him with death, from the text, "The wicked flee when no man pursueth," etc., will long be remembered and admired. Rev. Thomas Newton, Sr., died February 21, 1861, in Marshall County, and his distinguished son died in Seneca, January 25, 1867. JAMES PARSONS, one of the early settlers and substantial men of Nemaha County, is a native of England, and came to the United States when fourteen years of age. Since 1849 he has lived west of the Mississippi. He came to this county in 1857, and bought of one Shafer a farm of 320 acres near Baker's Ford, paying $1,700 for it. The original pre-emptor was one Moore, a Pro-slavery man, at whose house so many illegal votes were cast by the Missouri "border ruffians" at the election of 1856. On account of this Moore was "bounced" by Jim Lane and his men. In 1858, Mr. Parsons was elected County Surveyor, being the first to hold that office in Nemaha County. In 1859 he associated himself with J. Blancett, and founded the town of Ash Point. During the rivalry between that point and Okeeta, Blancett killed a resident of Okeeta. Ash Point, during 1859, '60 and '61, contained three "ranches" or stores, a hotel, and about thirty inhabitants. The construction of the St. J. & W. R. R. blasted the hopes of its projectors, and it relapsed into a farm. In 1860, Mr. Parsons went to Colorado, and in 1861 enlisted in the Denver Home Guards. Later he recruited a company for a New Mexican regiment, and finally took the field as Second Lieutenant in the Second Colorado Volunteer Infantry; served three years and came out a First Lieutenant. His was the regiment that pursued Quantrell and his horde of murderous thieves into Missouri after the sacking of Lawrence, they capturing a number of the guerrillas and much of the plunder. Gen. Ewing, Lieut. Col. Hays, himself and other Kansas officers, were the originators of the famous order "No. 11," and this far-western regiment did its full share in the desultory warfare in New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri and Arkansas. At the close of the war, Mr. Parsons located again on his farm, which he sold in 1870, taking up his residence in Seneca, where he engaged in buying, fattening and selling stock. In 1880–'81 he was with his brother-in-law, C. N. Smith, in the boot and shoe business. Mr. Parsons married in Kane County, Ill., (her native county) Miss Hattie Smith.

In 1869 he built the present G. W. Williams' hardware store, and in two years sold out to Nelson and Williams. Buying out Mr. Nelson in 1874, the firm of Peckham & Williams flourished for three or four years, when Mr. Peckham retiring, built the store now occupied by Martin, Jacks & Co., and kept a general store until his final retirement to his pretty suburban farm and home west of town in 1880. Here Mr. Peckham has forty-five acres and an elegant modern house, overlooking the town and country, and surrounded by orchards and groves of his own planting. His wife was Miss M. C. CAPT. LEWIS SHEELEY was born, 1843, in Green County, Ohio, and spent seventeen years in his native State and in Michigan, locating at Seneca in 1860. In June, 1861, he enlisted in the Thirteenth Missouri, and as one of Col. Mulligan's gallant force in the memorable defense of Lexington, Mo., he was captured by the rebels. Upon his release he re-enlisted in the Second Missouri Cavalry; was commissioned Second Lieutenant, and fought the guerrillas in Missouri and Arkansas until the close of the war, when he enlisted in Hancock's Veteran Reserve Corps for one year. Since March, 1866, he has lived in Seneca, and was at one time commissioned Colonel of the First Kansas Militia. The Captain is an engineer by trade, and a Republican in politics. His wife was Emma T. Shafer, of Michigan. They have six children, all born in Seneca.

JOHN E. SMITH, farmer, P. O. Seneca, is one of the earliest settlers of Nemaha County, and a founder of its county-seat. He was born in Saugus, Mass., and reared in Derry, N. H., where most of his life was spent. He came from there for his first visit to Kansas in the fall of 1857, and in the spring of 1858, with a large party of friends and relatives made his permanent settlement at Seneca. [See General History of Seneca.] Mr. Smith married in Burlington, Vt., Miss Agnes Williams, of that city. Her father, W. Williams, died in her infancy, and her mother, coming as one of the pioneer party to Seneca, died here September 8, 1858. Mr. and Mrs. Smith kept "Smith's Hotel" until the fall of 1879, when they sold it and settled on their valuable 320-acre farm adjoining the city limits of Seneca to the west. This farm Mr. Smith has owned twenty-three years, and upon it has been built by himself and eldest son (the present manager), a handsome two-story brick farmhouse, 20x36 feet, with wing; a barn 85x75 feet, two and one-half stories; sheds 30x200 feet; a barn 14x60 feet for young stock, and an engine-house and feed-mill, wherein a twelve horse-power engine shells and grinds corn for the hundreds of head of cattle annually fattened here. Mr. W. H. Smith, the elder son, and his partner, G. W. Williams, now own about 600 head of cattle grazing in Nemaha and Marshall counties. The younger son, Frank E. Smith, is a graduate of the Columbia Law School, New York city, and is now practicing law in Seneca.

C., in the same business; then came to Nemaha County, Kansas, in 1860, and for over a year drove stage between Seneca and Hollenburg; he then drove one summer on the Platte route, and in the winter on a route south of Salt Lake City. The next year having charge of the station at Rock Creek, Neb. He was then for a time on the Smoky Hill route and saw his full share of the excitement and danger during the Indian raid in 1864. Since 1865 he has lived in Seneca; first as a teamster, and then for six years as a farmer. In 1877 he opened the "Overland Livery Stable," and has since kept it. M. E. STIRK & CO., well-borers, windmill and pump agents, came to this county in 1868 as wagon-makers. P. H. Stirk, a wagon-maker by trade, was born in 1825, in Chester County, Pa., and worked many years in Greenfield and Palestine, Ind. M. E. Stirk was born in 1856 in Hancock County, Ind., and began selling improved pumps and other appliances in 1875 and still continues the business, making a specialty of the Halliday windmill, that reliable old favorite so well known by farmers throughout the Union. He also sells the Challenge windmill, and in connection corn-shellers and feed-mills run by either the Halliday or the Challenge mills, with eight to sixty foot wheels. The father and son began using the Tiffin, Ohio, well-auger in 1881, and during the past few months have bored and drilled 100 wells from 17 to 100 feet in depth. Their success has been gratifying as the rock-drilling attachment to their machines enables them to sink wells almost anywhere

A. L. STONE, lumberman, came here in 1876, then went to Portland, Oregon, where with a brother he engaged in dairy-farming on a large scale for about three years. In December, 1879, he relocated in Seneca and began his present business, having since carried from $3,000 to $5,000 worth of stock. He married in Seneca, Miss Minnie W. Wetmore, daughter of L. At the end of six years he returned to Ohio, where he preached ten years. In 1857, he came to Kansas, locating at Baldwin City, then called Palmyra. Soon after his arrival he was made chairman of the committee having charge of the building of the proposed Methodist Episcopal College at that point. A grant of a section of land having been made by the Palmyra Town Company, adjoining Palmyra, it was laid off as a town site by Elder Taylor and the committee, and named Baldwin City, in honor of John Baldwin, of Berea, Ohio, known as "Old Grindstone John." In 1858, the name Palmyra was dropped, and both towns united under one name. Under the supervision of Mr. Taylor the original college building was erected. It was of stone, 24x40 feet, and three stories high. Elder Taylor spent eight years in Baldwin City, and two years at Circleville; was Presiding Elder of the Neosho, Wyandotte and Manhattan districts. He was then pastor of Junction City one year, and Paola one year. Was then at his own request placed on the retired list. During the next three years he, with H. N. Elliott, ex-Governor Green and J. The firm was originally Taylor & Galloway, of Manhattan, and now comprises Rev. N. Taylor, S. E. Galloway and C. W. Taylor, Mr. Galloway being a son-in-law and Mr. Taylor a nephew of the senior member of the firm. CAPT. A. W. WILLIAMS was born March 21, 1818, in Rochester, N. Y. From his fourteenth to his twenty-fourth year he resided in Oakville, Canada. In 1842, he located as an architect and builder in Marion, Linn Co., Iowa; thence, in the spring of 1857, he came to Kansas, and in 1858, under the townsite law, pre-empted a half-section of land, and laid out the town of Sabetha. [See General History.] He was carrying on mercantile business here in 1861, when he raised 14 volunteers, 100 of whom entered the service as Company D, of the Eighth Kansas, with himself as Captain. He resigned the position in 1863, on account of ill health. In 1870, he sold out his entire property in Sabetha to an agent of the St. J. & W. R. R. Co., and began the hardware business in Seneca. After a few years, by an exchange of town property, he came into possession of his fine farm, a mile and a half south of Seneca, where he has since lived in comparative retirement. Capt. Williams married in Marion, Linn Co., Iowa, Miss Mary A. Nordyke, of Vienna, Ohio. They have two sons—Justus H. and Charles B., both useful and respected citizens, and four daughters—Loretta (now Mrs. Wells), Eliza (Mrs. Masheter), Mary (Mrs. Magill), and Olive. The youngest son and daughter are with the old folks, who rank among the earliest and most successfully progressive in Nemaha county.

J. H. WILLIAMS, merchant of Seneca, son of Capt. A. W. Williams, a man closely connected with the civil war and military history of Kansas, as he was founder of Sabetha in 1857, and won his shoulder-straps while serving in the Eighth Kansas J. H. He was appointed Clerk of the Circuit in 1867, and elected to same office in fall of 1868, which he held until 1870. In January, 1868, he was married to Miss Eliza M. Perry, daughter of J. C. Van Loan, formerly known as the "Grange Store." In November, 1877, Mr. Williams bought the stock and business of Mr. Van Loan, and adopted the name "TRADE PALACE" for his store, his line being dry goods, clothing, hats, caps, boots, shoes, etc. He has been a successful business man, liberal-hearted and public-spirited. He organized the "Seneca Board of Trade," with nearly one hundred members, of which he was elected President. He is a member of the Universalist Church, and in politics has always worked and voted with the Republicans.

CHARLES E. WILSON, proprietor Wilson House, was born in 1858, in Henry County, Ind., where his father, S. B. Wilson, was a very early settler, and his grandfather also, the latter a hotel-keeper. The family have resided in Indianapolis, Ind., for twenty years past. C. E. Wilson was educated in Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., and married in Cincinnati, Ohio, to Miss Arry V. Mitchell, of Indianapolis. Mr. Wilson came to Seneca in August, 1879, purchased and ran the "City Hotel," called by him the "Wilson House," until July, 1882, when he leased that house to H. G. Stiles, who restored the old name. Mr. Wilson in turn leased of P. J. Assenmacher the centrally located hotel now so popular under his good management. It contains twenty-five rooms, and is the only first-class house in Nemaha County.

SABETHA.

Sabetha, the second town of importance in Nemaha County, is located on the extreme eastern border of the county, about sixteen miles northeast of Seneca. Its site is one admirably chosen, commanding at once, streets reasonably level, and natural drainage, a great desideratum of prairie towns. In its vicinity are groves of natural and artificial timber, serving to break the otherwise monotonous aspect of its surroundings, which are, in the main, rolling prairie lands, admirably watered, and producing all of the grains and grasses adapted to the latitude. The vicinity of the town is closely settled by a sturdy, substantial class of farmers, who have done very much to make it what it claims to be, the leading shipping point of grain and live stock between Hastings and St. Joseph.

Its buildings are erected with an eye to the beautiful as well as the substantial, many of them presenting an appearance worthy of a place of far greater note.

EARLY HISTORY.

The first settlement upon the land where Sabetha is now situated, was made by Captain A. W. Williams, a native of Rochester, N. Y., who came from Wisconsin in the early spring of 1857, locating upon the site of the future town, and having one-half section of land surveyed and filed in the spring of 1858. The name which it now bears, was given the village at this time, being the same as that of Jim Lane's somewhat famous fort, two miles east, in what was afterward Brown County. This fort in Brown County was named Lexington. Plymouth was down the Pony Creek, north of it. In 1857 Captain Williams established a store, and received a commission as post-master, the few settlers being obliged prior to this time, to go to the Missouri river, a distance of nearly fifty miles, for their mail. During the same year there arrived at, or very near, the new settlement, George, John L. and William Graham, Edwin Miller, William Slosson, Isaac Sweetland, Lawrence R. Wheeler and Noble H. Rising, the last named establishing the second store soon after his arrival.

Of these early settlers, Captain A. W. Williams is now living in the vicinity of Seneca; William Graham and Isaac Sweetland are still active citizens of the town which they helped to build, and which they have watched almost from the time of its conception; George and John L. Graham are dead, the latter yielding up his life for his country. Captain Williams, in addition to being the first post-master, was also the first justice of the peace. He relates that his sales averaged two hundred dollars a day during the Pike's Peak emigration of 1858 and 1859, the new town being situated directly upon the St. Joseph and Denver trail, a fact which would have been of manifest advantage to the permanent growth and prosperity of the settlement, had the temptations which it offered not been too much for many of its own citizens, upon whom it depended for its stability. Captain Williams' store building burned down shortly after its erection, was rebuilt, and continued under the same proprietorship until 1861, when it, together with that of Noble H. Rising was closed, the owners entering the army. This occasioned the opening of a new store by one John J. Goodpasture, distinguished as the only man left in Sabetha at the time.

The first preaching in Sabetha, or more properly speaking, the first attempt at a religious organization, occurred in 1859, Williams' store being occupied for that purpose, and a Methodist circuit rider, by the name of Rawlins, officiating. The first wedding was that of W. G. Sargent and Fanny Gertrude Whittenhall, united in marriage December 27, 1859. The first birth can no longer be definitely determined, there being various claimants to the honor. The first school was taught by Rebecca Hawkins (now Mrs. C. P. Branigan), during the summer of 1860, in a log building owned by John J. Goodpasture, and at one time kept as a hotel by Noble H. Rising. The attendance varied from five to eighteen pupils.

The first town company was that of 1859, the incorporators, under a special act of the Legislature, being James Oldfield, Isaac Sweetland and A. W. Williams. No special advantage being taken of the act by those interested, an incorporation charter, under the general laws of the State, was issued by Thomas Moonlight, Secretary of State, on August 24, 1870, to William B. Slosson, John T. Brady, Thomas B. Collins and Archibald Moorhead, of Kansas, and Eldred P. Gray, Benjamin Childs and Jefferson Chandler, of Missouri, these parties being organized as the Sabetha Town Company, with a corporate term of existence of ten years, it being understood that they were liable in the sum of $4,000 to A. W. Williams, who owned the title to the town site.

At the time the war interfered so seriously with the growth of so many of our Western towns, Sabetha contained three store buildings, a blacksmith shop, owned by Captain Philip Rockefeller, and two or three dwellings. For ten years there was no change of importance, the new growth, which has resulted so favorably, being inaugurated by the advent of the railroad in 1870. At this time a drug store was opened by E. B. Gebhart and T. K. Masheter, succeeded by the junior partner in 1872, sold to Wright & Behne in 1875, transferred to Masheter & Wright in August, 1876, T. K. Masheter resuming sole proprietorship in June, 1879, and being succeeded by McCullough & Glass in February, 1880. This is the oldest store, continuous as to the original business in the town.

As has been said, Williams' grocery store building, also occupied as the postoffice, was destroyed by fire in 1860. In March, 1875, the residence of John T. Brady was consumed, the loss being about $1,500, and in 1877, Masheter's drug store building was burned, entailing a loss of $4,000. No other fires of importance have occurred, and devastating winds, so formidable upon the Kansas prairies, have so far, treated Sabetha kindly by their non-attention. Its prosperity, since the arrival of the railroad did away with the last important obstacle to its growth, has been remarkable, its present population being about 1,100.

As has been mentioned, the first school in Sabetha was that taught by Rebecca Hawkins (now Mrs. C. P. Branigan) during the summer of 1860. The second teacher was Hattie Rockefeller, the third Thomas Phillips, others in direct succession being Abijah Wells, Mary Perry, A. J. Wagner, D. L. Anderson, William Churchhill, Susan West and E. Philbrook. The first school building, a frame structure, was erected in 1866, being first occupied by Mary Perry. It was built by the district at a cost of $2,100, and was abandoned only because of the necessity for more room. This demand was filled in 1871, by the building of a fine frame edifice, costing $5,000, reinforced by a third, one of the best brick buildings in Northern Kansas, in 1882, at an expense to the district of $7,700. Each of these buildings, now in use, contain four rooms, and are admirably adapted to the purpose for which they were intended.

The schools were graded in September, 1880, by Professor T. W. Cunnick, into primary, intermediate and grammar departments. In 1882 a High School was established. Since these improvements in method, the progress of the schools has been rapid, the roster showing three teachers and two hundred and ninety pupils during the school year of 1880–81, increased to five teachers and three hundred and ninety pupils in 1881–82, an additional teacher being secured in 1882–83, to help meet the demands of the five hundred pupils enrolled. The studies are those corresponding to the ones required to obtain a first-class county certificate.

INCORPORATION.

Previous to the year 1874 the town of Sabetha had no government distinct from that of the township. The condition of the streets and alleys, the preservation of the public peace, the general welfare of the citizens as affected by ordinance, were matters for the County Board of Commissioners and the Township Trustees. During the summer of the year mentioned, in response to a petition of the citizens, then numbering 600, Judge P. L. Hubbard, District Judge of the Second Judicial District, issued an order for the incorporation of Sabetha, in accordance with the laws of the State, as a city of the third class.

An election was ordered for August 15, 1874, George W. Larzelere, Isaac Sweetland and Ira F. Collins being appointed Judges; Samuel Slosson and John Kaffer, Clerks; and Albert West, George E. Irwin and O. O. Marbourg, Board of Canvassers. The result of this election was to place in office, Ira F. Collins, Mayor; A. E. Cook, Police Judge; M. E. Mather, Isaac Sweetland, John Muxworthy, John T. Brady and G. H. Adams, members of the Council.

THE PRESS, CHURCHES, AND SOCIETIES.

The first paper in Sabetha was the Advance, established May 7, 1874, by George W. Larzelere and James H. Wright. The former withdrew November 6, following. February 4, 1875, William L. Palmer joined J. H. Wright in its publication, but remained only six weeks. J. L. Peltier was connected with the paper for a few weeks, dating from August of the same year. July 28, 1876, Wright sold the paper to E. A. Davis, who continued its publication until January 18, 1878, when it was discontinued. The Advance was republican in politics. The Nemaha County Republican was established at Sabetha, October 5, 1876, by James F. Clough, and June 1, of the following year, J. C. Hebbard, formerly of Seneca and now of Topeka, became Associate Editor, a position which he retained for about one year. The paper, as its name indicates, is Republican. It is a seven-column folio, and ably represents the interests of the town and surrounding country.

It is somewhat difficult to determine what church organization deserves precedence in the religious history of Sabetha, for the reason that several of its societies are the direct outgrowth of those established at Albany in the early history of the county. Of these, the Congregational denomination was undoubtedly the first to secure a foothold in the immediate vicinity, a Congregational church being organized at Albany, on September 26, 1858. Its early history will be found in the proper place.

The Sabetha Congregational Church, (formerly the Albany Church) was reorganized in Sabetha in 1871, with Rev. O. A. Thomas, Pastor. In 1874, the society erected a fine frame church building, at a cost of $4,000 and with seating capacity for 600. Rev. H. W. Shaw succeeded O. A. Thomas about 1872, remaining until 1880, when Rev. Alfred C. Hogbin, the present incumbent, assumed the Pastorate. The present membership is two hundred.

The Methodist Episcopal Church.—A society of this denomination was organized in the old schoolhouse at Sabetha, in 1868, by Rev. F. W. Meyer. There are no local church records in existence, except from the year 1877. The following list of pastoral incumbents, however, is believed to be correct: 1868, Rev. F. W. Meyer; 1869, Rev. John Madison; 1870, Rev. John Deming; 1871, Rev. E. Gill; 1872, Rev. D. Campbell and Rev. B. F. Parlett; 1873 and 1874, Rev. E. C. Chilson; 1875, Rev. C. Minear and Rev. M. Spencer; 1876, Rev. M. Spencer; 1877, Rev. F. F. Otto; 1878 and 1879, Rev. W. H. Underwood; 1880 and 1881, Rev. J. Biddison; 1882, Rev. C. W. Shaw. In 1874, the society erected a church building, at a cost of $4,000 and with a seating capacity for three hundred, the structure being dedicated January 27, 1878, by Bishop Thomas Bowman, of St. Louis. The number of actual members enrolled at present is about one hundred and seventy-five.

The Sabetha Baptist Church was organized in 1871, with about eight communicants. Its first Pastor was Rev. Granville Gates, who remained until 1876; from 1876 to the spring of 1878 Rev. Peter Carey and Rev. J. Walters officiated, each of whom continued in the pastorate but a brief period; upon the departure of the latter Rev. Granville Gates resumed his former position, being succeeded by Rev. S. Taylor. The next incumbent was Rev. W. A. Bigart, the present Pastor. The society erected a handsome church building in 1875, at a cost of $1,200. Its seating capacity is two hundred. The number of members one hundred.

The German Reformed Church was organized in the year 1880, with thirty members. Its Pastor from the first has been Rev. D. J. Greenewald. The society worships in the Baptist Church.

A Catholic society, numbering about twenty members, has been receiving occasional ministrations for about two years from Rev. Father Timothy Luber. In 1882, a fine frame church building was erected, at a cost of $2,500. It has a seating capacity for 400.

Edson, Mr. and Mrs. Prof. Philbrook, H. Tarr, Samuel Slosson and D. L. Gebhart. About twenty books were donated and purchased as the nucleus to a library. Until 1879, no change was made as to the method of conducting the affairs of the society, its only income being the result of yearly fees and fines imposed. On January 1 of the year mentioned, the society was duly incorporated under the laws of the State, with a capital stock of $1,000, divided into shares of $10 each. As now managed, it is in charge of a board of five directors; those now in office being, I. F. Collins, G. C. McGuire, C. L. Sherwood, J. F. Clough and H. Tarr. Its executive officers are: R. C. Bassett, President; H. Tarr, Secretary; C. L. Sherwood, Librarian and Treasurer. The library, which occupies a part of Sherwood & Marshall's drug store, consists of 650 well selected volumes in all departments of literature. Their use is free to stockholders, a yearly fee of $2 being charged to all others.

W. C. T. U.—In April, 1878, a temperance movement was inaugurated in Sabetha, by Rev. H. W. Shaw, Rev. W H. Underwood, L. R. Wheeler, O. Fountain, S. Slosson and G. H. Adams. Much good was done within a very short time, the encouragement being sufficient to induce the permanent organization of a branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union; this being thought a more advisable step than that of attempting to constitute a lodge. The list of charter members, included as prime movers: Mrs. T. W. Wickens, Mrs. H. W. Shaw, Mrs. W. H. Underwood, Mrs. O Fountain, Mrs. Dr. Slosson, and Mrs. W. B. Slosson, assisted by twenty-six others, hardly less devoted to the cause than themselves. In September, 1878, under the auspices of the Union, a Band of Hope was organized, the result of the combined efforts of those interested being that in November, 1882, Rock Creek Township, in which Sabetha is the all important political factor, gave eighty majority for the prohibition amendment. The present membership of the Union is sixty.

Sabetha Cornet Band.—This is a comparatively recent organization, effected in February, 1882. Its members are: J. R. McKee, John Muxworthy, G. J. Adams, C. R. Gardner, G. E. Palmer, N. L. Mitchell, J. W. Cunnick, G. W. Myers and M. Turner.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS, HOTELS AND BANKS.

The Sabetha Opera House, a very handsome two-story brick building, was erected in 1877, by W. S. White, W. M. Walker and the Sabetha State Bank, the latter owning the corner room of the first floor. Its entire cost was $8,000. Its second story is divided into two large halls, known as Opera Hall and Odd Fellows' Hall. The latter of these is occupied by the Odd Fellows' Lodge and as a public hall, the former for miscellaneous purposes.

The first commission issued to a post master at Sabetha was granted to A. W. Williams, the first store keeper, in 1858. Upon his enlistment in the army in 1861, John J. Goodpasture, the only male resident remaining in town became the official incumbent, to be succeeded in a short time by John C. Perry. The next commission was issued to D. L. Gebhart, who gave way to Samuel Slosson. The present post master, J. F. Clough, proprietor of the Nemaha County Republican, being appointed in August, 1877. For many years the mails were received and delivered at and from various store buildings, the office being frequently moved. In 1877 it was situated in the brick building now occupied by G. H. Adams, and was moved in September, 1881, to its present location, the east end of the Sabetha House. It is elegantly fitted up, its appointments having cost one thousand dollars. In April the office was increased to one of the third class.

Sabetha receives a daily mail from the east and west, via the St. Joseph & Western R. R., and also a daily mail by stage, from the Central Branch of the Union Pacific, which traverses the southern section of the county.

As early as 1858 travelers were entertained by A. W. Williams, who would deserve the appellation of Sabetha's first hotel keeper even had he not built a frame structure 36x50 feet, very early in the history of the town, which he devoted exclusively to hotel purposes. This was subsequently purchased by the town company in 1870, and leased by Albert West, who managed it as lessee until 1874, when he bought the title. A few years later it was abandoned as to the purpose for which it was designed.

In 1870, a hotel building opened in Albany by Edwin Miller, was moved to Sabetha. It was a two-story, cottonwood structure, still standing upon Main Street, and occupied now as a dwelling.

The Sabetha House was built by the town company in 1871, managed by W. I. Robbins for a time, and finally purchased by Jackson Swearengen, in 1879. It is a substantial brick building, three stories in height.

Hook's House was built in 1870, burned in February, 1873, rebuilt, and continues to accommodate the public, under the original proprietorship. It is a large frame structure, conveniently situated to the depot.

A private institution, known as the Sabetha Exchange Bank was established in 1873, by M. E. Mather; J. S. Lemon and I. T. Hosea, of St. Joseph, becoming partners in 1875. On January 1, 1877, the affairs of the bank were closed, the design of the capitalists chiefly interested being to organize a joint stock company for banking purposes.

The Sabetha State Bank, was organized early in 1876, being opened for business on March 6, of that year. Its incorporators were J. S. Lemon, I. T. Hosea, Edwin Knowles, Willis Brown and J. E. Black, these constituting its first Board of Directors. The officers were: Willis Brown, President; J. E. Black, Vice-President; Edwin Knowles, Cashier. The subscribed capital of the bank is $50,000, the paid in capital $39,000. The concern occupies the corner of Opera block, that portion of the structure having been built and elegantly fitted up by the company in 1877. It contains a Hall burglar proof safe, with improved Yale time lock. No change has been made in the officers, except that G. H. Adams has succeeded J. E. Black as Vice-President, and a newly created position is filled by Charles E. Clarkson, as Assistant Cashier. The Board of Directors comprises J. S. Lemon, I. T. Hosea, Edwin Knowles, Willis Brown and G. H. Adams.

BUSINESS INTERESTS.

Sabetha claims to be the leading shipping point for grain and live stock, between St. Joseph and Hastings, Neb., presenting the following facts in support of its assertion. In 1871 the first warehouse was built by two firms, Slosson Brothers, and Brady & Collins, the latter firm disposing of its interest shortly after the completion of the building, to L. R. Wheeler, who, with the Slossons, managed it until 1881, when it was sold to J. E. Price. Mr. Price immediately converted it into an elevator, at an expense of several thousand dollars; put in a twenty-five horse power engine, and the newest and best machinery known to grain dealers. These improvements enable him to elevate, clean, weigh and load for shipment 800 bushels of grain per hour, a capacity which is frequently tested.

Gregg Brothers & Co.'s grain company of St. Joseph, Mo., own and operate at Sabetha, the largest grain elevator on the St. Joseph & Western Railroad southeast of Hastings, and west of St. Joseph. It was built in 1875 by William Gatton, sold in 1876 to M. E. Mather, and three years later transferred to H. Gregg, one of its present owners. The elevator is well and solidly built, has a capacity of 30,000 bushels of corn and small grain, and is in the efficient charge of E. P. Neal. Thirteen car loads of grain have been cleaned, weighed and shipped here in one day.

The Sabetha Flouring Mills were built in 1872, by L. J. Sprinkle, who sold it to Smith & Kurtz. The latter sold his half interest to Willis M. Slosson, who subsequently bought Smith's interest, also. Other owners in direct succession have been: W. E. Stitt, L. B. Brinson, I. N. Speer & Co., and finally Speer & Hubburd, who assumed control in May, 1882. The mill during the year last mentioned, was thoroughly remodeled, new and improved machinery added, together with an additional run of burrs, making three in all. An elevator was also constructed in connection with the mill, with a capacity of 18,000 bushels, all of the machinery, of both mill and elevator, being operated by a forty-horse power engine. The Superintendent in charge is George C. Maguire; the head miller, J. C. Hendrie.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

HARMAN ALTHOUSE, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, is a son of the late Conrad Althouse, a Hessian, who served as a Captain under the First Napoleon during all his campaigns from Piedmont to Waterloo. At the final downfall of that great warrior, Capt. Althouse sought and found refuge in the United States. He married in Somerset County, Pa., Susanna Workman, who survives him. The family came West to Savanna, Mo., in 1857, removing two years later to Rock Creek, where the father died in 1860, at the age of sixty-seven. His eldest son, Harman Althouse, was born 1834, in Somerset County, Pa., and married near Savanna, Mo., Miss Susanna, daughter of Abram Howard, one of the original settlers of the "Platte Purchase." Mr. Althouse settled on his present farm in 1860, and has made good and durable improvements, beginning with raw prairie. Near him lives his aged mother and his brother, John Althouse, all that now represent this family in Kansas.

His wife was Miss Emily, daughter of Elijah Williams, a prominent business man of Cleveland, Ohio, the organizer and President of its Board of Trade, and a man whose accidental death in 1879 was deeply deplored. In 1860 he settled on a farm, now part of the Sabetha town site, and a year later sold to I. D. Simons, and located north of Capioma, where he secured the organization of school district No. 18, and did good work at farming. In 1871 he located where he now is; he has 480 acres of magnificent land in a body, and is now building a tasteful and commodious farmhouse at a cost of $2,000. His wife was Sarah Barnes, of Guernsey County, Ohio. They have six children, all born Kansans. Mr. Chase has been an elder in the Christian Church since 1873; has organized three churches, and now has charge of that number. He has also been a vigorous and effective temperance worker.

J. F. CLOUGH, editor Nemaha County Republican, and postmaster of Sabetha, was born 1847, in Oxford, Ohio, and at fifteen, while an attendant of the village school, he enlisted in the Sixty-ninth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, serving from 1861 to 1864. Corwin lived alternately in Pennsylvania and Ohio until 1856, when he settled in Greene County, Pa. He enlisted early in 1862 in the Ninety-seventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, serving through the entire war as a First Lieutenant under Gen. W. T. Sherman, taking part in the first siege of Vicksburg, the battles north of Atlanta, the march to Savannah and through the Carolinas. Discharged with his regiment after the "Grand Review" in 1865, he began the carpenter's trade in Indiana, and came thence, in 1872, to Sabetha. It is but just to say that his repeated re-appointment to his place at the head of the city schools is the result of the high appreciation in which his services as an educator and disciplinarian are held by the tax payers of Sabetha.

O. FOUNTAIN, merchant, was born in Zanesville, Ohio, November 21, 1834; was reared and educated in Peoria County, Ill. This battery was the first of the military to reach Cairo, Ill., where it remained on duty during its three months' term of service. Lieut. Freelove, however, with fifty-four men ran the patrol boat "W. H. Brown" between Cairo and St. Louis. After his term of enlistment, while stationed at Bird's Point with the battery, he turned his guns on the commissary, threatening to blow the establishment to flinders unless rations heretofore refused by reason of "red tape" subterfuges, were furnished in five minutes, and, as he says: "We got 'em." Serving two months after his time, he re-enlisted in the Eighth Illinois Cavalry, which heroic and reckless regiment, thoroughly detested and feared by the Rebels, took active part in the following battles: Manassas, Rappahannock Station, Mechanicsville, Seven Pines, Gaines' Mill, Savage Station, White Oak Swamp, Malvern Hill, Poolesville, Frederic, South Mountain, Boonesboro, Antietam, Martinsburg, Piedmont, Barber's Cross Roads, Little Washington, Amosville, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Beverly Ford, Gettysburg (where it opened the fight), Second Boonesboro, Frankstown, First and Second Brandy Station, Culpepper, Raccoon Ford, Stevensburg, Brantsville, Second Culpepper, Mine Run and others. His first wife nee Ellen Smith, died in Indiana. The present Mrs. Freelove was Lucretia Aldrich, of Vermont. Her first husband, George Wyman, left her one daughter; her second, F. C. Tyrell, leaving her a son and daughter. Both deceased husbands were Union soldiers, Mr. Wyman dying in the service.

Graham was one of the few army officers who were never known to taste intoxicating drinks. He left two sons—Charles D. and Fred E. His widow afterward married E. F. Bouton (see sketch). Graham County, Kan., was named by the Kansas State Legislature in honor of Capt. John L. Graham.

Y., born in 1834; he was reared a farmer, and came with the Albany Colony to Kansas in the spring of 1857. His farm lay just to the south of what afterward became Sabetha. Here he worked until July, 1861, when he enlisted in the Thirteenth Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and was captured with the heroic Mulligan at Lexington; was paroled and discharged; re-enlisted in November, 1861, in the Seventh Kansas Cavalry, and served through the war with that regiment. Returning to Sabetha, he was married in 1870, to Miss Sarah L. Rolyea, of Union, Broome Co., N. Y. They have one daughter—Eliza J., born in Sabetha. Mr. and Mrs. Graham are leading members of the Congregational church, of which he is a deacon. Politically he is a Republican.

G. W. GREENFIELD, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, was born September 14, 1842, in Canada. He learned the trade of carpenter, and in 1869 came to Nemaha County, Kan. With him were two brothers, James and John. At the end of 100 days he enlisted in the Fifty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was sent into Texas with his regiment, and served until November, 1865. On his discharge he settled in St. Joseph, Mo., and clerked three years for May, Weil & Co.; was then for four or five years partner of Capt. Williams, at Bigelow, Mo., where he remained until he located at Sabetha. Here he has erected a spacious and elegantly appointed home for his wife, nee Jessie Hartzell, and large family of eight children. During the Civil War, Mr. Haigh served two years as a teamster. The family began poor, living in a log house with no neighbors near, and suffered much from sickness and privation, but eventually secured a fine farm by improving the original claim, and a pleasant home by replacing the log cabin with a neat frame farmhouse. Mr. Haigh died in 1872, leaving a widow and three children, to mourn the loss of a husband and father, always to be remembered as a kind and good one.

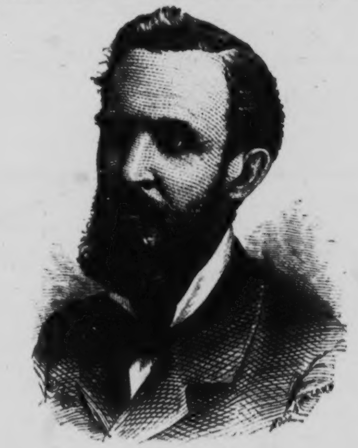
Groninger & Co., took his place as head miller in the Sabetha Mills. His father, George Hendrie, served one year in Virginia during the Rebellion as a volunteer in the One Hundredth and Seventh Pennsylvania Regiment.

J. HESSELTINE, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, was born in 1830, in Clinton County, N. Y.; reared in Medina County, Ohio, where his parents, Eli and Betsey Hesseltine, settled in 1833. In the spring of 1858 he came from Marion County, Ohio, to Kansas, and his present farm, 160 acres of which he holds by virtue of the United States patent. His first night on this claim was spent by himself and family in their wagon; he then building a shanty of "sheeting;" a bed being made by driving two stakes, and placing sticks from them to the walls. His neighbors were a Z. Archer and A. Moorehead, not a house being in sight. To-day he has 720 acres in a well fenced and improved farm, and a commodious farmhouse built in 1879. He married Miss Caroline Waits, of Richland County, Ohio. They have seven children, all save the eldest, born in Rock Creek Township. Mr. Hesseltine is a large feeder and breeder of cattle, and is prospering, as he ought.

E. HOLTZSCHUE, of the mercantile firm of Hammon & Holtzschue, is a native of Germany, born in 1842. He came to the United States in 1864, and from 1865 to 1877 clerked in St. Joseph, Mo. The firm as now constituted was founded in 1880. Mr. Hammon resides in St. Joseph, Mr. Holtzschue managing the Sabetha branch, the store being 22x110 feet, the deepest in Northern Kansas. Four or five clerks are kept in constant employ, and a very large business transacted, as a full line of general merchandise is carried, hardware and drugs only excepted. Mr. Holtzschue is a member, with his wife, of the German Reformed Lutheran Church, has a pleasant home and three children.

W. H. HOOK, proprietor Hook's House, is the son of Capt. William Hook, who followed the sea for twenty years. In 1830, while on a voyage with his family, he touched at the Island of St. Thomas, West Indies, where W. H. Hook was born. He grew up in Bangor and Portland, Me., and removed to Carlisle, Ind.; thence in 1846 to the lead mines of Wisconsin; thence to Kansas in 1870. During that year he built Hook's Railway House, which burned down February 7, 1873. On the site he at once built the present hotel, which his genial good management has made the headquarters of commercial men in Sabetha. Mr. Hook married in Carlisle, Ind., Rebecca Arnett. They have ten children, the eldest born in Carlisle and the others in Southwestern Wisconsin. Mr. Hook is a grandson of two Revolutionary officers, who, with warrants, located large tracts of lands in Rockingham County, N. H., where W. H. Hook's parents were born and reared as neighbors of Daniel Webster.

EDWIN KNOWLES, banker, is a native of Maine, and is a son of Alfred Knowles, now of Galesburg, Ill., and himself a stockholder in five different banks. The subject of this sketch came to Seneca, Kan., 1871, with the flouring mill belonging to himself and his father, and engaged in milling and banking until 1877, when he located in Sabetha, where he has built an elegant home, and in various ways advantageously identified himself with the place. He was made a Director of the St. J. & W. R. R. in 1878, and has since held the position, but is best known in Kansas as a banker, being President of the Washington State Bank and the State Bank of Seneca, Kansas, Cashier of the Sabetha State Bank and a Director of the Centralia State Bank. Mr. Knowles and wife are active members of the First Congregational Church of Sabetha, and he, since 1877, President of the State Board of Charities. Politically, Mr. Knowles is a Republican, but he has never taken an active interest in campaigns as an aspirant for office.



Edwin Knowles

W. B. LAWRENCE, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, was born in Steuben County, N. Y., in 1836, and came thence in 1858 to Albany, where he now lives. In early times he was active with W. B. Slosson and others in helping slaves across the Missouri River into Iowa via Peru and Nebraska City, Neb. In 1860 he went to Colorado and enlisted in the Second Colorado Volunteer Cavalry, and served through the war of the rebellion with his regiment. He has since resided in Albany, married Emily Stewart of his native county, and with her is a member of the Congregational Church of Sabetha. They have two children—Guy and May—both born in Albany. Mr. Lawrence is a Freemason of Sabetha Lodge No. 162.

M. A. LEWIS, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, is a native of Broome County, N. Y., and married Jennie McGregor of that county. They came to Kansas in March, 1869, and in 1871 settled where they now live. Mr. Lewis has here a valuable 160-acre farm, on which he has spared no labor during the past ten years, having erected a substantial and tasty frame farmhouse and planted about 600 fruit trees, besides fencing and hedging. He is a Republican, and Congregationalist with his wife.

J. A. McCAUL, attorney-at-law, is a native of Toronto, Canada, where he was reared and educated. He located in 1876 at Hiawatha, Kan., where he was admitted to the bar in 1879. He practiced for a short time in Morrill, in Brown County, but came thence to Sabetha, where he has built up a very comfortable law practice and a good business as a loan and real estate agent. Politics, Republican.

J. R. McKEE, D. D. S., was born and educated in Armstrong County, Pa., and began the practice of dentistry in Lathrop, Mo., in 1870. Came from there to Sabetha in the fall of 1881; married Miss Emma A. Hook, of Sabetha, and is prosperous and popular. Is leader of the Sabetha brass band, which he organized, and a member of the Congregational Church, Sabetha.

GEORGE C. MAGUIRE, Superintendent of the Sabetha Mill and Elevator, was born in Baltimore, Md., in 1847; attended the city schools and later St. John's College, Annapolis, where Hon. Reverdy Johnson and the most noted of Maryland scholars were also schooled. In 1861 he went to the Virginia and Maryland battlefields as correspondent for various Baltimore newspapers, and wrote more or less for those journals during the entire Civil War. He came West in 1870, clerked for a mercantile house in St. Joseph, Mo., eight years, then located as a merchant in Sabetha. In 1880 he discontinued business and took his present position. Mr. Maguire was an organizer, and is Dictator of the Excelsior Lodge K. of H. He married Miss Mary B., daughter of Rev. William Philips, a noted Catholic divine, formerly of Baltimore and St. Joseph, Mo., now a well known lecturer.

T. K. MASHETER, merchant, was born September 16, 1843, in Zanesville, Ohio, and reared and educated near Albanen, in Meigs Co., Ohio. He located in Sabetha in April, 1870, and opened a nursery-camp, raising fruit trees of all kinds of small fruits, and shade and ornamental trees and shrubs. He owned twenty acres on the town site, and followed the nursery business about eight years, and during this time owned and kept the first drug store in the city. Closing out both of his former lines, he embarked in the general merchandise trade in 1881. He married, in 1871, Miss Eliza W., daughter of Capt. A. W. Williams, the first settler of Sabetha. Mrs. Masheter was born in Bronta, Canada, September 6, 1849, and has lived in Sabetha longer than any other resident (since September, 1856) of this thriving little city. Mr. and Mrs. Masheter are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have five children living. In 1882, Mr. Masheter laid out an addition of ninety-eight lots to the city of Sabetha, on the southwest, comprising the finest resident lots in the city.

M. E. MATHER, farmer and stockdealer, P. O. Sabetha, came to Sabetha in 1872, and began by establishing the Sabetha Exchange Bank (see notes on Sabetha). His failure in this enterprise he attributes to poor crops and the grasshopper panic, as well as the unreasoning haste and fear of creditors. Since 1877 he has lived on his farm, of 160 acres, near Sabetha, controlling by lease one-half a section besides. In 1875 he bought a half section here for $5,400. Creditors took half his land and all his personal property; yet to-day he owns about 200 head of cattle and has a good and valuable home farm. His barn, 38x112 feet, built in 1875 at the low cost of $1,000, is one of the best in Nemaha County, and would cost $3,000 to build it at this writing. Mr. Mather is an enthusiastic stock man, active, courteous and intelligent, a diligent reader and a close and practical thinker. He bi-annually feeds from 250 to 350 head of cattle, and is prospering. He was born in Columbus, Pa., and learned the profession of contractor and builder from his father, Dan Mather, now of Clarksville, Iowa, beginning for himself in 1861. M. E. Mather soon saved about $7,000, which was his capital when he began in Kansas. His wife was Miss Florence, daughter of Ex-State Senator J. M. Miller, who settled near Seneca in 1870 and is now a citizen of Colorado.

JACOB J. MILLER, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, came to Kansas in 1859, making the claim on which he now lives. During the first two years he worked in a Missouri saw-mill, and in 1861 enlisted for six months in the Missouri State Militia. Returning to his farm, he put in and harvested the crop of 1862, and in August enlisted in the Kansas Thirteenth for three years; fought at Cane Hill, Prairie Grove, Van Buren, and in other disputes with the Missouri and Arkansas rebels. For two years after the war he worked by the month for A. Moorehead. Built his house in 1867, and in 1868 married Miss Mary Moorehead. He now has 320 acres of land, all fenced and mainly under improvement, good buildings and a five-acre orchard, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have four children—Annabel, Lillie, Bennie and Nellie, all born in Rock Creek, Nehama Co., Kan.

W. T. MILLER, jeweler and dealer in watches, clocks, silverware, jewelry and musical instruments was born January 23, 1845, in Knox County, Ky. His parents settled near Falls City, Neb., in 1854. Here he grew to manhood, and established himself in business, coming to Sabetha in 1882. He married in Falls City, Annie E. Powell, who died in January, 1879, leaving four children—all born in Falls City. The father of W. T. Miller, John C. Miller, died in 1863, and the widowed mother, now sharing W. T. Miller's home, relates that in early times the famous General Jim Lane in disguise, with 150 followers, called at the Miller farmhouse and were treated to a substantial breakfast.

ARCHIBALD MOOREHEAD, deceased, one of the first men to locate in Rock Creek Township, was a native of Ireland, who came to the United States alone at the age of thirteen years, and after a year spent in New York, located in Ohio, thence going to Iowa, thence, in the fall of 1856, came to Kansas, where he bought 160 acres on Section 11, which is now the family homestead. He located here in the spring of 1857, and began farming and stock raising on a large scale, at one time owning 1,000 acres of land in this county, the home being about five miles north of Sabetha; here he died January 2, 1881, honored and respected by all whose friendship he had won during his long residence in the State. He was for years a member of the County Board of Supervisors, and was prominent in causing the county to take its decided course with the St. J. & W. R. R. Co., in 1872. Mrs. Moorehead was Sarah McBride, of Coshocton County, Ohio. Nine children resulted from this union, viz: Anna M., now Mrs. W. A. Joy, of Tecumseh, Neb.; Mary, now Mrs. J. J. Miller; Sarah, Mrs. I. F. Collins; these were born in Coshocton County, Ohio. William M., Archibald C. and Richard, all born in Wapello County, Iowa. Nannie, now Mrs. Roy A. Thompson; Nettie and Jennie; all born in Rock Creek. Two of the sons—A. C., of the firm of Moorehead & Collins, hardware merchants, Sabetha, and Richard—are joint owners of Section 16, in this county; 200 acres are under cultivation. Mrs. Moorehead and the two youngest children are on the home farm, comprising all of Section 11. During the border war this family were frequently visited by raiding parties from both sides, who, however, did no harm other than sponge free meals, and large ones.

JOHN P. PENDERGRASS, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, settled in Wyandotte County, Kan., in 1857; worked there until 1861; then settled on a farm three and half miles northwest of Sabetha. This he sold in 1866, settling where he now lives. Has 320 acres; 200 under cultivation. He married in Atchison, Kan., Julia Cavanagh, by whom he has five children, all born in Kansas, as was an infant and deceased daughter. Mr. Pendergrass was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, and came to the United States in 1848.

DANIEL PETTITT, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, was born in 1823, in Cambridgeshire, England, and married in the same shire, Elizabeth Gotobed, who was born 1823, in Helge, Norfolk. They came to America in 1851, and settled in Genesee County, N. Y., thence removing to Carroll County, Ill.; thence to their present Kansas farm. In New York State, Mr. Pettitt worked as a wagon maker, and in Illinois as carpenter and joiner. During the Civil War he served in the First Illinois Artillery. He has done good work on the farm where he now lives, having brought it all to a high state of improvement, erected good buildings, planted hedges, orchard, grove, etc. The children are: Rebecca, born January 1, 1843; James, born July 2, 1848; William, born October 31, 1850; Elizabeth, born November 25, 1853; Daniel J., October 9, 1855; Anna, July 17, 1859; Thomas, August 8, 1862, and Nathan, January 9, 1864. Two children—Daniel and Martha died in infancy.

J. E. PRICE, proprietor of elevator, came to this city in 1879. He was born July 4, 1843, in Huntingdon County, Pa.; enlisted early in the Civil War in the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; served eight months; was wounded at Antietam, and then fought until the collapse of the rebellion in the First Pennsylvania Light Artillery, coming out with a Lieutenant's commission, as a reward for heroism displayed in manning an abandoned gun at the siege of Richmond. From 1865 to 1873 he was in Cincinnati; from 1873 to 1875 in Doniphan County, Kan., and then in Hiawatha until 1879, when he bought a home and settled with his family in Sabetha. He is an Odd Fellow, belongs to the K. of H., and represented his lodge in the Grand Lodge of 1882 at Atchison.

CALEB RAWSON, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, was born in 1812, in Northbridge, Mass., and has been a lifelong and successful farmer. He emigrated to Geneseo, Ill., in 1852, and improved three farms thereabouts. In 1861 he settled in Jasper County, Iowa, improving three more farms in that county. The year 1870 found him on a new quarter section in Capioma Township, Nemaha County; after developing this farm, he began on another new one in Rock Creek Township, Sections 29 and 30. Here, in 1870, he planted 300 apple trees which, with 400 planted, subsequently make up what is conceded to be one of the most thrifty, productive and valuable orchards in Nemaha County; the first planted orchard alone produced 600 bushels of apples in 1881. At this writing both orchards are so laden down, that it has become necessary to destroy part of the fruit, as propping of the limbs has proved insufficient. Mr. Rawson is now living on his ninth farm, and has made it to "blossom like a rose garden," as he has all that have come into his possession during his fifty years' experience as a farmer. Beginning with land once broken, but abandoned, and so weed-grown, that fire swept the ground clear, he has planted trees, vines, and fruit bearing and ornamental shrubs in the greatest profusion; built a tasteful and substantial frame farmhouse, a barn, etc., and to-day his suburban farm is a model to see. His vineyard comprises 370 vines, mainly Concords; his garden of three acres, and the remainder to great crops of corn and potatoes, the equal of which the writer has not seen in Kansas. 10,000 Catawba plants growing in immense, dense green rows, are one of the features that interest the visitor at this pretty farm and hospitable home, while but a word can be said regarding the thrifty and vigorous orchards of peaches and apples now fairly started.

P. W. SEAMANS, retired farmer, was born in Woodstock, Conn., in 1816, and reared in Steuben County, N. Y., and in the fall of 1858 came to Kansas, making claims on Sections 20 and 29, Rock Creek Township. On this farm he planted Seamans' Grove, one of the first in Nemaha County, visible for many miles in either direction, and the land-mark for the host of over-land travelers, who soon began to make such claims upon his hospitality, as to encourage him to enlarge his cabin to a fair-sized house, and build a stone stable forty feet long. While living with his wife and children in his board roofed, floorless and windowless house, a party of eight travelers, not liking his slender accommodations, pushed on one cold night and nearly froze to death on the open prairie, trying to find Seneca, then the nearest inhabited point to the West. His place was popular for years thereafter, and was known all over the west as Seamans' Grove, which name it still bears, though he sold the property in 1865. He then lived on a farm at Albany, until his final retirement to Sabetha in 1881. He married in Steuben County, N. Y., Phoebe Blakeslee, who died in 1878, leaving three children. The present Mrs. Seamans' maiden name was Sarah Russell, of Seneca County, N. Y. She married Benjamin Force, who died in New York State, leaving two children—David A. Force, of Detroit, and Lizzie E., now Mrs. Blakeslee, of Elmira, N. Y.

SAMUEL SLOSSON, of Slosson Bros., was born in 1837, in Broome County, N. Y.; reared on a farm and came thence, in 1863, to Albany, Kan., associating with his brother, W. B. Slosson, who had located there as early as 1857. The brothers were prominent and prosperous merchants here until 1870, when they "packed up bag and baggage" and came to Sabetha, building the east part of the "Red Front" block. Samuel Slosson was the first station agent at this point, serving about a year. About this time the brothers built the warehouse now known as the Price elevator, and continued in the mercantile and grain business. In 1881 the "Red Front" block was nearly trebled in size, its present dimensions being 64x70 feet. Mr. Slosson married in Salem, Neb., in 1875, Miss Emma S., daughter of Dr. J. R. Brooke, a native of Philadelphia, who brought his family to Salem in 1860. Mrs. Slosson was born in Ohio, and educated in the Nebraska State Normal School, from which she graduated in 1871. She enjoys the honor of being the only lady physician in Nemaha County, having spent 1874-'75 in the Woman's Medical College, Philadelphia, from which institution she graduated with full honors in 1875. She relates with evident interest, that during the severe winter of 1880-'81, "Old Doctor Irwin" and herself were the only practitioners in Sabetha, the others, in consequence of the State Registration Law, having either quit practice or resumed study in order to secure the required diplomas. Mr. and Mrs. Slossen have two sons—Frank S. and John Brooke, both born in Sabetha.

WM. B. SLOSSON, one of the pioneers of Albany, was born November 2, 1835, in Broome County, N. Y. Settled at Albany, Nemaha County, Kan., in April 1857, and lived there and at Salem, Neb., until his final location at Sabetha in 1870 or '71. He married in March, 1860, in his and her native county, Miss Achsah L. Lilly. They have one child—Edwin E., born June 7, 1865, in Albany. Mr. and Mrs. Slosson have both been almost lifelong Congregationalists. Mrs. Slosson, an active temperance and Sunday-school worker, occupied for years in Sabetha the position of president of the W. C. T. U., and superintendent of the Congregational Sunday-school of that place. Mr. Slosson opened the first store in December, 1861, in Albany, with a stock of goods brought from Salem, Neb., because of the fear of the "Free-state" owners that they would be seized by the border ruffians if left in Salem. He was among the most prominent organizers of "Council No. 40, of the Union League of Albany," organized July 22, 1863, and prior to that had, with others of Albany and vicinity, assisted many a runaway black to his freedom—once barely escaping an armed, drunken and maddened mob at Nebraska City, by persuading the Pro-slavery ferryman and securing passage across the Missouri for his party, including three escaping slaves. In 1872 he was appointed by Governor Osborn to a State office, Trustee of the Blind Asylum, and served the state in that capacity and as Trustee and Secretary of the Board for all the State Charitable Institutions for four years or until 1876. In 1882 he removed with his family to Leavenworth city, Kansas, where he now resides, and is connected with the Brown Medicine & Mfg. Co. of that city as its Vice-President and Advertising Manager. As an early settler, staunch Christian, temperance worker, active business man, and fearless advocate of the right at all times and places, must W. B. Slosson ever be remembered.

N. S. SMITH, proprietor Chicago Lumber Yard, was born in 1837, in Ashland County, Ohio. He removed to Henry County, Ill., where in 1862, he enlisted in the One Hundred and Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Served in East Tennessee, and fought with his regiment at Chattanooga, through the Atlanta campaign, and finally with brave old "Pap" Thomas at Franklin and Nashville. Was sick in hospital during the summer of 1865; discharged August 1865. He then engaged in farming in Henry County, Ill., until 1879 when he came to Sabetha. He deals in all kinds of lumber and building material, and somewhat in agricultural implements.

HON. CAMPBELL TARR, deceased, was born in 1818, in Wellsburg, W. Va., where he spent most of his life. A Douglas Democrat in politics he early took a decided stand against secession, and was one of the few delegates to the State convention in 1861 who voted against the ordinance of secession, for which he was compelled to leave Richmond by night to save his life. In April, 1861, with two others, he went to Washington and succeeded in getting 3,000 stand of arms with which the loyal Virginians were armed; this act undoubtedly made the State of West Virginia possible. He was one of the leaders in the movement culminating in the erection of West Virginia as a State in 1863. He was the first State Treasurer and a Lincoln delegate in 1864, and was re-elected State Treasurer in 1865. In 1870 he located at Sabetha, having purchased land in Kansas as early as 1856. He was one of the original owners of Sabetha, and later platted the addition that bears his name. At his death December 1, 1879, he left five children, one of whom—Hammond Tarr, now a prosperous merchant of Sabetha, is proving himself worthy of his father's honorable name and record.

HAMMOND TARR, merchant, of the firm of Tarr & Koehler, dealers in general merchandise, was born in 1853, in Wellsburg, W. Va., and is a son of the late Hon. Campbell Tarr, a distinguished citizen and native of the same State. Mr. Tarr accompanied his father to Kansas in 1870, and was with him in the mercantile business until 1875. He is largely interested in real estate in Sabetha and vicinity; in 1881 laid out and platted H. Tarr's addition to Sabetha. Mr. Tarr resides on his farm adjoining Sabetha; has a pleasant home and family.

J. L. THOMPSON, M. D., was born January 14, 1850, in Solsberry, Greene Co., Ind.; educated in the Bloomfield State Normal School; began his medical studies with Dr. Harrow, of his native village, and later with Dr. Grey, of Whitehall, Ind. He came to Capioma, Kan., in 1879, practiced awhile, then re-entered the Louisville (Ky.) Medical College, from which institution he graduated February 25, 1880. He married Miss Nannie Magill, of Capioma, and settled in Sabetha in 1881. The Doctor is popular, both professionally and socially; is an Odd Fellow, and Vice Dictator, and Medical Examiner of the K. of H. Lodge, Sabetha, and with his wife a Congregationalist.

WILLIAM K. THOMPSON, deceased, a native of Guernsey County, Ohio, was a son of David Thompson. The family removed to Athens County, Ohio, then to Illinois, then to Jasper County, Mo., thence in 1859, to Douglas County, Kan. In 1865 the two brothers W. K. and A. J. Thompson, settled in Rock Creek. William K. Thompson married Frances Secreast, of Guernsey County, Ohio, and at his death October 19, 1867, left three children—Ruth, Rachel and William K. His estate then comprised 333 acres of valuable land, part of which has been sold or divided among heirs. At his deceased son's old home, lives his father, now a widower and in failing health, aged eighty. After an extended visit to California, he settled here with his son. Abraham J. Thompson, born in Guernsey County, Ohio, was a lifelong companion of his elder brother; married Phœbe Tucker, in Jasper County, Mo., and died August 18, 1875, leaving five children, one of whom has since died.

ALBERT WEST, came to Kansas in 1866; was on a farm in Rock Creek three years, then came to Sabetha, first leasing and later buying the hotel property of A. W. Williams. This he kept as "West's hotel" for five years, and "fed 'em well if I did have mean accommodations," as he says. The house was a patchwork affair, comprising seven different "additions" or "stories on the ground" as they were then called. Mr. West was born in 1817, in Tompkins County, N. Y., and married Harriet N. Stratton. They have five children living. During the past few years Mr. West has devoted himself to the practice of veterinary surgery. He is owner also, of "Zern," a handsome, mahogany bay stallion, for which he paid $1,000 in Chautauqua County, N. Y. "Zern" is of Blackhawk and Hambletonian stock, and a most valuable animal.

COL. W. S. WHITE, owner of the Oakland Stock Farm, near Sabetha. This farm is one of those institutions that, springing up in a few years as it has, ought to be a model for many who, instead of decrying Kansas as a drouthy, grasshopper country, might well attempt to rival it. In 1872, Col. White bought 160 acres, still the "homestead quarter," and placed thereon thirty-two fine bred Short-horn cattle. Gradually adding to his farm and herd, he has to-day a magnificent farm of 575 acres in a body, with a detached 160 acres in Brown County. His herd comprises 110 head, all eligible to register, and all registered except the younger and barren animals. He annually sells about forty head of these choice pedigreed cattle to Kansas farmers, who now fully appreciate the value of the rare breeding and exceptional care bestowed by the Colonel upon his herd. For years past he has exhibited stock at various county fairs, and wearying of his easily won laurels, tested the merits of his stock in competition with the herds of the State in 1882, with the most gratifying results. His cattle are from the best herds of Kentucky and Illinois, bred by such men as J. H. Spears & Sons, Wm. Stevenson & Sons, C. E. Lippincott, Pickerell, of Decatur, and others equally noted as progressive, successful breeders. Col. White himself has the only complete edition of the American Short-horn Herd Book in the State. He has a substantial, even elegant home, his house, built "four-square to every wind," being one of the largest farmhouses in Northern Kansas. He is a native of Menard County, Ill., and a graduate of the Illinois College, at Jacksonville. In early life he often met Abraham Lincoln in familiar neighborly intercourse, and has of him vivid and most pleasant recollections.

C. T. WHITTENHALL is a son of the late Elihu Whittenhall, and was born January 3, 1844, in Addison, Steuben County, N. Y. Educated in his native village, and came to Kansas with his parents and located in Albany until 1862, when he enlisted in the Union cause, entering the service as Second Lieutenant of Company A, Fifty-fourth United States Infantry. Fought through with his regiment in the Trans-Mississippi Army, and at the close of the hostilities returned to Sabetha. During the last few years he practically controlled his father's extensive real estate business, to which he succeeded at the latter's demise. He has an elegant home in Sabetha, and is one of her foremost men socially, financially and religiously, he having united with the old Albany Congregational Church twenty-five years ago. His wife was Frances Stevens, of Hornellsville, N. Y. They have three children—Charles, Aralenah and Ralph.

ELIHU WHITTENHALL, deceased, was one of the typical Kansas men, keen, alert, aggressive and broadly public spirited, who have so rapidly advanced this, their adopted State, to so enviable a rank in the sisterhood of the Union. As a leader in the Albany Colony of sturdy New Yorkers who laid out Albany, Nemaha Co., Kan., in the spring of 1858, he is best known. During his first twelve years here we find him a quiet, successful farmer, whose command of means and whose executive ability placed him at the front where public measures were discussed by the colonists He was among the first to grasp the situation, and to take advantage of the changes wrought through the building of the railroad to Sabetha, at which point he opened a real estate office in 1870. His business here was begun on a large scale and instantly expanded. Village lots were sold to actual settlers at Sabetha at almost their own terms, and yet at his death Mr Whittenhall owned about one-half the town site. His real estate transactions in Northern Kansas were for such men as Gov. Porter, of Indiana, W. T. Wooster, of Ohio, and others. Mr. Whittenhall was a founder in Albany of the Congregational Church, and continued active in the cause during his life. He was born in 1808, in Oxford, Chenango Co., N. Y., and fought life's battles alone after the age of seven, when he was left an orphan. When twenty, he married Eliza A. Shumway, who was born in 1809 in the same town with himself. She was a graduate of the Oxford Academy with ex-Governor Seymour and other distinguished New Yorkers, and died August 18, 1866, and was followed by her husband December 1, 1881.

ALBANY.

The settlement rather than town of Albany deserves special mention as essential to the true record of the early colonization of Nemaha County. Its location is two miles almost directly north of Sabetha, and its first settlement was effected long before the latter thriving town had an existence or a name. In 1857, a colony of New Yorkers, comprising fifteen or twenty families, came to Kansas, located in the vicinity referred to, and a year later the majority of them so far effected an organization, as to found a town to which was given the name of Albany, in honor of the New York capital. Those principally interested in this movement were Elihu Whittenhall, W. B. Slosson, Edwin Miller, George, John, and William Graham, Rev. R. D. Parker and Archibald Webb. The first thing attempted in the nature of a permanent improvement was the erection of a clapboard hotel, by Edwin Miller, the house being moved to Sabetha a few years later. A cottonwood schoolhouse was next built, and then a residence by Elihu Whittenhall, constructed of black walnut lumber. The first store building was erected by Moses Stevens, of New York, in 1860. It was afterward sold to W. B. Slosson, and finally taken to Sabetha. A post-office was established in 1859, with John P. Shumway as postmaster. About 1860 he was succeeded by W. B. Slosson, the third incumbent being Mrs. C. B. Stinson. The office has recently been discontinued.

In 1860, the district built the lower part of a grey limestone schoolhouse, the Congregational Society completing the structure, and for many years using the upper part as a place of worship. This society was organized September 26, 1859, with a charter membership of eighteen, under the ministrations of Rev. R. D. Parker. Its original members were Elihu Whittenhall and family, George Graham and wife, John L. Graham and wife, John Van Tuyl and wife, Edwin Miller and wife, B. H. Job and wife, Mrs. Rising, Mrs. Archer, Thomas Robbins, W. B. Slosson and John P. Shumway. The first services were held, prior to organization, on July 11, 1858, under a great tree, near Edwin Miller's residence. The Pastors of the church, succeeding Rev. R. D. Parker, have been Rev. George Rice, Rev. Joseph Peart and Rev. O. A. Thomas, it being during the incumbency of the last mentioned, in 1871, that the society, as such, removed to Sabetha.

It may be well in this connection to say something more of those prominent in this pioneer movement. Rev. R. D. Parker is now editor and publisher of the Kansas Telephone, at Manhattan; Elihu Whittenhall, after a long life of usefulness is dead; John L. Graham was killed in the army, shot dead at the battle of Chickamauga; George Graham was elected to the Kansas Legislature in 1858, and again in 1865, was a member of the Seventh Kansas Cavalry, serving throughout the war, was State Senator in 1867 and 1868, State Treasurer in 1869 and 1870, served as Probate Judge of Nemaha County, in 1879, and died, universally regretted, February 21, 1880. John Brown's last night in Kansas, February 1, 1859, was passed at Albany, in the house of Edwin Miller, part of his men being quartered upon Elihu Whittenhall, and part of them at George Grahams and W. B. Slosson's. From Albany he passed out through Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Michigan, leaving the United States at Detroit, proceeding to Chatham, Canada West, where he organized the Southern movement, which resulted in his death.

Albany is now but a little cluster of dwelling houses.

WETMORE.

The town of Wetmore, situated upon the Central Branch of the Union Pacific Railroad, is located in the extreme eastern portion of the county, about four miles from its southern line. Its name was given it in honor of Hon. W. T. Wetmore, Vice-President of the road. Early in 1866, surveys having been completed from Atchison to Centralia, the Central Branch platted one hundred and sixty acres of land, and almost immediately erected a section house, and soon after, a depot building, upon the completion of the road between the points named; in the autumn of the same year, a hotel was built by A. Simpson, the condition being that he was to be favored by two trains daily, stopping for dinner. The first dwelling house erected was that of Augustus Mayer, built in 1867, upon the site now occupied by William Cawood's residence. The first business building constructed was that of Morris & Brown, though prior to this, by a few months, a general stock of goods had been kept by Simpson & Morris in a small room at the depot building. In 1867, the town was given a post office, with A. O. McCreary, the present incumbent, as postmaster. In the spring of 1868, a lumber yard was opened by M. P. M. Cassity, the business being disposed of to William T. McVey & Co., early in 1869. This firm during the ensuing year, erected a grain elevator, now owned by Stowell & McVey. The year 1869 also witnessed, together with minor improvements, the opening of a general store by N. H. & D. C. Rising, subsequently disposed of to DeForest Brothers, the present proprietors. In 1870 the Wetmore House was built by Peter Shuemaker, passing into the hands of S. C. & D. C. Rising, to be repurchased by the original proprietor, it finally being disposed of to the present owner, A. J. Dooley. During the same year a drug store was opened by Dr. J. W. Graham, and the Overland House built, for a private residence, not being used for hotel purposes until 1874.

The first birth in the new town was that of Mary Cassity, born August 8, 1868, into a world in which she had small part, her death occurring but two years and four months later. Death first entered Wetmore in October, 1869, removing Nellie A. Rising, an infant. The first marriage, occurring in 1870, united N. Morris and Mary Wolfley. The first school was taught by A. S. Kenoyer, during the winter of 1868 and 1869.

The only fire of importance, which has occurred in Wetmore, destroyed the business house of Morris & Brother. This was subsequently rebuilt by Wolfley, Morris & Co., the senior partner withdrawing from the firm, soon after the structure was completed. The town, in its brief existence, has developed rapidly, supplying parts of four counties, from which it, in turn, derives its elements of strength and prosperity. Its population, according to the last census, is 565.

Early in the year 1882, the town of Wetmore containing a population exceeding two hundred and fifty, and not greater than two thousand, and the majority of the ninety-six qualified electors being in favor of incorporation, an appeal was made to Hon. David Martin, Judge of the Second Judicial District, for an order, incorporating the said town, as a city of the third class. This order was granted by the court on July 8, 1882.

On July 25 of the same year the first city election was held, the result placing in office: J. W. Graham as Mayor; and a Council consisting of William Morris, E. H. Chapman, William Buzan, Joseph Haigh and E. F. Vilott; M. P. M. Cassity being elected Police Judge.

The third house in Wetmore, let it be said in due honor to the intelligence of the community, was a district school building, erected in the fall of 1868, by William Morris, M. P. M. Cassity and Jacob Geyer, these constituting the School Board at the time. It was a frame building of one story, 28x40 feet in size, and costing $1,860. Until 1879 no special need for more commodious quarters was experienced, a new building being erected in that year, larger and in every way better, at a cost to the district of $3,400. The growth of interest in educational matters has been marked, the attendance increasing from twenty-two in 1868, to one hundred and seventy in 1882. The principal at the time of writing is E. H. Chapman; the assistants, Nettie Crist and Annie Gill.

In May, 1878, Daniel C. Needham commenced the publication of a line of co-operative newspapers along the Central Branch Railroad, one of which, the Acme, was devoted to, and nominally issued from, the rising town of Wetmore. It was a small sheet, of Republican proclivities, and soon died a natural death.

CHURCHES, SOCIETIES, ETC.

The first religious organization effected in Wetmore, or in immediate propinquity, was that of the Methodists, who succeeded in the erection of a church edifice as early as 1872; a very handsome frame building, with a seating capacity of 300, and costing $1,810. The pastors, in direct succession, have been as follows: Rev. E. H. Bailiff, Rev. E. Gill, Rev. J. A. Woodburn, Rev. D. J. Crooks, Rev. R. J. McGinnis, Rev. J. Richardson, Rev. S. M. Hopkins, and Rev. William Moody. The present number of members, exclusive of probationers, is fifteen.

Following closely the Methodist example, the Baptists organized a class during the same year, occupying the church building of their more fortunate brethren, and worshipping in private residences. The pastor is, and has been from the first, if we except the occasional irregular supplies with which the society has been favored, Rev. Thomas Rolfe, who dispenses the truth to his little flock of about twenty-five, one Sunday in every four.

The Catholics of Wetmore and vicinity, about forty in number, are under the spiritual charge of Rev. Father John Bagley, who first gathered them together in 1875. They worship in a comfortable frame building, sufficient to their present needs.

Wetmore Lodge, No. 53, A. F. & A. M.—A lodge of this Order, bearing the title of Granada Lodge, No. 53, was instituted in Granada Township, October 16, 1867. Its first officers were: Master, William J. Hart; Sr. W., Henry C. Gragg; Jr. W., Sneathon Vilott. Its present place of meeting being changed in 1881, by reason of the removal of many of its members, its title was altered to conform with the new conditions under which it existed. The present membership is thirty-four. The officers elected last are: Master, S. C. Shuemaker; Sr. W., E. Campfield; Jr. W., T. H. Doolittle; Sec'y, E. S. Frager; Treas., John Thornburrow.

The Wetmore division of the Sons of Temperance was instituted, October 18, 1878, with twenty-seven charter members. Its first W. P. was E. H. Chapman; W. A., Peter Shuemaker. Its present membership is about fifty, and its officers as follows: W. P., M. DeForest; W. A., Mary Thomas; R. S., D. W. Stowell; A. R. S., Mary Sisson; F. S., Catherine Thomas.

The organization of a banking corporation—Wetmore State Bank—was effected early in 1881, with Willis Brown, President; William Morris, Vice-President, and S. C. Shuemaker, Cashier. Its capital is $50,000, $15,000 of which is paid up. A substantial and elegant bank building was erected in the year of the company's organization, being completed at a cost of $3,400 in April, 1882. It is furnished with one of Mosler's finest safes, with time locks, and is in every way a credit to the town, affording it facilities without which its progress had been materially retarded.

Wetmore Mineral Springs.—Early in the summer of 1881, it was discovered that certain springs in the vicinity of the town, which had long been known, but neglected as of no particular value, were possessed of important medicinal qualities. In the spring of 1882, their owner, John Pool, Sr., obtained an analysis of the water, the chemist reporting as follows:

OFFICE OF J. H. WRIGHT, M. D., ANALYTICAL CHEMIST,
ST. LOUIS, MO., July 8, 1882.

On analysis of the water from the Wetmore Mineral Springs, I find the specific gravity to be 1006.8. Reaction, alkaline; and the solids, per gallon, as follows:

Carbonate of Lime,	7.102	grains
" Magnesia,	9.880	"
" Iron,	2.512	"
" Soda,	728	"
Chloride of Soda,	2.654	"
" Potash,	646	"
Phosphate of Lime,	468	"
Silica,	1.126	"
Organic Matter,	1.686	"
Sulphate of Magnesia,	9.418	"
" Lime,	7.440	"
Total solids per gallon,	43.852	grains

Carbonic acid gas, per gallon, 28.3 cubic inches.

I regard the combination found in the water of these springs as of great value in the treatment of many forms of disease. Its slightly alkaline property would indicate its use in diseases of the urinary organs, as well as in rheumatism. Dropsical affections will probably be benefited by its use. I would strongly recommend its use as a bath, as well as by drinking.

Juan H. Wright, M. D., Chemist.

But little, as yet, has been done in the way of improvment to render the springs more accessible to the public; but it is undoubtedly but a question of a short time when they will be appreciated at their full value, and become a source, not only of occasional revenue, but of permanent worth to the town.

The Wetmore Mills.—In 1881, William J. Merritt and J. L. Gettys, both of Illinois, erected a large frame mill building, furnishing it with a sixty-horse-power engine, three run of burrs, and all the latest improved machinery necessary to the enterprise of handling and producing the wheat and corn product with economy and in its highest possible excellence. The entire expense has been about $7,000.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

Z. BEAN, of Wetmore, was born October 22, 1843, in Wauwatosa, Milwaukee Co., Wis. His father, James L. Bean, was a pioneer of Wisconsin, and worked on the first frame house built in Milwaukee. J. L. Bean was a New Yorker, and married in Chicago Phillis Butterfield, also of New York. About 1845, they settled in Union, Rock Co., Wis., and eight years later in Stevens' Point, Wis., where the father was in the lumber business. Z. Bean enlisted in 1864 in the Fifth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and served under Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley and at the siege of Petersburg, Va. Was sunstruck near that city, and honorably discharged about the close of the war. He then spent four years in Wisconsin; married, and settled in Nemaha County as a farmer, which business he followed until recently, when he sold his farm and bought the livery stable in connection with the Dooley House, which he is now running. His wife was Frances Hudson, of Granada, whose people, formerly from New York, settled in Kansas in 1870. Mr. and Mrs. Bean have three children, all born in Kansas—Eddie A., born September 11, 1871, and twin daughters, Ethel May and Carrie Estelle, both pretty as pictures, and difficult to distinguish from each other.

JOHN BRADFORD, farmer and stockman, P. O. Wetmore, was born in 1819, in Calleway County, Mo., and reared a farmer in that county. At the age of twenty-one he settled in Miller County, Mo., and there lived until 1857, when he located seven miles due west of Atchison, Kan., where he built and for twelve years kept the noted "Seven Mile House," so well remembered by the old-timers of Kansas. "I didn't see a leisure hour here," said Mr. Bradford, "and many a night have my floors been covered with sleeping men, and my yard filled with wagons and teams." While here he dealt extensively in grain and stock, and carried on a large farm, besides three years spent in freighting on the plains. In 1871, he settled on a large farm near Whiting, Kan. Had 500 acres in cultivation here, and employed men and teams without end. Was undertaking too much, however, and gradually sold out his land. Settled in Whiting, and for a number of years engaged exclusively in the stock business. Forming a co-partnership with W. S. Engle, they began buying land about a mile south of Wetmore, and in 1882 Mr. Bradford built near the center of their splendid 1,400-acre stock-farm, and there we find him to-day, surrounded with from 300 to 400 head of cattle, including 45 graded Short-horn cows, 130 head of yearlings, 55 two-year olds, and the balance calves. Near his farmhouse gushes out a "twin spring" of the best water, sufficient to water all the stock in Wetmore Township. The entire ranch is fenced off into "eighty's" and "quarters," and one "forty," with a five-wire fence, for hogs. It is doubtless the most natural stock-farm, all things considered, in Nemaha County. Mrs. Bradford was Eliza Henderson, of Tennessee, and they had two children—George Bradford, who died in Butler County, Kan., aged thirty-five, and Sarah M., wife of Henry Lepprin, of Whiting.

WILLIAM P. BUZAN, of the firm of Buzan, Hazeltine & Co., was born in 1848, in Manitou County, Central Missouri. At fourteen he began to learn telegraphy, and during the following nine years he operated and helped to build lines for the Western Union Telegraph Company in Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Colorado and Utah. The centennial year found him in Wetmore, where he was a mercantile clerk until the spring of 1881, when the present strong lumber firm was founded. He is of French ancestry, and his parents both Kentuckians. His mother's mother died in that State at the age of 103 years. Mrs. Buzan was Miss Annie, daughter of Augustus Wolfley, deceased, the pioneer settler of Wetmore Township.

M. CALLAHAN is a native of Limerick, Ireland. About 1840, his people came to the United States and settled in Pennsylvania. He grew up in Richmond, Va., where he learned the blacksmith's trade in the famous Tredegar Iron Works. Prior to the Rebellion, he helped to put the machinery in the United States war-steamers "Jamestown" and "Roanoke," that soon became noted as fighting-ships. Mr. Callahan's first real removal was to Terre Haute, Ind., where he followed his trade, working at a later date in Litchfield, Ill., then in Indianapolis, Ind. He came to Kansas as an employe on the Central Branch Railroad, then building west from Atchison, and for a time pumped water and lived in a box-car where Wetmore now stands, and for four years was a "section boss," his section extending from the twenty-fifth to the sixtieth mile-post. His family meanwhile lived in Netawaka and Wetmore. In the latter place he finally settled, and in 1880 built his home, in connection with which he has a restaurant, "The Farmer's Home," and a ten-pin alley. A good farm was recently sold by him, and the proceeds thereof will probably be invested in another one. He married Anne Boucher, of Terre Haute, Ind., by whom he has three children—Henry (born in Indianapolis), William and Margaret, born in Kansas.

JOHN H. CAMPBELL, farmer, Section 30, P. O. Wetmore, was born in 1832, in Pulaski County, Mo. His father, James Campbell, born in Harwood County, N. C., was a territorial settler in Missouri; married Ruth Anderson, and at his death, in 1856, left five children, of whom J. H. and A. G. Campbell, with their mother, came to Kansas early in 1856 from Laclede County, Mo. Both sons were bachelors, and both made claims, J. H. on the southwest quarter of Section 1, and A. G. on the southwest quarter of Section 3. A rude, low-roofed cabin was built, and though the stalwart young men could barely stand upright in it, yet here they spent the summer of 1856, on no floor but mother earth. Such was the commencement in 1856, and to-day (1882) we find J. H. Campbell the owner of a finely improved 280-acre farm and a 240-acre grazing tract, and living with his family in a substantial frame farmhouse, 32x26 feet, two stories and hip roof, and everything needed by the prosperous farmer of the age. His wife was Sarah Williams; married December 31, 1862; and their three children are: Henry, Frances R., and Mary L., all born on the Kansas farm. Mr. Campbell well remembers his adventures during the "Kansas War"—his capture by the noted Kickapoo Rangers, and his banishment to Missouri on pain of death. A. G. Campbell went to Colorado and became wealthy in mining speculations, and noted as the contestant for the seat of polygamous delegate Cannon, of Utah, in the United States Congress.

ELWIN CAMPFIELD, attorney-at-law, son of T. A. Campfield, a pioneer settler of old Home Township, was born November 16, 1847, and came with his parents to Kansas in 1859. Was an attendant of the early schools of Kansas, and later of the Agricultural College at Manhattan and the Institution at Irving. Studied law with Taylor & Purnell, of Seneca, and was admitted to the bar of Nemaha County in October, 1874. Began practice at Centralia, and in March, 1881, removed to Wetmore, where he has built up a prosperous law, real estate, loan and insurance business. Mr. Campfield is an active member of Wetmore Lodge A. F. & A. M., and it is through his agency as Senior Warden of the Lodge that the name was changed from Granada to Wetmore in 1882.

M. P. M. CASSITY, attorney-at-law, was born June 15, 1835, in Fleming County, Ky. His father was a Kentuckian, whose parents lived to the age of 95 and 98 years. The subject of this sketch was brought up and educated in Kentucky; visited Kansas in 1856 and made a claim on Section 18, Township 4, Range 15 (Brown County); taught school in the winter of 1857-'58 in Linnæus, Mo., and the winter of 1858-'59 in the log schoolhouse in Granada, Kan., it being the first school. The house was built and the school supported by subscription. From 1860 to 1864 he was in the grocery business at Oak Point and Granada; was Justice of the Peace and Town Clerk of Granada in 1865-'66; Deputy County Assessor in 1866, and in 1867-'68 traveled over Western Missouri, Eastern Kansas and Southern Nebraska in the insurance business. In 1868 came to Wetmore and built the third building in the place, a "box house," near the depot, and opened the first lumber yard directly opposite. The year 1871 found him in the mercantile business in Sabetha, and in 1873 he practiced law there. He then traveled three years for the St. Joseph Gazette, and since that time has resided in Wetmore, engaged in the lumber business and the practice of law, which he has followed for twenty-five years. He has served in all nine years as Justice of the Peace, and is now Justice of the Peace and Police Judge of Wetmore. In 1878, at Plattsburg, Mo., he defended and cleared one Samuels, a half brother of Frank and Jesse James, charged with a deadly assault upon a colored man with a revolver. "The Judge," as he is familiarly called, has a good memory, and is full of incidents and anecdotes relating to early days in Kansas and the West.

GEORGE COX, farmer, P. O. Wetmore, was born in 1837 in London, England, where he learned the carpenter's trade, serving a six years' apprenticeship. He came to America in 1868 as one of the Kansas colonists from London. In the spring of 1869 he homesteaded eighty acres, and was so poor as to be obliged to pay for the first breaking done upon it by giving his coat. In 1870 he managed, by buying one horse and hiring another, to get a team, and then was doomed to see his first crop destroyed by grasshoppers. During the winter of 1870-'71 he built a "Kansas" house, or boxhouse, and began life here when he had but a cord of wood in the way of family supplies. To day we find his farm hedged, mostly in cultivation, and upon it a house costing $1,100, with barn, stock yards, wire fences, orchard, etc., etc. His wife was Jane Lansley, also of London. They were married in that city in 1859, and have nine living children, four born in London and the balance in Nemaha County, Kan.

H. C. De FOREST, of De Forest Brothers, merchants. I. N. De Forest and two sons, Charles and H. C., came to Kansas in 1869, purchasing a farm four miles south of Wetmore, the father and H. C. engaging for about three years in the lumber and implement business, as I. N. De Forest & Co. At the end of that time H. C. bought the interest of W. W. Letson, of the firm of Letson & Spencer. J. D. Spencer & Co. did business until April, 1877, when Charles De Forest secured Mr. Spencer's interest, constituting the present firm. H. C. De Forest is a native of Dutchess County, N. Y. Graduated at Yale College in 1863, and was for six years in business in Chicago. Mrs. I. N. De Forest and Rodman A. joined the father and brothers in 1870, the family coming from Madison, Wis., formerly from Dutchess County, N. Y. The De Forest Brothers are doing a large and increasing business, their stock having increased from $3,000 to $15,000 in ten years, it now including everything except drugs and hardware.

JOHN DUDLEY, farmer, P. O. Wetmore, was born in 1838, in Coles County, Ill., and there reared a farmer. In 1859 he came to Kansas; was discouraged by the destitution and hardships of 1860; returned to Illinois, and enlisted from Coles County in 1861 as a private in the the Third Missouri Cavalry. His service was in Missouri and Arkansas, and at Little Rock, Ark., he was wounded in the arm and taken prisoner. After several months' captivity he was paroled and rejoined his regiment. On the last day of 1864 he was a second time captured, and after being taken 120 miles into Arkansas, made his escape, lost most of his clothes in swimming the Saline River, and crossed Arkansas in a pair of pantaloons, made by tearing out the sleeves of his coat. Since the war he has resided in Kansas as a farmer. He married, in his and her native county, Susan E. Lemmon. They have nine children (eight daughters and one son, Wm. E. Dudley).

J. W. GRAHAM, M. D., Mayor of Wetmore, was born December 5, 1845, in Tuscarawas County, Ohio. In 1852 his parents settled near Independence, Iowa. J. W. attended the schools of both States, paying his own way by working and teaching, and was finally enabled to enter Hopkinton Collegiate Institute, which, however, he left in 1864, and enlisted in the Forty-fourth Iowa Volunteer Infantry. Was at Tupelo, Miss., and Memphis when the rebel Forrest made his memorable raid and dashed into that city. Dr. Graham has in his possession a paper signed by President Lincoln and countersigned by Secretary Stanton, conferring special thanks upon him for service performed. At the close of the Rebellion he began the study of medicine in Winthrop, Iowa; came to Kansas in 1868, and after a year's practice in Capioma came to Wetmore, which has since been his home. He is a graduate of the Northwestern Medical College, St. Joseph, Mo. His wife was Miss Alma, daughter of N. H. Rising, a very early settler of Granada, and their five children were born in Wetmore. The Doctor built the first drug store here; kept it eight years; was Postmaster 1872-'74, and has served eight years as Justice of the Peace. In politics he is an Independent Republican; religious views liberal.

J. H. HART, farmer, P. O. Wetmore, was born in 1833, in Bath County, Ky., and reared in Putnam County, Ind. In 1860 he settled in Marion County, Iowa, and in the fall of 1862 enlisted in Company I, Thirty-third Iowa Volunteer Infantry. Was in the Western army; was in the Yazoo Pass, at Shell Mound Fort, Helena, and Duvall's Bluff; also at the second capture of Little Rock, Ark., Pine Bluffs, Saline River; then at Camden, Ark., Red River, Little Rock, White River, and finally to New Orleans, and thence to Mobile. While besieging the forts there, a ten-inch shell came screaming through the air toward a rifle-pit in which were Mr. Hart and two comrades, and as it rushed on, Mr. Hart exclaimed, "Boys, that's coming in here!" and sprang to one side just as the shell buried itself where he had been seated a moment before. It was a most miraculous escape, as he was the only man of the three who moved at all. After the fall of Mobile, his regiment did some duty to the north of that city, and was then transferred to Mexico and Texas, and in the fall of 1865 sent via. New Orleans to Rock Island, Ill., and there discharged. Returning to Indiana, he rejoined his family, took them to Marion County, Iowa, and in 1867 struck for Kansas, settling on a farm two miles east of Granada, where he made good improvements and lived until 1875, when he located on his present 140-acre farm. Here he has a good house, with eight rooms; a well-fenced farm, and plenty of timber on Elk Creek. He married, in Putnam County, Ind., Polly A. Clawson, who left one daughter, Annie, at her death. The present Mrs. Hart was Nancy Murphy, and by her he has two children, Sarah E. and Ara O. Mr. Hart is a member of the Christian Church of Elk Creek, and is a Deacon therein.

JOHN HAZELTINE, deceased, a native of Sweden, was twice married in Sweden. He had three sons—John, Alfred and Charles. John and Alfred came to America and located in Pennsylvania in 1859; about a year later the father and remaining brother joined them, and in the spring of 1860 they all came together to Kansas, settling on a new prairie farm half a mile west of where Wetmore now stands. John Hazeltine, Jr., died here in 1865, and the father in the fall of 1877. Charles Hazeltine is a prosperous farmer near Wetmore, and Alfred Hazeltine, who engaged in stock dealing and farming until 1881, is now one of the flourishing firm of Buzan, Hazeltine & Co., which firm has about $12,000 invested in the lumber business, also dealing in coal, farm implements of all kinds, wagons, buggies and barbed wire. The yards cover three lots, and from three to six men are employed.

ALFRED JONES, farmer, P. O. Wetmore, was born in 1831, in Delaware County, Ind. At fourteen he struck out for himself and settled on the Platte Purchase in Missouri, living there until 1855, when he came to Kansas, making a claim between Leavenworth and Lawrence, and improved two different farms prior to the Rebellion. During that great struggle he served as a volunteer in Col. Jennison's Fifteenth Kansas, and helped fight the rebels Price, Marmaduke and Hindman in Missouri, Arkansas and the Cherokee country. Since the war he has engaged in farming in Atchison and Nemaha Counties, and settled on his present eighty-acre farm about 1872. His wife was Mary A. Underwood, and they have eight children, three born in Platte County, Mo., and five in Kansas. Mr. Jones has a pleasant home and valuable farm, and is one of the respected old settlers of this State.

DAVID M. LOCKNANE, deceased, the first settler of Granada Township and one of the earliest in Kansas, was born March 18, 1823, in Clark County, Ky.; removed to Ray County, Mo., and there married Miss Clarissa E. Owens, a native of Clark County, Ky. From 1850 to '53, Mr. Locknane was in California, and in March, 1855, he came from Platte County, Mo., to Kansas, settling on what has since been named Locknane's Creek, in his honor. His claim was just west of what was afterwards laid out as the town or village of Granada, and the log house that he built in February, 1855, is still standing—the oldest building in Nemaha County. From 1860 to 1864 he kept the "Granada Hotel," and then resuming his farm work, actively continued it until his melancholy death caused by a runaway team in August 1879. He was made a Mason in Clay County, Mo., and was a charter member of Granada Lodge A. F. & A. M.; was also a member of the Christian Church in Granada. He left a valuable farm of 320 acres, to which the widow later added eighty acres. Mrs. Locknane is still living, clear headed and vigorous, a hale and handsome matron, who can tell of many an episode of interest regarding "Bleeding Kansas" in the days of the "Border War." A company of South Carolinians camped in their (Locknane's) door-yard, and one of the number accidentally shot himself so badly that death ensued. It was not an unusual event for a band of Pro or Anti-slavery horsemen to dash into their yard and demand "dinner in fifteen minutes," and leaders like Jim Lane, etc., were sometimes guests of this pioneer family. Ten children survive Mr. Locknane, viz: Cicely J., John D., Winfield Scott, Sarah E. (born, November 8, 1858, in Granada Township), Ella K., Mary V., Harriet F., Clara B., Chas. S. and Cora E.

CHAS. McCARTHY, druggist, was born 1836, in London, England; was educated there and served an apprenticeship of seven years as a coppersmith and brazier, at which trades he worked in all fifteen years. In 1869 he came to America, with the original colony of English people, who settled in Nemaha County, and for a few years identified his fortunes with that association. He then went East to Chicago, worked about three years for a wholesale house there and five years for the Standard Oil Co. His earnings were wisely invested, and at this writing he has property valued at $4,000 in Chicago, and real estate in Nemaha County valued at $2,000, all acquired in eight years. He came to Wetmore for permanent settlement, and began his present business in June, 1882. His wife was Mary Hollaghan, and they have five children—Charles, Thomas, Eugene, Justin and James Garfield, the youngest born on the day of the assassination of Pres. Garfield, and named by the employes of the Standard Oil Co., for which company his two eldest sons are now working. Mr. McCarthy is a Roman Catholic and a Democrat.

A. J. McCREERY, farmer, P. O. Wetmore, is a son of Alexander McCreery, deceased, who was the father of eight children, of whom three sons served during the rebellion in the Union Army. A. J. McCreery enlisted in September, 1862, at Holton, Kan., in the Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and served with that regiment throughout the entire war (see sketch of Kansas, Eleventh Infantry, in this volume). He has since been a resident of Kansas, and has recently sold a farm in Wetmore Township. Six of the eight children above referred to are now residents of Kansas. The father died in 1876 in Wetmore Township. Alvin O. McCreery, now postmaster of Wetmore, served in the Ninth Indiana, and Wm. H., in Tenth Regiment Kansas Volunteers.

THOS. MILAM, M. D., of Wetmore, is a son of M. S. Milam, a native of Franklin County, Ky., who married Harriet Stokes, of Rutherford County, Tenn., and brought his family to Kansas in September, 1859, settling on Elk Creek, three miles east of where Holton was afterwards built. Here they began farming on the virgin sod of the Kansas prairie, meeting with but indifferent success for several years. In 1859 then planted thirty acres of corn, but did not harvest a bushel, and in consequence saw some pinching times in 1860. In 1870 M. S. Milam and wife sold out, retired from farming, and have since lived in Holton. Their only son, whose name heads this sketch, was educated in the Holton High School and i Cumberland University. His medical studies were pursued in the University of Louisville Ky., where he graduated in 1877, since which time he has resided and practiced in Wetmore.

NATHANIEL MORRIS, merchant, began business here in September, 1867, the firm of Morris & Bro., flourishing here until the total destruction of their store by fire in 1870. He then formed a partnership with his brothers-in-law, the Messrs. Wolfley, rebuilt and resumed business. Having purchased the interest of his partners, he has since 1878 carried on a large and rapidly increasing business, the $1,200 stock of 1867, having increased to one of $25,000 in 1882. Mr. Morris has in process of construction the largest store building in Nemaha County, it being two stories high, 44x112 feet, and is well finished and fire-proof throughout, the second floor to be an opera house. He is a native of Illinois, and married Mary Wolfley, by whom he has had three children—Frank, James and Harry. The youngest, Harry, died August 30, 1882, aged six years. While Mr. Morris' business record is above reproach, and well worthy of emulation, it is his military record he most pleasurably remembers. He enlisted July 8, 1861, in the First Illinois Cavalry, and served with that regiment until its capture at Lexington, Mo., with Mulligan. At the expiration of his parole he re-enlisted February, 1863, in the Seventh Illinois Cavalry, and thereafter was engaged in about twenty-five pitched battles; was with Generals Grierson, Wilson and Hatch, in their dashing raids; fought at Somerville, Hatchie River, Moscow, Columbia, Franklin and Nashville, and everywhere the regiment added to the laurels already won. The testimonials of his commanding officers show that Private (afterwards Sergeant) Morris, was ever foremost in all posts requiring cool courage and reckless daring. While near Somersville, Tenn., dressed in citizens clothes, he captured a rebel captain, and near Ripley, Miss., himself and a comrade overhauled and captured two rebel officers. On another occasion he pursued a mounted rebel with only a small revolver, overhauled him and presented his weapon when the rebel exclaimed: "I'll surrender!" almost instantly thereafter, grasping the muzzle of the revolver, and presenting his own shot-gun at Morris, who shot the rebel so seriously that he died the next day. Mr. Morris takes pride in relating the incidents of camp and field life, especially the recovery of his favorite horse, which had been captured by Saul Street, the noted guerrilla, Street himself being captured with the horse, by the One Hundred and Third Illinois regiment, and the steed turned over to his rightful owner. When but a boy seventeen years old, he came to Kansas and settled in Linn County, this being in the fall of 1857. At that time John Brown and James Montgomery were stirring up the pro-slavery men in that section. United States Deputy Marshal Russell, of Arkansas, came up and organized two companies in Linn and one in Bourbon County. Nathaniel Morris went into company No. 2, and went through the jayhawker war. They had two skirmishes with John Brown, both on Big Sugar Creek. There was but one man killed in this war, and that was a captain, who was shot when getting a gun out of a wagon to shoot a prairie chicken.

HON. WILLIAM MORRIS, was born in 1839, in Edwardsville, Ill. He came to Kansas in 1854, from Galesburg, Ill., and made a claim near Mound City, Linn County, only eighteen miles from the Kansas home of John Brown, with whom he became well acquainted. Brown used to call the three Morris brothers, George, William and James, the "three suckers." William Morris returned to Illinois in 1856, and lived in Knox County, till March, 1868, when he brought his family again to Kansas, and settled on a farm three miles east of Wetmore, where he located in 1868, and built the third store in the town, his brother Nathaniel and himself doing business together as "Morris & Bro.," until they were burned out in 1870. Each then built a store, and resumed business for himself. At the end of four years William Morris bought a farm northwest of Wetmore, which he sold in 1877, and packing all his earthly possessions returned with his family to Illinois, which State he traversed thoroughly without finding a location that suited him as well as did Kansas. Returning to Wetmore, he bought a number of lots and built the store now occupied by Frager & DeForest, and was in business with Mr. Frager two years, then sold out and built two adjoining stores to the north. For the past three years Mr. Morris has lived quietly enjoying the comforts of his elegant home in the town. He came to the State in 1854, a staunch Democrat, but became a Republican within a fortnight, thanks to the Missouri Democracy then dominant. In 1869 he represented his district in the Kansas Legislature, and prior to that was a Commissioner of Brown County. Mrs. Morris was Eliza Stump, of Knox County, Ill. They have one daughter now with them in Wetmore.

JOHN RADFORD, jeweler, was born in 1836, in Devonshire, England, went to London in 1846, and for a few years was glad to subsist by doing anything to which he could honorably turn his hand, and by which he could turn a penny. Determined to secure an education he attended night schools, lyceums, and mechanics' institutes, etc., and his conversation and writings to-day show that the time was not misspent. For seven long years he was apprenticed to an enameler and engraver, at which trade he worked twelve years in all. Liberal ideas, socially, politically and religiously, early found lodgment in his brain, and a ready and energetic champion in his tongue and pen. "Bronterre O'Brien" was a co-worker and intimate friend. "The Mutual Land Emigration and Co-operative Colonization Company (Limited)," was the rather pretentious name of an organization formed by the labors of James Murray and John Radford in London, in 1868. One pound shares were issued, and each member allowed to own not to exceed fifteen shares. The idea briefly stated, was for the company to buy land in one of the new American States, and to lease the same to actual settlers, who were to be reasonably well paid for developing the raw land into farms. A tract of 720 acres was bought in Harrison Township, Nemaha County, Kan., and in 1869 six families came as colonists, joined by over twenty more in 1870. While the main idea has proved a failure, yet the Association was the means of bringing over about fifty English families, most of whom are now counted among our wealthiest and best people, like the Fullers, Stowells, Edgingtons, Radfords, etc. The grasshopper plague of 1874 "wound up" the colony affairs; a Mr. Willson, a liberal-minded English gentleman taking the land off the hands of the embarrassed colonists. Mr. Radford came over in 1874 as Organizing Agent, by special vote of the Association, but his efforts availed but little. "land was too cheap all around us" he says. After a few years of hard struggling, working at gardening, farming, engraving, and as a jeweler, he has finally located his large farm in Harrison, (bought of Mr. Willson), and opened up a very fair jewelry business in Wetmore. He had eight children by his deceased wife, Mary Days, who died in 1873. The present Mrs. Radford was Maria Slark.

DON C. RISING, the eldest son of N. H. Rising, deceased, was born in 1844, and came to Kansas with the family in 1856; crossed the prairies in 1860; rode pony express for the stage company in the winter of 1862; was made assistant wagon-master in the United States service, and in 1862, was at Isle No. 10, Pittsburg Landing, Shiloh, Tuscumbia and Corinth; was discharged on sick leave; worked at railroading till the spring of 1863; returned to Kansas, and that year went with a train of 185 wagons from Ft. Leavenworth to Mexico; was then in Granada, Kan., until 1866, part of the time in mercantile business, then in same occupation in Wetmore till 1871. That year he began railroading again, and followed it as brakeman and conductor on the Santa Fe & Missouri Pacific roads till 1875, and since that time in the stock business in Wetmore. From October, 1879, to April, 1882, he kept the Wetmore Hotel. Mrs. Rising was Mary C. Shuemaker, daughter of Peter Shuemaker, a very early settler of Granada, Kan.; and they have three children.

N. H. RISING, deceased, an honored Kansas pioneer, was born in 1824, in Herkimer County, N. Y., and reared in Steuben County, where he learned surveying and held various public offices. In April, 1857, he came to Kansas and made a claim adjoining Sabetha on the west. His wife and four children joined him in August, 1858. His plank house was one of the first built here. During 1858-'59, Messrs. Rising and George Lyons kept a store in Sabetha. In 1859, Mr. Rising leased the hotel at Granada, which he ran during 1859-'60. In 1861 he built the noted "Log Chain" ranch, at the crossing of the old military road over the creek of that name. It may be noted here that when General Albert Sidney Johnston was sent with United States troops to quiet the impudent Mormons, he had great trouble in crossing this creek, and scores of heavy chains were broken by the teams of twenty-four and thirty-six yoke of oxen hitched to the heavily-laden government wagons, and that the broken chains piled on the bank of the creek gave it the name of Log Chain Creek, when the country was first settled. Mr. Rising's "ranch" was a house 24x40 feet, and a barn seventy feet long, and his business was most lively here for about eighteen months, at the end of which he built the "Reserve Station" on Plum Creek, and flourished here about five years, the men and teams of the old stage companies being regular patrons. In 1867 he settled in Wetmore, and engaged in mercantile business until his death May 3, 1878. Mr. Rising was highly esteemed by all; was a man of few words, but imbued with much honor and good sense. He was buried by the Masonic fraternity, of which he was a valued member. Mrs. Rising, who still lives in Wetmore, was Mary E. Smith, of Tioga County, Pa., and the four children—Don C., Clara (Mrs. A. Huff, of Wetmore) Frank S., and Alma M. (Mrs. Dr. Graham, of Wetmore) were all born in Steuben County, N. Y.

DAVID SCOTT, farmer, P. O. Ontario, Jackson County, was born in 1836, in Cass County, Michigan. Removed to Calhoun County, Iowa, in 1857; to Mahaska County soon after, and there enlisted as a Second Lieutenant in the Third Iowa Infantry; served in Missouri for some time, guarding the line of the Hannibal & St. Joe Railroad, and at Quincy, Ill., was taken sick and resigned. On his recovery, he enlisted in the Twenty-second Iowa Volunteer Infantry, as color-bearer. Served under Curtis and Hurlburt in Missouri, and under Grant at Vicksburg, and after the surrender of that stronghold, he again went home on sick leave, recovered, and enlisted again—this time in the Ninth Iowa Cavalry, and after an exciting and dangerous campaign in Arkansas and Missouri, against guerrillas like Price and Marmaduke, he came out at the collapse of the Rebellion with a Second Lieutenant's commission. Mr. Scott has resided in Kansas since 1868, and is farming in Wetmore. He married in Leavenworth, Sophia Keyser, and they have two sons—Virgil and Franklin—born in Kansas.

ROBERT SEWELL, of Wetmore, was born in 1827, in Glenn's Falls, Warren County, N. Y. In his younger days he traveled with a circus company about four years in the Southern States. About 1857 he located in Iowa City, Iowa, drove stage a year for the Western Stage Company, and in 1858 located in Leavenworth, Kan., and drove stage for the Kansas Stage Company for a year. In 1859 he located in Seneca, Kan., and for about ten years was in the employ of the Overland Stage Company, driving stage, buying and selling stock and grain, and making himself generally useful. About 1866 he went to Monument Station in the Smoky Hill region, and remained about a year, and then engaged in farming for a few years in Granada, and in 1873 bought of W. W. Letson the property which he has since converted into the Overland Hotel, which has become a most popular hotel under his judicious management. Mr. Sewell was a charter member of Wetmore Lodge, No. 53, A. F. & A. M. He relates that General Lane and prominent Pro-slavery and Anti-slavery magnates of that day were frequently his passengers, stage-bound for various parts of the Territory. Mrs. Sewell was Miss Cicely, daughter of David M. Locknane, one of the very first settlers of Granada Township, now deceased.

PETER SHAVEY, Wetmore, was born in 1836, in Columbia Fountain, France, and came to America in 1846, with his parents who settled in Whitley County, Ind. Peter Shavey left here in 1857, and located at Grasshopper Falls, Kan., then but a hamlet. After about a year he came to Brown County and worked there as a farm laborer until 1861, when he enlisted in Company F, of the Eighth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and thereafter identified his fortunes with that regiment. (See history of Eighth Kansas in this book.) On his return from the army he again located in Powhattan, Brown County, and by several shrewd "deals" in real estate acquired a capital that enabled him to form a partnership with William Morris, of Wetmore, in the mercantile business, the firm of Morris & Shavey doing business about two years—1871-'72. During the next four years, Mr. Shavey ran a meat market, where he now is, and then built his present residence, one of the finest in Wetmore. It is 18x24 feet, with a wing 16x18 feet, well finished throughout, and stands over a cellar admitted to be the best in Southern Nemaha County. His next move was to build the store building lately occupied by Vilott & Co., sell it and then build his billiard hall, which he has since managed. Beginning as a day laborer, he has earned every dollar of his property in Kansas. He married in Hiawatha, Kan., Sarah A. Garvin, by whom he has three children—Mattie, Ida and Blanche; all born in Nemaha County.

DANIEL SMITH, deceased, an early settler and farmer of Granada, was a native of Chautauqua County, N. Y.; married Harriet Gage in Crawford County, Pa.; lived for a few years in Columbia County, Wis., and in 1858, bought and located upon the claim of Joseph Eldredge, in Granada, Kan. Mrs. Smith died here in 1857, and the husband and father in 1860. Six children survived them—Julia, Elmira, Mary, H. E., Ellen and Sylvia. H. Eugene Smith, the only son, enlisted August 29, 1862, in Company I, Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry. He was at this time not quite fourteen years of age; undoubtedly the youngest soldier who ever enlisted in either the Union or Rebel armies. He carried his musket and served out his three years term of service, and has since lived in Nemaha County with the exception of about three years spent in the mountains of the West. His wife was Mary Graham, of Granada. Mr. Smith by trade is a plasterer, and his home in Wetmore is a pleasant one.

JOHN G. SPENCER, now among the oldest settlers of Nemaha County, was born December 18, 1818, in Pulaski County, Ky. His father, Samuel, born in Mercer County, Ky., was a son of Amasa Spencer, one of New York's soldiers in the revolution. John G. Spencer removed to Jennings County, Ind., where his father settled in 1838, and in the summer of 1839 he visited the Platte Purchase on a hunting frolic with a party of young men, and rode as far west as Fort Riley, Kan., then Indian Territory. Westport, Mo., was then the Kansas City of the West, as Atchison, Leavenworth, St. Joseph and Kansas City had no existence. Returning to Indiana, Mr. Spencer stayed there until 1855, when he came West again for permanent settlement in Kansas. He was accompanied by his son William, now a farmer in Granada Township, and John T., who was killed in the Union Service at Fort Smith, Ark. His first location was on the northeast quarter of Section 18, Township 4, Range 15, on what is now known as Walnut Creek. Here he built a hewed log house with a puncheon floor and roof, and for several years saw much of frontier life in this border territority. His neighbors were Caleb Magill, Henry Gregg, D. M. Locknane and Barney Gentry, all of whom had settled a few weeks or perhaps months before him. Gentry and Locknane are dead, and Gregg and Magill are in Oregon. About 1860, Mr. Spencer engaged in the mercantile business in Granada, and in 1871 located in Wetmore, where W. W. Letson and himself associated in business until the purchase of Mr. Letson's interest by H. C. De Forest, who finally, in 1877, bought out Mr. Spencer, who has since been in the stock business. Mr. Spencer has been thrice married, and has three children—William, Eliza and Hattie; the two eldest children born in Jennings County, Ind., and Hattie in Brown County, Kan.

ISAIAH THOMAS, deceased, a pioneer farmer and settler of the present town of Wetmore, was born December 19, 1819, in Ohio, and removed to Noble County, Ind., and there, October 8, 1839, he married Martha Dallas, who survives him. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas came to Kansas in the summer of 1856, and made a claim on Elk Creek, their only neighbors being John and Green Campbell. A log house was built and various improvements started prior to the enlistment of Mr. Thomas in the Union Service in the Kansas Eleventh. He died November 13, 1862, in Pineville, Ark., leaving eight children—A. Elwood, Ruth A., Patience, Susan J., Ephraim, Ellen, Emma and Manning. Since 1876, Mrs. Thomas has resided on her small but valuable farm east of Wetmore, on which she has planted many shade and fruit trees. Of her children, the eldest was a volunteer in the Fifth Kansas Regiment, and was for ten months a rebel prisoner, and is now in Utah; Ruth is Mrs. John Williams; Emma, Mrs. William Poston; Patience, Mrs. Henry McCrary; Ellen is dead; Susan in Michigan, and Ephraim in the Far West; Manning is with his mother. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas were Methodists, prior to his death, and were attendants and among the organizers of the Pioneer Sabbath-school, on Elk Creek, supported by the Woodburn, Thomas, Steele and Campbell families, to whom Rev. Messrs. Steele (an Indian missionary, but at that time an itinerant) and Lawrence were the first preachers in Kansas.

EVERSON WHITED, carpenter and joiner, is a son of Oliver Whited, of Orange County, N.Y., who is likewise a carpenter. He (Oliver Whited) brought his family to Rock County, Wis., then to Jones County, Iowa, and thence, in 1874, to Kansas, locating in Granada. Of his eleven children, three are dead, the others being now residents of Kansas. Everson Whited married in Jones County, Iowa, Miss Melissa J. Cain, of Wapello County, Iowa, and is prospering at his trade in Wetmore.

AUGUSTUS WOLFLEY, deceased, the first settler in what is now Wetmore Township, was born March 28, 1802, in Middletown, Dauphin County, Pa., and died on his Wetmore farm, May 2, 1868. He married Mary Cudney, of Tompkins County, N. Y., who was born September 3, 1810, and died May 28, 1881. They had eight children—Augustus, John, Reuben, Jacob, James, Theodore, Mary (Mrs. N. Morris,) and Annie (Mrs. W. P. Buzan,) all residents of Kansas, except James, who was murdered in Iowa. Augustus Wolfley, his wife, and their six youngest children came to Kansas from Iowa in the spring of 1855, settling on Section 35, Township 4, Range 14, on a stream afterwards named Wolfley Creek, in honor of their being the first settlers upon it. Augustus Wolfley, Jr., settled at this time in Brown County, Kan. John Wolfley came in the spring of 1856, and actually settled on Spring Creek a short time before his father, who removing to the same creek, built his first log house near an enormous spring that still gushes out near a substantial frame house built in 1861. During 1856, Mr. Wolfley and his son Reuben visited Atchison on business, where they were arrested by a Pro-slavery mob, tried and sentenced to be shot, but were respited on condition that they cross over into Missouri and remain there till the next election and vote, in Kansas, the Pro-slavery ticket. According to this, they were put across the river, but made their way to the St. Joe Ferry, re-crossed into Kansas, and walked sixty-five miles across the uninhabited prairie to their home. Mr. Wolfley came to Kansas with considerable means, and in a few years, by good management in loans and investments in lands and stock, he accumulated a tract of about 5,000 acres of land, mainly in his own township. Prior to his death, he deeded each of his children a section of land. Mr. Wolfley was a member of the Church of God, and was in early life a preacher of that faith.

ELIAS WOODBURN, farmer, Section 18, P. O. Wetmore, was born in 1827, in Preble County, Ohio. Is a son of John Woodburn, of Kentucky, and Elizabeth Telley, of Ohio. He was reared in Randolph County, Ind., where his parents settled in 1834. Mr. Woodburn came to Kansas with a wife and three children. In July, 1867, after a six weeks' tour of observation, he closed the claim which has since been his home, built a 14x16 foot log house, roofed with clapboard, and began his pioneering with only the Campbell, Thomas and White families as neighbors. To-day we find him on a well-improved farm, fenced with hedges and wire, a good frame house, a stable, etc., 300 apple trees, and with his native timber and plentiful water supply, can easily envy him. His wife was Sarah J. Odle, a native of Randolph County, Ind., and they have four children—Anna R., now Mrs. J. Helsby; Mary, Mrs. T. C. Overhulse; William T., born in Kansas, and a teacher; and Mattie. Two daughters—Mellinda E. and Emma E., died at the ages of twenty and twelve, respectively.

CENTRALIA.

Long before the advent of the Central Branch of the Union Pacific Railroad, and as early as 1859, a settlement known as Centralia, was established about one mile north of the present town. Its founders were J. W. Tuller, J. S. Hidden, and A. A. Goodman. The first named of these erected a store building in 1860, soon after which a schoolhouse, a hotel and a drug store building were constructed, the hotel by J. T. Morse, while a law office was opened by F. P. Baker, now of the Topeka Commonwealth. These few buildings, together with a blacksmith shop, comprised the town in 1867.

The new Centralia is pleasantly located upon the eastern branch of the Black Vermillion, which flows west, and empties into Blue River. Its site, covering 240 acres, was purchased about 1867, from private parties by Peter Clippinger, John E. and W. J. Smith, J. S. Hidden and A. W. Slater, who gave a one-half interest to the railroad company, in consideration of the latter using a part of it for depot purposes. The first building erected was a store room put up by I. Stickel in 1867, a grocery being opened soon after in a second building, by A. Williams, while a third store building was constructed in 1869 by J. E. Smith, and leased to W. P. McCubbin. In 1870 a hotel was opened by McCubbin, and in 1871 Dr. J. S. Hidden's drug store commenced operations.

In 1873, a mill was built by John Ingram, at a cost of $7,000. Upon the owner's death the property passed into the hands of the present proprietor, Augustus Hybskmann. During the following year the Excelsior cheese factory began operations, under the proprietorship of E. A. Waite, and in 1878 a second one was established by J. S. Hidden & Co.

It is impossible to be accurate as to the first birth occurring in the town. The first marriage upon the site of the future city was in 1860, uniting Albert Clark to Sara Mitchell.

On the 13th day of July, 1882, Centralia having the requisite number of inhabitants, presented a petition to the Hon. David Martin, Judge of the District Court, to grant an order incorporating the town as a city of the third class. This petition was signed by seventy-five qualified electors, and defined the town site as covering all of the northeast quarter of Section 12, and the south one-half of the southeast quarter of Section 1, of Township 4, Range 11. An order was subsequently granted in accordance with the terms of the petition, and an election ordered.

The first school in Centralia was taught by J. S. Stamm, in 1872, in a frame school-house, erected at the cost of $2,500. This building continued to do service for ten years, being almost totally destroyed in a wind storm, which occurred in July, 1882. Steps were at once taken toward the erection of a new one, the question of bonds for that purpose, in the sum of $6,000, being decided by a vote on July 29, 1882. The present principal is O. M. Bowman; the school attendance 175.

The Methodist Episcopal denomination, organized a class in Centralia in 1867, worshiping in private houses. The church, as such, was formally instituted in 1871, and placed in the pastoral charge of Rev. T. B. Gray. Mr. Gray was succeeded in 1873, by W. H. Sweet, other incumbents, in the order as given, being: L. C. Biggs, J. A. Simpson, J. Biddeson, J. A. Amos and Thomas Carter. A commodious church edifice was erected in the same year that the formal organization was effected. Its seating capacity is 200, and the actual membership 110.

The Congregational sect effected an organization in 1868, through the efforts of Rev. William Stewart, and with a charter membership of twelve. A few months later, Mr. Stewart was succeeded by Rev. S. A. VanDyke, more recent incumbents being: Rev. John Phillips, Rev. Myron W. Hunt, Rev. H. L. Howard, Rev. A. B. Cochrane, the last named assuming charge in December, 1881. The membership is seventy-five. A church building was constructed by the society in 1871, at a cost of $3,500. The seating capacity is 300.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The only paper ever devoted to, or published in, Centralia, was the Phonograph, the first number of which appeared in May, 1878, under the proprietorship of Daniel C. Needham. It was one of a line of co-operative papers, issued along the Central Branch Railroad; and had but a brief existence.

The postoffice was originally in charge of I. Stickel, who received his appointment in 1867. He was soon succeeded by A. W. Manchester, he, in turn, giving way to A. B. Clippinger, the present incumbent, who has held the position since 1878.

Home Lodge No. 89, A. F. and A. M.—Was instituted in 1870, its title being subsequently changed to Home Lodge No. 89. Its first officers were: W. M., L. R. Jackson; Sr. W., A. Hornbeck; Jr. W., A. W. Manchester; Secretary, A. J. Birchfield. The membership in 1882 is twenty-five, the officers as follows: W. M., Edward Holtzlander; Sr. W., T. M. Durland; Jr. W., A. Hornbeck; Secretary, A. J. Birchfield.

A. O. U. W.—A lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen was organized September 1, 1880, with a charter membership of fifteen, and officers as follows: M. W., G. W. Pampel; F. S., E. J. Benedict; R. S., Milton Todd. The membership in 1882 is thirty, the officers: M. W., W. H. Gwinn; R. S., Adam Hoge; F. S., E. J. Benedict.

Cheese Factories.—Of these there are two in successful operation. The Excelsior Factory, erected in 1875 by E. A. Waite, and the Centralia Factory, built by J. S. Hidden, A. J. Birchfield and A. W. Slater, in 1878. Their capacity is about equal, each having three vats, and being capable of the production of twelve hundred and fifty pounds of cheese per day.

The Centralia State Bank was established in April, 1882, with John S. Hidden, President; C. S. Cummings, Vice-President; A. Oberndorf, Jr., Cashier. Its capital is fifty thousand dollars.

Centralia has, at the time of writing, four general stores, two hardware stores, one drug store, one grocery store, one lumber yard, and two livery stables. Its population, according to the last official census, is two hundred and eighty-nine.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

M. Z. ANDREWS, farmer, Section 4, P. O. Centralia, was born in Ashtabula County, Ohio, in 1830, reared in that State as a farmer, married there, and, with his family of children to educate, located in Oberlin, they having the benefits of the College there for a period of twelve years. He came West in 1877, and with his youngest brother, Professor of Theology in Talladega College, Ala., owns a fine farm of 400 acres, and is prospering in worldly affairs. Soon after his settlement in Kansas he united with the Centralia Congregationalists and was almost immediately made a Deacon and Superintendent of the Sabbath-school, which office he still holds. Mrs. Andrews was Augusta C. Cathcart, born in Erie, Pa. They have seven children. With Mr. Andrews lives his aged mother, now ninety, and beyond doubt the oldest person in Nemaha County.

STEPHEN BARNARD, farmer, Section 12, P. O. Centralia, was born August 18, 1814, in historic old Deerfield, Mass. Was reared a farmer, and at twenty-eight began boot manufacturing in Hopkinton. Ill health caused him to move westward. Locating at the mushroom town of Sumner, near Atchison, he lost his all by bad investments, and filed a claim on 160 acres, a mile west of his present farm; lost it through inability to meet his payments, and by an exchange of the remnant of his Sumner property, secured his present valuable farm, adjoining the village of Centralia. His only capital on commencing here was a team and plenty of "grit." To-day he has a fine farm, well improved, on which he has expended many a hard day's work and many a dollar. Just prior to the preliminary survey for the Central Branch Railway he accepted an offer of $500 for his farm, but was induced to "back out" by his tried and often proved friend F. P. Baker, then of Centralia. Within a year he could have sold for $4,000, the present valuation of his farm. Mr. Barnard is a kindly and genial man, popular with his townsmen, and a Free Mason. Mrs. Barnard was Miss Achsah E. Skinner, a native of Warren, Mass. Married November 22, 1838. She is a member of the Congregational Church of Centralia, and a lady esteemed for her mild and engaging ways with all whose pleasure it is to make her acquaintance.

A. J. BEST, M. D., is a native of Nova Scotia, born in 1847. He was educated in Waterville, N. S., and served four years as a commissioned officer (Captain) in the Colonial Militia. He left his native place in 1868, locating at Netawaka, Kan., where he began the study of medicine, entering the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Keokuk, Iowa. He graduated in the spring of 1876, locating at Centralia the same year. He has since resided and practiced here. The Doctor received in 1880 a final ad eundem from the Missouri Medical College, St. Louis. He has a pleasant home in the village; has a large and lucrative practice, steadily increasing, and is popular and prosperous. He is a member of the School Board and the A. O. U. W. Mrs. Dr. Best was Hattie Little, and their daughter, Maud L., was born in Kansas.

ANDRUS J. BIRCHFIELD, druggist, was born in 1844, in Franklin County, Ky., and educated at Frankfort, the State capital. He came to Kansas as a youth, with untamed cereals to sow, in 1866, joining his uncle, Major Vanderslice, then Indian Agent. Drifting westward to Centralia, he was appointed Railroad Station Agent, and in that capacity served two years. He then purchased a half interest in Dr. Hidden's drug store and began his business career. About 1873 his brother, Daniel Birchfield, and himself started a combined general store and drug store in Centralia, but made an assignment six years later. A. J. Birchfield married Miss Anna I. Hidden, a daughter of the pioneer druggist and doctor of Centralia, by whom he has two daughters, Gracie and Jessie, both born in Centralia. Mr. Birchfield is a charter member of the Home Lodge No. 79 A. F. & A. M., and was the first Secretary there, a position since held by him with the exception of four years. Few young men have made a finer or more flourishing record in Kansas than has A. J. Birchfield. His well-stocked drug store has been his since 1880, at which time he bought out the Doctor, his father-in-law.

DANIEL BIRCHFIELD, of the lumber firm of Birchfield & Co., was born August 12, 1848, near Frankfort, Ky., and orphaned at an early age, through the death of his mother, nee Betsey Ross, and the accidental killing of his father a few years later. His father, James Birchfield, was a native of Virginia and an early settler of Kentucky. By the first wife he had four children, Andrus J., Daniel, Luther P. and Martha. Of these, A. J. is a prosperous and popular Centralia druggist, L. P. is a commercial man, and the sister a resident of Doniphan County, Kan. He enlisted for one year in the late war, in Company E (Capt. H. J. Sheets) Ninth Kentucky Cavalry; was in several engagements, and was captured on the retreat from Richmond Ky., to Louisville; was in a skirmish at Shelbyville, and being cut off from his Company, was captured, but was soon exchanged, and returned and served out his term. Mr. Birchfield came to Kansas in 1864, the first of his family, and settled in Highland, Doniphan Co., where lived his uncle, Major Vanderslice, and J. W. and Robert Birchfield. In 1865 he drove three yoke of cattle across the plains to Salt Lake City, thence to Montana Territory, and prospected during the winter of 1865–'66 in Confederate Gulch for gold, and in the spring farmed in the Gallatin Valley; sold his crop in the fall, and with 40 others came down the Yellow Stone and Missouri Rivers, in Mackinaw boats, to Omaha, Neb., from whence he returned to Kansas, engaging until 1870 in the stock business in Highland. He then bought a farm with L. P. Birchfield near Centralia, and for three years was engaged in selling out the bankrupt stock of Mr. Dickson, of Waterville, and such goods as he bought in connection with the Dickson stock. His next move was to embark in the drug and general mercantile business with his brother, A. J. Birchfield, in Centralia, which was closed out in 1878, at which time he began his present business. Mr. Adam Hogg associated himself with Mr. Birchfield in January, 1879, and the business has increased from a stock of $3,500 to one of $12,000, the firm dealing in lumber, coal, paints and building material, and also in grain and seeds of all kinds. Mr. Birchfield was married on Thanksgiving Day, 1879, to Miss Ella E., youngest daughter of the Hon. John S. Hidden, of Centralia, and they have two sons, John Prentiss and Raymond Andrus. Mr. Birchfield is a Free Mason, and in politics a Democrat.

A. H. BONSTEEL, Centralia. Half a mile west of Centralia we come to Mr. Bonsteel's farm. One can hardly realize by the looks of the place, that two years ago, it was a raw prairie. Mr. Bonsteel was born in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., in 1838. His father was a farmer. His parents, when he was nine years of age, moved to Lake County, Ill., where they purchased a farm and lived five years. Selling out there, they moved to Lake County, Ind., where they both died a few years since. A. H. Bonsteel, after helping his father improve his farm in Indiana, learned the carpenter's trade, and followed it for twenty years in various places. In 1864 he was married and settled in Crown Point, Ind., where he lived until he moved West. In 1877 he came to Thayer County, Neb., where he bought a piece of wild land and commenced farming. The first year he broke seventy acres, and the second year raised 730 bushels of wheat, only paying out $28 for help in the whole time. In 1880 he came to his present farm in Nemaha County, Kan., where he went to work to make a new home, although not a furrow had been cut upon it. He now has seventy-five acres broken and his farm fenced. His crop for 1882 was as follows: 2,400 bushels of corn, 240 bushels of oats, 40 bushels of rye, and 33 bushels of wheat. He has a cozy farmhouse, well surrounded by yearling cotton-woods, and a fine young orchard already growing. His new corn-crib and granary combined, is a model of neatness and strength, and can not be surpassed in the State; it holds 2,000 bushels of corn and 500 bushels of oats, besides a shelling and cleaning-room. His stock is twenty-eight head of cattle and thirty-five head of hogs; he has good yards and buildings to accommodate them all. Mr. Bonsteel has two children—a son, Charlie (by a deceased wife), born May 17, 1865, in Crown Point, Ind., and a daughter, Jessie, born September 1, 1881, in Centralia, Kan., by his present wife, formerly Miss Maggie Stewart, of Geneva, Ill. Mr Bonsteel and son have done all the work and improvements on the place with one team of horses, without hiring a dollar's worth of help.

JAMES F BROCK, proprietor Brock's Hotel, was born September 11, 1831, in Toronto, Canada. Lived eleven years in Lake and McHenry Counties, Ill. In 1856 settled in Jackson County, Iowa, and here, in August, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Company K, Twenty-fourth Iowa, and served with his regiment at Helena, Arkansas Post, the siege of Vicksburg, the Red River campaign, and in the Shenandoah Valley campaign. While in Arkansas, he was twice wounded, and now draws a pension of $18 per month. He married in Crystal Lake, Ill., Miss Adeline M. Countryman, of Syracuse, N. Y. They have had four children. Mr. Brock came to Kansas in 1866, and for six years owned and managed a farm on Section 5, Harrison Township. In 1872 he ran the Smith House in Seneca, then removed to Centralia, where in 1871 he came into possession of the property, out of which grew the Brock House. The original house was built by J. E. Smith, of Seneca, and opened as a hotel by William Hornbeck, of New York. Dr. Tenney was the next lessee. George Wood then bought it and sold it to Mr. Brock. He ran it two years as the Centralia House, and then thoroughly remodelled and refitted it, and gave it the present name. Mr. Brock has been a Free Mason for twelve years, and an Odd Fellow for nine years. Is also one of the A. O. U. W., all of Nemaha County. He is a public spirited and popular landlord, and a good citizen, and his recent leasing of the house is generally regretted by traveling men.

T. A. CAMPFIELD, farmer, Section 19, P. O. Vermillion, was born July 2, 1830, in Morris County, N. J., and resided as a farmer in that State until the fall of 1858, when he came to Kansas. His first claim was the northeast quarter of Section 24 in the old "Home Association" township. In 1859 he built a frame house, then the best in Nemaha County; it was 17x28 feet, 14 feet posts, with Walnut siding, and "A" shingles hauled from Atchison. Dissatisfied with the management, or rather mismanagement of the colony's affairs, he sold out, and in 1864 settled where he now is. He has a farm of 486 acres, 300 under cultivation, 40 or 50 acres of natural timber, 12 acres of soft maple grove, and an orchard of 4 acres, two good dwelling houses, 35 horses and mules, 120 head of cattle, and 160 hogs, and is in all respects a prosperous and wide awake pioneer farmer. His wife was Hyla Gezung, also of Morris County, N. J., and they have four children. Elvin and Arthur were born in New Jersey, and these, with the parents, were all the native born "Jersey men" in Nemaha County up to 1870. The eldest is now a practicing attorney in Wetmore, Kan., the second a prosperous farmer, the third is Mrs. P. K. Shoemaker, and Laura, born eight days before the admission of Kansas as a State, is now the wife of Thomas Lovell, of Thomas Vermillion. Mr. and Mrs. Campfield were Presbyterians in New Jersey, and were among the organizers of the old Centralia Congregational Church in 1859.

A. B. CLIPPINGER, hardware merchant, was born in 1850, in Franklin County, Pa.; accompanied his father, Peter Clippenger, to a farm near Monmouth, Ill., in 1857, and spent ten years there. The family came to Kansas in 1867, locating on the beautiful prairie farm near Centralia, where P. Clippinger still lives. Mr. A. B. Clippinger worked on the farm and attended school until 1872, then went into the lumber business with his father. Two years later A. B. went into the hardware business for himself, and such has been his success, that the growth thereof necessitated the erection, in 1881, of his large and complete store. It is 44x70 feet, and in basement and on first floor is well filled with a complete stock of every thing to be found in the hardware and furniture and implement trade. Mr. Clippinger sold about $40,000 worth of goods during 1882, his barbed wire trade alone footing up $18,000. He was appointed postmaster of Centralia, April 1, 1874, and has since continuously served Uncle Sam and the public in that capacity. He married Eliza J. Mayhew, of Centralia, and they have one son—Morris. Mr. and Mrs. Clippinger belong to the Congregational Church. As evidence of his prosperity, we may note that Mr. Clippinger has just completed an elegant new residence, 28x36 feet, hip roof, two stories high, and finished and fitted up with all conveniences and comforts known to modern architecture.

HON. CHARLES S. CUMMINGS, hardware merchant, one of the oldest and most successful business man of Centralia, came here in 1866—just before the railroad did—as a blacksmith. He built the first shop that year, and subsequently the wagon shop and blacksmith shop, now occupied by A. Hornbeck. Mr. Cummings relinquished the hammer and forge in 1871, and built the stone store. Under it is a fine basement, well stored with goods, as is the upper floor and the adjoining built in 1872. Mr. Cummings carries a very heavy line of hardware in all branches, furniture and implements. His retail trade is about $40,000 per annum. He is a native of New York, removed with his parents to Michigan, thence to Illinois, thence to Kansas. Is a son of David and Mercy Cummings, and married in Tazewell County, Ill., Mary Smith, by whom he has two sons—Oscar S. and Clarence O. As a Republican Mr. Cummings was elected to the Kansas Legislature in 1874, and attended the special "grasshopper" session. He is Vice-President of the Centralia State Bank, and a member of Home Lodge A. F. & A. M.

A. C. DURLAND, farmer, P. O. Centralia, was born in Greenville, Orange County, N. Y. A son of the late Hon. Stewart T. Durland, a prominent and popular farmer, stock dealer and politician of that county, who died while a member of the New York Legislature, after having served as an associate judge for many years. His eldest son, Addison C. Durland, came West in 1869, an impecunious young man with little save a clear head and good habits to help himself with. His studies were pursued between the plow handles, and in due time his qualifications were such, that he engaged and successfully taught school for several terms. His first farm on Section 11, of eighty acres, is still in his hands, as are 160 more of the same section. His home farm on Section 14 comprises 160 acres well improved, and this, with four acres in the town site of Centralia, and his general forehandedness, causes Mr. Durland to be regarded as one of the successful self-made young men of his adopted county. He married Miss Rose L. King, of Orange County, N. Y., and both his children are natives of Kansas. Mr. Durland is an active member of Home Lodge A. F. and A. M., of which he has been secretary.

WALTER EDGINGTON, farmer, Section 34, P. O. Centralia. Mr. Edgington strikingly illustrates the fallibility of the idea that a city-bred man can be nothing but a "sidewalk" farmer. Born in 1852, in London, England, he came as one of the English Colony in 1869 and settled near Wetmore, Kan. Working at the carpenter's trade as opportunity offered, he gradually worked his way up, so that to-day we find him on a valuable 160-acre farm, well fenced and improved, on which he and his brother-in-law and partner, Mr. William Ryan, have built a snug farmhouse and suitable sheds for their large herd of stock cattle, horses and hogs. Mr. Edgington is a member and now Junior Warden of Home Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Centralia.

G. H. GUILFORD, Sr., farmer, P. O. Centralia, is of the old Puritan stock, and is a credit thereto. Born in 1816, in Hampshire County, Mass., he was reared and educated there. In 1865, he removed and settled on a beautiful farm near Geneva, N. Y. Sold out here and came to Kansas in 1872. He has, with his son, G. H. Guilford, Jr., a section of land principally devoted to stock. Mr. Guilford has two living sons—Charles A., now in Dakota Territory, and George H. The only daughter, Bessie, a lovely young woman, died while yet a bride, the wife of Alexander Dunn, of New York. The Messrs. Guilford are breeding Poland-China hogs and Durham cattle, and are owners of one thoroughbred, registered animal, which is the pride of that section of the county. Eighty acres of their farm planted to corn yielded about 4,000 bushels in 1882. Both are stalwart Republicans, and the son an Odd Fellow and Congregationalist.

OLAUS HANSEN, Sunday-school missionary of the American Sunday-school Union, came to Kansas, March 1, 1879, and first located in Howard County, where he resided until May 1, 1881, when he moved to Centralia, Nemaha County, Kan. He is a member of the Grange, the I. O. G. T., and the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Hansen was born in Bottne, Holmestrand, Norway, April 19, 1837, and lived in his native place until December, 1865, and then came to America and located in Clinton County, N. Y., where he lived about one year, and then removed to Chicago, where he resided until 1869, and from there came to Kansas. Was married, October 17, 1864, in Bergen, Hillestad, Norway, to Miss Marie Tollefsdatter, a native of Norway. They have four children, viz.: Hakon, Torvald Dicken, John Adolph and Amelia. Mr. Hansen's field of labor as a missionary extends over ten counties in the northeastern portion of the State of Kansas. His mission is to organize Bible-schools in destitute districts, and to provide the scholars and parents with Bibles and Sunday-school literature. He has met with good success, and during the last three months has visited twenty established Sunday-schools, organized twenty four new ones, with a membership of 835 scholars, and 103 teachers, and visited 640 families, and has traveled during this time 1,227 miles. He is active and zealous in the discharge of his duties, and gains the respect of all with whom he comes in contact.

J. H. HEROY is of French lineage, was born in 1845, in Ulster County, N. Y., and reared there, the son of a farmer. During the winter of 1863 and spring of 1864, he was in the United States Government employ, and in the spring of 1866 was induced by the glowing accounts he received to start for that part of the famed West where he now resides, and on the 6th of May was pleased far beyond his expectations to see the beautiful, rich and rolling prairies of Kansas. He had in his possession a cash capital of ten cents. With a little aid from home he started a harness shop, the first in Centralia. During the summer his father sent him $500, which was invested in eighty acres of land one mile east of town. After running the harness business for four years he was married to Mrs. Frank A. Hazeltine, nee Matthews. He again turned his attention to farming, leased and rented different farms for a few years, meanwhile visiting the old York State home. He finally settled on the eighty acres east of town, improved it, built a house and barn, and stayed on the place for about three years, then sold land and crops for $2,600. His last move was to buy 160 acres of raw prairie half a mile east of Centralia, and a home in the village, where he now resides. Mr. and Mrs. Heroy belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Jay E. Matthews, an adopted son, is all that composes their family. A good comfortable home, and a welcome for visitors.

DR. JOHN S. HIDDEN is one of the best known men in Northern Kansas, both in a business and a professional view. He is the oldest regular practitioner in Nemaha County, and one of its wealthiest men, and as a man and citizen has few, if any, peers. He was born in 1820, in Tamworth, N. H. He received a liberal education in the schools of his native village, and when twenty years of age removed to Saco, Me., where he began the study of medicine, entering the medical college at Dartmouth, N. H. He graduated with unusual credit as a physician and surgeon in 1846. Practiced three years in Maine, then spent a winter in the Bellevue Hospital College, New York, thus perfecting his knowledge of surgery. In 1857, he was a member of the New Hampshire Legislature. His settlement in Kansas dates from the fall of 1858, he being one of the colony, or Home Association, that located in Home Township. His home was at old Centralia, he being the first graduate to practice in Nemaha County. The Doctor took long rides in the old days, often going as far west as Waterville, east to the river, and north into Nebraska. At the dissolution of the Home Association, he was treasurer and a trustee. The Central Pacific Railroad employed the Doctor as chairman of the board of appraisers for the adjustment of claims for right of way, and he got his pay for it, as certain railroad magnates may remember. When the present Centralia was laid out, Dr. Hidden was owner of one-sixth of the town site, and no man has done more for the advancement of the town and its interests. While devoted to his chosen profession, winning with every recurring year a greater prestige as a careful physician and skillful surgeon, he yet found time to buy and improve farms, to build stores, opening the first drug store in 1869, and to breed fine stock. He has been United States Examining Surgeon for twelve years past; is both a Royal Arch Mason and an Odd Fellow, Home Lodge No. 89, A. F. & A. M., of Centralia, having had no other Treasurer since its institution. He is a consistent Republican, and in 1863 and 1864 represented his district in the Kansas Legislature. Mrs. Dr. Hidden was Miss Hannah M. Wadleigh, of Parsonfield, Me., a lady of fine attainments, and a descendent of an old and honorable New England family. Two daughters resulted from the union, both now married to the Messrs. Birchfield, a couple of brothers who enjoy a first-class reputation among Centralia business men.

GEORGE R. HUNT, farmer, P. O. Centralia, born in 1834, in Oakland County, Mich. During the Civil War he served as a volunteer, and was with Gen. Butler on the Dutch Canal, his regiment being cut to pieces by the terrible slaughter, going into one battle 1,900 strong, and coming out with only 225 men. This caused a re-organization, and he was transferred to the Twelfth United States Regulars, which regiment did grand service in quelling the famous draft riots in New York City; afterwards guarding rebel prisoners on Bedloes Island, N. Y., until the close of the war. Mr. Hunt removed from Michigan to Kansas in 1869, settling with his wife and five children near where Washington now stands, there then being only five shanties in the place. He then took a claim on White Rock Creek, Jewell County. He was driven out by the Indians. The settlers made a strong fight at the mouth of White Rock Creek, but had to give up. He returned to his family in Washington County. In the spring of 1871 Mr. Hunt again went West with his family, and made the third claim on the Solomon River, in what is now Smith County. In the fall of that year their settlement had increased to five families and a few single men, but the Indians again attacked them and drove them out, but Mr. Hunt returned in the spring. Three of the families never came back. He took his revolver with him to work, and buffalo meat was the only meat he had to live on. In 1872 Messrs. Morrison and James and John Johnson were appointed by the Governor of Kansas to organize Smith County, which they did, by laying out three voting precincts. Mr. Hunt was elected Trustee, made the first assessment, and was chairman of the first convention. He removed from that county to his present location in May, 1882, though he still holds his ranch in Smith County.

A. H. HYBSKMANN, proprietor of the Centralia Steam Mills, is a Dane by birth, and a thorough-going American by adoption and enterprise. Born in 1837, he came to this country in 1867, locating at Galesburg, Ill. He has been a miller since his fifteenth year, and, if "practice makes perfect," ought to be a good one. Since he has been in Kansas has worked in Marysville, Seneca and Centralia, and purchased the Centralia Mill in 1880 of Wood & Holyoke. It is 28x40 feet, has three run of stone, a forty horse-power engine, and has a large patronage. Mr. Hybskmann has twenty-five lots in Centralia, a pleasant home, and hosts of friends. His wife was Anna Magreda, and they have seven children.

E. D. HYMER, deceased, was born in North Carolina, and after a residence in Indiana and Illinois, removed his family to Kansas in August, 1859. His wife was Nancy Pope, of Shelby County, Ky., and their eight children accompanied them. The first location was on a farm in the "Home Colony," the next on a farm southwest of Centralia. He died, January 18, 1881, full of years and honors, leaving eight children—Sarah, James, Mary, Lillie, Julia, E. D., A. P. and Mattie, all born in Illinois. A. P. Hymer enlisted in the Eighth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and served with his regiment through the Atlanta campaign under Sherman, and the Nashville campaign under Thomas. After the collapse of Hood the regiment was sent into East Tennessee, then into Texas, and mustered out at San Antonio in 1866. Mr. Hymer then returned to peaceful pursuits; was a farmer till 1880, and has since engaged in the coal, salt, plaster and building-material trade in Centralia. His widowed mother now lives with him.

GERARD LETELLIER, farmer, Section 16, P. O. Centralia, was born in 1850, in Gernelle, France, and came to America in 1868. Two years later he settled in Kansas, working by the month for various Nemaha County farmers, thus securing means to purchase a farm of his own. It comprises ninety-five acres, is well located and valuable, part timber, part meadow, and the balance prairie. He married Mary A. McLaughlin, daughter of W. J. McLaughlin, a prominent and honored citizen of Nemaha County, now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Letellier have four children, all born in Kansas.

W. A. LYNN, farmer, Section 19, Mitchell Township, P. O. Centralia, was born 1840 in Orange County, N. Y. In 1861 he enlisted in the Eighth New York Cavalry, a regiment made world famous by its dashing, heroic deeds, and fought through from Antietam, Fredericsburg, etc., to the Sheridan campaign, in the "Valley" and the Wilson raid on Richmond, the battles of Gettysburg, Winchester and Five Forks, to the final surrender at Appomattox, "and," relates Mr. Lynn, "it was to our Lieutenant Colonel that the first flag of truce was waved, as we held the front and centre of Grant's army that memorable morning." Mr. Lynn was wounded in the head at Gettysburg and laid up three months. From 1865 to 1871 he resided in Missouri, then settled where we now find him in Kansas. His wife was Margaret Haught, and they have three children. Mr. Lynn is a holder of many local offices, and is a Republican.

JOHN McBRATNEY, farmer, P. O. Centralia, was born in 1818, in Ireland, and came to America in 1834 with his parents, who settled in Adams County, Ill. Here he learned the trade of blacksmith, and through that attainment was employed as a manufacturer of plows for about six years in Pattersonville, La. In 1859 he settled in Kansas, where we now find him. His brick house, built in 1860, is with one exception, the oldest brick house in Nemaha County, and it is pleasantly environed by a good orchard. Mrs. McBratney was Presenda

Chapman, and of their nine children, three were born in Illinois, two in Louisiana, and four in Kansas. Mr. McBratney is a noted and successful breeder of Clydesdale horses, his imported stallion "Confidence" being regarded, before his unseasonable death, as a most valuable and promising horse.

TIMOTHY McLAUGHLIN, farmer, Section 8, P. O. Centralia, came to Kansas in 1857, and to Nemaha County the next spring. His 160 acres was secured by a United States land warrant, and he still holds it by virtue of a United States Patent His pioneer log cabin, 14x16 feet, is replaced by a comfortable farmhouse, and on every hand is to be seen evidences of the good work done as a civilizer by Mr. McLaughlin, who now, with his wife, owns a valuable farm of 400 acres. He was born in Lawrence County, Ind., and resided in Peoria County, Ill., from 1847 to 1857. Mrs. McLaughlin was Hannah S. Hammett, and a large family of intelligent children has blessed their union.

WILLIAM J. McLAUGHLIN, deceased, was one of the most energetic and successful, as well as cultured and scholarly men, who, by reason of early settlement, became pioneers of Nemaha County. Born in Kentucky, he was reared in Peoria County, Ill., where he received a rudimentary education. In 1858 he brought his family, comprising a wife and one daughter, to Kansas, locating on the beautiful valley farm in Home Township, Nemaha County, on which he died August 20, 1875, aged forty-six years. Beginning as a frontiersman, he hewed and chopped, plowed and planted, and in due time evolved a pleasant home, supported by 300 acres of rich, well-cultured land. Failing health during his later years, caused greater application to books on the part of this already studious man, and the most advanced ideas, religiously and socially He left at his death a wife and nine children, viz: Mary, Marcus, Hiram, Addie, William, Rebecca, Simon, Emma and Darwin.

G. J. MAELZER, farmer, Section 18, P. O. Vermillion, born in 1846 in Saxony; after a course in the private schools, he attended a Mechanic's Institute, and later served an apprenticeship as carpenter and joiner. Attaining his majority, he came to America, and located at Cleveland, Ohio. In July, 1876, he came to Kansas and bought his present farm, comprising 160 acres. For two years past Mr. Maelzer has made a specialty of breeding Poland China hogs, his stock, purchased of A. C. Moore, Canton, Ill., being very fine The sorghum industry also finds an able and successful advocate in Mr. Maelzer, he having manufactured about 800 gallons in 1881, and 1,800 gallons in 1882, he making it for 22½ cents per gallon, or for one-half the yield. Mrs. Maelzer was Miss E. S. Krapf, and their six children are—Anna C., Jacob K., Valentine, Louisa M., Emilie A. and Edwin B.

JACOB MEYER, farmer, Section 29, Mitchell Township, P. O. Centralia, was born in Columbiana County, Ohio. He grew up the son of a poor village mechanic, and at the age of fourteen, began as a farm laborer; when twenty-two he began farming on his own account in Jefferson County, Iowa. Came to Kansas in 1866 and began on 160 acres of raw prairie land, part of his splendid 320 acre farm. His farm-house is 20x30 feet, with additions since built; barn 32x48 feet, and with his stock-sheds, corn-cribs, etc., make up a small village. His stock yards enclose about three acres, his grove about five acres, and his orchard comprises 400 trees. An osage orange hedge encloses the original 160 acres, and the farm has rightfully earned for its enterprising owner the name of a model farmer. He married in Iowa and has three sons—John J., Amon L. and Henry F., and has an adopted daughter—Gracie A.

ROBERT MORRISON, farmer, Section 18, P. O. Centralia, is a native of Garrett County, Ky., born 1833. He was reared a farmer in Howard County, Ind., and sold out a good property there in order to come to Kansas in 1859. In 1864 he removed from his original location in Marshall County to a farm on the north branch of the Vermillion, which he improved His settlement on his present 108 acre farm was in 1877, and this is the third farm wrought out and rendered valuable by his care and labor. His wife and helpmate was, as a girl, Harriet Garrett, of Madison County, Ohio, and they have eight living children, six born in Kansas Mr. Morrison is a staunch Republican in political faith.

ELLIS W. MYERS, deceased, one of the earliest pioneers of Kansas, was born in 1812, in Howard County, Mo., and reared a farmer. Removing to Iowa, he married Sarah J. Barker In 1855, accompanied by his wife and three children, and by Messrs. Smith, Neal, and another man, he started for Kansas, the then "dark and bloody ground." Arrived in St. Joseph, they were warned that it was almost certain death to cross into the troubled State or Territory of Kansas. However, he and his companions armed themselves and proceeded as far west as Marshall County, where Mr. Myers paid $300 for an unsurveyed claim, on which was built a log cabin with a weather boarded roof, and partially sided with hewed slabs, a primitive affair, in which many a pleasant season was passed by the family. Mr. Myers died here in October, 1868, leaving a wife and seven children—James T., Charles H., Jemima A., Margeret J., John E., La Fayette and Mary E., of these the two eldest daughters have gone the way of all the earth. James T. Myers, the eldest son, born in 1849 in Lucas County, Iowa, owns a fine farm of 144 acres, and is regarded as a prosperous and thriving young farmer. He married Lucy O. McLaughlin, by whom he has five children. As a stock breeder, he has Poland China hogs, and a fine drove of cattle and horses. He takes much pride in the early reminiscences of his parents, and relates that his father once spent fourteen days on the road in making a trip to St. Joseph, when that was the nearest market.

JOHN NESBITT, blacksmith, was born in 1836 in county Antrim, Ireland. Was brought by his parents to America and grew up in Pittsburg, Penn.; when seventeen years of age, he removed to Ottawa, Ill., and learned his trade. Since this time his life has been a changeful and eventful one, as he has pursued various occupations in Nebraska, Pennsylvania and Wyoming Territory, besides serving during the Rebellion as a volunteer in the Fourth Iowa Regiment. He fought with his regiment at Pea Ridge, through both the Vicksburg campaigns, at Arkansas Post, Jackson, and through the Atlanta campaign, then with Gen. Sherman to the sea, and through the Carolinas, taking part in the final grand review at Washington. He then followed blacksmithing in Illinois until 1876 and came to Kansas. His wife was Elizabeth Royle. They have two children—Annie E. and James D. Mr. Nesbitt is Senior Warden in Home Lodge A. F. & A. M., Centralia.

REV. LEVI C. PRESTON, deceased, one of Nemaha County's most gifted, honored and lamented sons, was born in 1830 in Caroline, Tompkins County, N. Y. His boyhood was spent in school, and his whole life in study. After finishing a course of literary studies in Ithaca, N. Y., he entered the Free Baptist Theological Seminary at Whitestown; was ordained, preached regularly about four years. He married in her native county, Herkimer, Miss Mary Gorsline, an attractive and cultured lady, then recently graduated from the Whitestown Seminary, and thereafter, hand in hand they read together from life's great book. Ill health, a lung trouble, caused Mr. Preston to seek a milder climate, resulting in his settlement near Centralia, Kan., in 1869. Though not a farmer, the good work done by him in neat, economizing ways of farming and as a horticulturist, has left its indelible impress in the minds of the many old farmer neighbors, who so regretfully remember him. He literally made two farms, causing nearly a section in all of raw prairie land, to bloom as did the Babylonic gardens of old. His work in the pulpit was only occasionally that of a supply, though his eloquently practical sermons are cherished in the minds of fortunate listeners. Though not a politician, he was twice elected superintendent of schools, and twice to the Legislature of Kansas, 1876-'77. His death occurred August 8, 1878, at his father's, in the old York State home, and his ashes, followed to the tomb by old classmates, repose in the family cemetery among the grass-grown hills and vales of that good old State. He was, while in Kansas, a consistent and faithful member of the Congregational Church, and was superintendent of the Sabbath school at his death. His widow still is a resident on the beautiful farm made so attractive by his tireless hand and brain; is also a member of that church, as also are their daughters. Of these the eldest—Flora, after graduating at Hillsdale, married the Rev A. C. Hogbin, the popular Congregationalist Pastor at Sabetha, Kan., and made the tour of Europe. Miss Mary Preston, M. S. Ph. D., is a graduate of Cornell University and of Hillsdale College, and the son, Bryant Curtis Preston, will, in due time, graduate from the Hillsdale (Mich.) College.

P. H. RUNDLE, farmer, P. O. Centralia, was born in 1840, in Hocking County, Ohio, and removed with his father, Charles Rundle, to Vernon County, Wis., in 1854. Four years later they removed to Logan County, Ill., where, August 6, 1862, P. H. Rundle enlisted in the One Hundred and Sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. His service was on the Bluff at Vicksburg and in Arkansas, regiment capturing Little Rock. He was honorably discharged with his regiment August 1, 1865, having served eight days less than three years In 1870 he moved from Logan County, Ill., to Mitchell County, Kan., and made the third claim in Walnut Township, on which he lived ten years, since which time he has resided in Brown and Nemaha Counties as a farmer. He married Louisa Ewing. They have had ten children, of whom only three are living, four of their children having been swept away within ten days in the fall of 1879. The three living are Ella, Francis and Arthur L.

A. W. SLATER, real estate dealer, one of the earliest and most respected of Centralia's pioneers, was born April 19, 1829, in Sullivan County, N. Y.; was in early life apprenticed as a tailor; married in Orange County, N. Y., Marietta Holbert, and in the fall of 1858 came to Kansas. He had spent the summer in Galesburg, Ill., and remained there a week or two to hear the since famous joint discussion between Lincoln and Douglas; heard it, and has never regretted his delay. His first location was one and a half miles east of old Centralia, his house a substantial frame structure that was almost a marvel in that day, and his neighbors of the old home associations were pleasant and congenial, people who thought more of good living and jolly times than of style, and who never allowed jealousy or pride to cloud any one's enjoyment. The house first built by Mr. Slater stood the dread cyclone of 1866, which burst the windows and actually thrust bits of glass into solid black walnut doors across the room. During the war times Mr. Slater relates that many a family spent night after night in boiling sorghum, that home-made staple that, sugared down, sweetened the home-made coffee of the day. In 1871 Mr. Slater opened a real estate office in Centralia, where he has a most pleasant home, the farm being leased. Mr. and Mrs. Slater have had two daughters, Ella and Jennie. The eldest, grown to beauteous womanhood, married A. G. Rogers, who died May 23, 1880, the young wife following him, a victim to the same fell disease, consumption, December 22, 1880. Two children, Mamie and Lena, survive them. Mr. and Mrs. Slater were founders of the Centralia Congregational Church, and he of the Home Lodge A. F. & A. M., and neither organization has more honored members.

ISAIAH STICKEL, farmer and stock-raiser, Centralia, was born in York County, Pa., April 16, 1830. His parents, John and Mary Stickel, both Pennsylvanians, removed in 1837 to Macon County, Ill., where Isaiah Stickel grew to manhood. He received a classical education in McKendree College, working his way without assistance to successful graduation. He was then engaged as Principal of Union Academy, at Sparta, and of graded schools at Jacksonville and Monticello, Ill., until the breaking out of the Rebellion, when he gave up teaching, and in July, 1861, enlisted as a private in Company F, Second Illinois Cavalry; was elected Orderly Sergeant at organization of the Company, promoted to Second Lieutenant, June, 1862, to Fist Lieutenant, August, 1862, and remained in the service four years and nine months. Lieut. Stickel was complimented for gallantry at Bolivar, Tenn., it being the first battle in which the regiment was engaged, and in which Lieut Col. Hogg and five of Company F, including the First Lieutenant and Orderly Sergeant, were killed in a sabre charge At Holly Springs, Miss., December, 1862, the Captain of the company was taken prisoner, and from that time to the close of the war the command of the company devolved almost exclusively upon Lieut. Stickel. On the Vicksburg campaign he, with six men, in canoes, penetrated the swamps and bayous for thirty miles in pursuit of a boat load of rebel soldiers, among them two Lieutenant Colonels, whom he captured after an exciting day's chase. Near Black River, in rear of Vicksburg, he, with twenty men, having the advance, charged a company of mounted infantry numbering eighty men, and killed and captured thirty without the loss of a man. For this brilliant feat he was complimented by Gens. McClernand and Osterhouse. At the battle of New Iberia, La., Capt Higgins and Lieut. Stickel, having the advance, hurled their companies upon the Rebel cavalry and killed and captured one hundred men. As the Captain was unhorsed at the first onset, the command of both companies devolved upon Lieut. Stickel. In an expedition from Baton Rouge, La., to Liberty, he, with twenty picked men, had the advance, in which he several times charged the enemy, though outnumbering him two to one, killing and capturing a large number. For the valuable service rendered on this expedition he was highly complimented in a general order by Gen. Lee. Few men have had a more brilliant or more eventful military career than Lieut. Stickel. He settled in Centralia in 1866, built and occupied the first store, was the first postmaster of the place, and after a mercantile career of six years, engaged in stockraising, and is now superintending his farms, consisting of 400 acres lying near the town His wife was Mrs. Gaylord, of New York, and both are prominent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

MRS. ANN E. WARD, of Centralia, was Miss Moss, of Galena, Ill., and married, November 15, 1850, W. H. Bevard, a native of Indiana, who removed to Galena, Ill., married there, and enlisted in August, 1862, in the Ninety-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry; served two years, and died in New Albany Ind., leaving two children, Mary M. (Mrs. Merritt Howard, of Centralia) and Wm. H., also of Centralia. In October, 1866, Mrs. Ward married her second husband Allen Ward, of Wayne County, Ind., who served over three years as a volunteer in the Sixteenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, through the Vicksburg campaign, and was nine months in Libby prison In June, 1871, Mr. and Mrs. Ward removed to what is now Kirwin, Phillips Co., Kan., and thus became the fifth family to settle in that county. With them came other families, and for nearly a year they lived on the present site of Kirwin. During the time a band of Indians camped on a hill overlooking the town, and to frighten them, sent word that all whites found there at sunset would be killed. This at once set the few men in the settlement at the work of throwing up an embankment of earth, and later of building a stockade, in which the few families passed a long dreary winter, enlivened by an occasional incident like that of the Irishman who, while on guard at night, supposing he saw Indians, fired his gun at the grindstone, and of course roused the camp. In the spring of 1872 Mr. Ward settled on a claim in Phillips County, and while here Mrs. Ward was the frontier white woman, farthest west of any in Kansas. In 1878 the family returned to Mitchell County, and in 1881 to Centralia. Mrs. Ward has been a widow nine years; she has three children, Russell W., J. N. and Cora B., the second child born in Phillips County. Mrs. Ward relates that her eldest daughter once drove off a buffalo that came to their home in Phillips County and was "too neighborly."

ONEIDA.

This thriving village, located on the St. Joseph & Western Railroad, six miles east of Seneca, and thirteen west of Sabetha, is due directly to the efforts of one man, Col. Cyrus Shinn, who purchased about four hundred acres of land in the vicinity, in 1873, platting a large portion of it, and naming it as above, in July, 1878. Prior to this, however, and dating from 1872, a postoffice known as Oneida, was established in the farmhouse of Henry Kerns, then situated directly upon the site of the future town. In 1876, Colonel Shinn erected a store building upon his purchase, which he leased first to John Mitchell, and subsequently to J. O. Steinbaugh, who succeeded Kerns as post-master. The building is now occupied by W. H. Rockefeller. In May, 1878, Colonel Shinn gave an acre of land to George W. Buswell, who built, during the same year, the Oneida Cheese Factory, and immediately after the town was established, as such, he opened a land office and commenced the publication of the Oneida Real Estate Journal, while he traveled extensively during the season, through Illinois and Missouri, distributing handbills and lecturing upon the possibilities of Oneida, his discourse being entitled, "What I know about farming in the West," while his circular advertised five hundred city lots, free. It may be mentioned in this connection, that he has never sold a lot, depending, for his profits, upon the enhancement in value of his surrounding lands. During 1878 a blacksmith shop and harness store were built, and in 1879 the Lindell House, two stories in height, erected by Colonel Shinn, who immediately sold it to B. F. Chamberlain, its subsequent owners being J. N. Conger, J. M. Claypool and David Kautz. The streets of the embryo city are named for, and arranged upon, the same plan as the streets of Chicago. During 1881, two churches were built, the Randolph Street Christian Church, and the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian, the latter being used both by that sect and the Congregationalists. In the spring of the same year, the Lake Street Schoolhouse, two stories in height, 34x66 feet, was built, the district school being immediately graded into four departments. Opera Hall was also erected on Monroe street, the lower floor of the building, 24x60 feet in size, being used by J. H. Mayhew's furniture and hardware store, the proprietor of which succeeded Steinbaugh as postmaster. Hyde Park, comprising ten acres of densely timbered land, was opened in 1878, a refreshment building known as the Rialto, and a platform and pavillion, 40x40 feet in extent, being constructed in connection therewith.

The Oneida Real Estate Journal was founded by Colonel Shinn in 1878, was sold to J. F. Clough, of the Nemaha County Republican, in October, 1879, the new owner giving it the name, Oneida Journal. It suspended publication in May, 1882,

The Oneida Cheese Factory is owned and managed by J. B. Elliott & Sons, comprising the Oneida Cheese Company. The building is two stories in height, 24x60 feet in size, and is fitted up with the most improved machinery, including two vats, boiler, curd cutters, improved presses, tube testers, etc. Its capacity is rendering ten thousand pounds of milk into one thousand pounds of cheese, each day. Its sales extend from St. Joseph to Denver, Colorado, and as far north as Nebraska City.

Oneida has never had a saloon, nor a drunken brawl within its limits. It now has two general stores, one hardware and furniture store, two drug stores, one hotel, one lumber yard, one livery stable, and various industrial shops, including one restaurant, the Delmonico. Its population is 163.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

J. O. BARNARD, farmer, P. O. Oneida, was born in 1834, in McLean County, Ill., where he spent forty-five years of his life, though during the Rebellion he served three years with the Ninety-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, nearly losing the use of an eye in consequence. He came to Kansas in 1879, and now owns eighty acres adjoining Oneida village, and 160 acres four miles north. He married, in McLean County, Ill., Anne Weekly, of Virginia. They have four children—W. H., J. M., Florence (Mrs. R. L. Wheeler), and Katie. The eldest son is married and settled on an Illinois farm. Mr. Barnard's parents, natives of Tennessee, and of Virginia and North Carolina ancestry, came from Tennessee to McLean County, Ill., in 1828.

HON. J. B. ELLIOTT was born in 1829, in Rush County, Ind., but spent thirty-three years of his life in White County, Ind. He then removed to Woodford County, Ill.; thence to Mankato, Minn,, and there, with his brother-in-law, Levi Scott, built the Red Jacket Mills, four miles southeast of town. His next settlement was in Otoe County, Neb., where he engaged in farming for about ten years, and represented his District one term of two years in the Legislature. In 1879 he came to Oneida, and in 1880 bought the Oneida Cheese Factory, now owned and managed by himself and four sons—Milo, Oris, Charles and Elmer. This is one of the best known, most popular and successful factories of the kind in the State. About 50,000 pounds of cheese will be made in 1882, and shipped as far west as Denver and Red Cliff, Col., and to Grand Island, Neb., to the north (see History of Oneida). Mrs. Elliott was Elizabeth Burnthrager, and she is the mother of eleven children. One son, Oris, died December 1, 1882.

W. C. HAMLIN, of Hamlin & Roberts, druggists, is a native of St. Joseph County, Mich., and came to Nemaha County, Kan., from Nodaway County, Mo., where he had been in mercantile business for several years. He began business at Oneida in 1879, firm of Hardy & Hamlin. This was dissolved, and the before-mentioned firm established in the fall of 1880. Mr. H. E. Roberts was born and reared in Nodaway County, Mo.

GEORGE W. HEAD, proprietor of the "Buckeye Livery Stable," is a native of the "Buckeye State," born in 1847, in Huron County. He was five years a butcher in Monroeville, and came to Nemaha County, Kan., in 1875; engaged in farming here until 1880, when he bought of Wm. Bell the present J. Conlin stable in Oneida. The Buckeye stable, a model of its kind, was built in 1882. It is 36x60 feet, and in it are half a dozen elegantly matched and lively teams, with "outfits" to correspond. Mr. Head has a 140-acre farm in Gilman Township, and is prosperous and popular. Has a wife and one child.

J. H. MAYHEW, merchant and postmaster, was born in 1856, in Perth County, Canada, where he was reared and educated. His parents and the family came to Centralia, Kan., in 1870, and soon after he struck out for himself by teaching school, and then going to St. Joseph, Mo., where he clerked in various mercantile houses and took a commercial school course. He began business in Oneida in April, 1880, with a stock of hardware, in a 16x24 foot building, and in June 1881, built his present commodious store, 25x60 feet, where he has a large and complete line of hardware and furniture of all kinds, also the village postoffice, he having received the appointment as postmaster in November, 1881.

COL. CYRUS SHINN, the founder and presiding genius of Oneida, was born in 1826, in West Virginia, and reared and educated in Knox County, Ill., his father, Sampson Shinn, having located in 1834 on a farm near Galesburg, where he still lives. During the war Cyrus Shinn succeeded Col. Baker as recruiting officer, and from this is derived the title by which he is known all over the West. For over ten years he was in the real estate business in Gilman, Ill., with a branch office in Chicago a portion of the time. It was his lively advertising that first boomed Iroquois County. In 1878 he came to Oneida, where he had owned 400 acres of land since 1873. At this time he owned 2,500 acres in Nemaha County, and from this time a better idea can be obtained from Col. Shinn by referring to a sketch of his pet town, Oneida, for says he: "I am bound to boom the town if I don't make a cent." The Colonel has given every person in Oneida a free lot, and will do the same by all who come to build and stay permanently, and not sell liquor on the same. He is jolly, loquacious, bright, and "on the make;" like all stirring, progressive men, occasionally gets on some one's toes, and of course has enemies; yet, when it comes to doing anything, from making a speech to building a schoolhouse, the Colonel is always in demand. Oneida has never had a saloon fight or case for assault and battery since its foundation. Gilman Township, in which Oneida is located, is the only township in the county that gave St. John a majority last fall.

CORNING.

What is now known as Old Corning, was situated one and one-half miles west of the present town of the same name. It was established as a Post-office in 1867, with Dr. N. B. McKay as postmaster, and named in honor of Erastus Corning, of New York. N. B. McKay at this time opened a general stock of merchandise, in a small frame building which he erected; and another store was soon after opened by W. H. Dixon, the two business houses, with one or two dwellings, being all there was of the place.

The present town of Corning is located on the Central Branch of the Union Pacific, about half way between Centralia and Wetmore. Its site was originally school land, bid in by Dr. N. B. McKay, who gave one-half section to the railroad in 1870, in consideration of its locating a station at that point. The first building was the store of Dr. N. B. McKay, removed from its former site; the second, a dwelling erected by J. S. Henry. Dr. McKay then built a small frame hotel, which he conducted for a year or two, since which time it has passed through various hands, its latest proprietor being T. J. Peters. In 1874 another store building, now occupied by M. T. Baker & Co., was erected by McKay, and during the few succeeding years, quite a number of dwelling houses and store buildings have been added to the settlement, the most of them being moved in from the surrounding farms and cross-roads.

The first religious exercises held in the new town, were conducted by Rev. J. S. Henry, a Baptist minister, who for a number of years preached the word of God to all sects; there being no attempt made by other denominations to institute services. No Baptist organization, however, was effected.

A Methodist Episcopal Society was organized in 1878, the schoolhouse being used as a place of worship. The original membership was twenty-six, the first minister, Rev. J. Biddison, who retained the pastorate, in connection with other duties, until 1880. In the fall of 1879, a frame church edifice was erected, at a cost of $700. Succeeding Rev. J. Biddison, Rev. J. A. Amos and Rev. C. Holman have successively assumed the pastoral relation. The membership in 1882 is about seventy, and the church is in a fairly prosperous condition.

A Presbyterian Society was instituted in 1878, through the efforts of Rev. J. Todd, who retains the incumbency he assumed. The congregation make occasional use of the Methodist building.

In 1872 a small district schoolhouse was built, replaced by a larger one, at an expense of $800, in the fall of 1878. The first teacher was Minnie Bracken, the present one, N. H. Walters, who instructs a daily average of sixty pupils.

The first postmaster was Dr. N. B. McKay, appointed in 1870; succeeding him, the position has been filled successively by Thomas McKay, H. W. Hazen, Edward C. Dennett, Jacob Stiger and G. H. Johnson, the last named being the present incumbent.

Corning, in 1882, has two general stores, two grocery stores, one hardware, and one drug store; one hotel, one lumber yard, and various minor business industries. Its population is about one hundred.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—ILLINOIS TOWNSHIP.

HENRY EARL, farmer, Section 26, P. O. Corning, was born in 1826, in York County, Canada. Removed to the State of Ohio in 1838, thence to Laporte County, Ind., thence in 1871 to Kansas; settled on his present farm in 1874, has made all the improvements and developed a pleasant home, commencing with a capital of only $2, when his family numbered ten persons. Mr. Earl has now a grove of about 500 cotton-wood trees and an orchard of seventy-five young apple trees, his farms fenced and paid for and the foundations laid for a prosperous future.

ISAAC FOSTER, farmer, Section 7, P. O. Centralia, was born in 1833, in Ashtabula County, Ohio, and reared there a farmer. He left for the West in 1852, settling in Keokuk County, Iowa. In a year or two he removed to Warren County, Ill., where he engaged in farming for about eighteen years. Beginning life the son of a poor man he had every dollar to earn, and has no mean record to show as a financier, as we now find him on a well improved farm of his own. He came to Kansas in 1868, and not having means to buy, rented a farm (meanwhile taking a homestead which is still his) and finally bought the one on which he now lives. Not a bad showing for a man who began as a farm laborer at low monthly wages thirty years ago. Mr. Foster married in Warren County, Ill., Sarah E. Shaw, and they have eight children: William, George and Milton born in Illinois, Rose A., Calvin, Cyrus, Egar and Alice, born in Kansas.

E. S. GIBSON, farmer, P. O. Centralia, was born in 1824, in Allegheny County, Pa., and grew to manhood there. In February, 1864, he enlisted in Hampton's Artillery and served in Virginia until the end of the Civil War of 1861-65. He then returned to Pennsylvania and lived there until 1879, when he settled on his present farm. He built a large and tasteful farmhouse that year, and has since made other permanent improvements, changing the bare prairie to an attractive home. Mrs. Gibson was Mrs. Lucy A. (Ottman) Sams, widow of Josiah Sams, a gallant Kansas soldier who died at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., during the Rebellion. He left two children, Addie and Josiah, by a now deceased wife (Rachael Ritchie). Mr. Gibson has six children—Mary A., Keziah E., Eliza, Andrew and John, all now in Pennsylvania.

EDWIN HOLTSLANDER, farmer, Section 13, P. O. Centralia, was born in 1830, in Orange County, N. Y. Lived in Fishkill, N. Y., until he was nineteen, then took employment on a Hudson River steamer and ran five years. He then married and removed to New York City, entered the transportation business with the Hartford and New Haven Steamship Company, and it was thus he was engaged at the outbreak of the Civil War, when he was appointed as Superintendent of Shipment for New York City. During the entire war he had charge of the outside work and charge of everything that went to the front as army supplies. In 1866 he was commissioned as captain and placed in charge of the Government property on David's Island, and although not a book or a figure held him accountable for the thousands of dollars' worth of valuable movable property there, yet bearing in mind the Divine injunction, "Thou shalt not steal," he came out of the office with clean hands and comparatively little money, and the Kansas fever. This was in 1870, and though he has seen many discouragements in Kansas, and seen much of actual poverty, yet he has now a valuable and well-improved farm, a fruitful orchard and all the comforts and conveniences of the Kansas farmer of 1882. He and his wife are leading members of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he is superintendent of the Sabbath-School, steward, class-leader and Trustee. Mrs. Holtslander was Mary Emma Cary; she was born, reared and married in Dutchess County, N. Y. They have six children—William H., Idella, Edwin G., Eugene C., Nettie S., and Charles A. The eldest was born in Dutchess County, Idella and Edwin G. in New York City, and the others in Kansas.

FRANK A. HURLBURT, farmer, Section 3, P. O. Centralia, was born in 1843, in Lorain County, Ohio, and removed in 1853 to La Salle County, Ill., where he took his first lessons as a threshermen, a vocation he has followed for over twenty years. During the Civil War his proffered enlistment in an Illinois regiment was refused on ground of his youth. In October, 1873, he came to Kansas with his family, two wagons and eight horses, settling where he now lives. He now has 240 acres of land, a good frame house and stock-yard, stabling, etc., and still runs his "Vibrator." Mrs. Hurlburt was Agnes M. McCannon, of New York, and they have six children—Frank, Charles, William, George, Harry and Wayne. The two youngest born in Kansas.

JACOB JACOBIA, stockdealer, was born in Ghent, Columbia County, N. Y., June 9, 1818. He is of German descent, his parents however being New Yorkers. The family removed to Racine County, Wis., in 1843, where he remained until 1857, when he settled in America City, Kansas. He was mail carrier for eight years from America City to Louisville, Atchison and Leavenworth, and later crossed the plains with a small train of his own bound for Denver. Mr. Jacobia says one of the greatest sights he ever saw on the plains, was an expanse of country, thirty miles long, covered with wild buffaloes standing like a forest and so densely crowded that you could not see the ground. In all he crossed the plains eighteen times, and was attacked by Indians, they on one occasion corralling 104 men, fifty teams, and 300 head of cattle near Alkali Station, and holding them there until his men, led by Jacobia as captain, finally drove them off with some hurt. The other encounter was in 1864, at Sand Hills, and all in all, few men have seen more of Indian life and their barbarities, than has our subject. Mr. Jacobia considered America City his home until 1874, when he bought the Corning Hotel and settled here. He ran the hotel four years, and rented it and built his pretty home in the village, and has since engaged in speculations in grain and lots. His wife was Jane E. New, of his native town, married June 11, 1839. They have three children living—Josephus, a Kansas farmer, Martha (Mrs. Theodore Eddy, of Pottawatomie County), and William Jacobia, now eighteen years old, an engineer on the C. B. U. P. R. R. Mr. Jacobia is a Democrat and served several years as Justice of the Peace, and was a member with his wife of the Corning Methodist Episcopal Church.

Johnson came to Kansas and began his present business in 1880, and with the various lines carried on by him, is looked upon as one of the live and stirring young business men of Nemaha County. His wife was Ida M. Andrews, of Delaware County, N. Y., and their only son, Herbert S., was born in Washington, D. C. Mr. Johnson and wife are Methodists, and he a Republican.

His house built in 1861 of lumber hauled from Atchison is still a good home. Mrs. Kilmer was Elenor Gillette, of Genesee County, N. Y. James and Albert, their two eldest children, are dead, while Stephen, Martha, George and Alma survive. Mr. and Mrs. Kilmer belong to the "Church of God," of which Mr. Kilmer is a deacon. He served with his regiment in the Army of the Cumberland in and about Nashville, Tenn., taking part in the decisive battle before that city in which the gallant old Gen. Thomas so ruined the hopes of the heroic Hood and his army. In August, 1865, he settled in Missouri, living in Nodaway and Gentry Counties until March, 1871, when he removed his family to Pittsburg, Mitchell County, Kas., his being the second family to settle in that township. His pioneer experiences here are well remembered, especially the buffalo shooting from his own door. In August, 1880, he settled in Illinois Township, where he now is. Mrs. Mackley was Mary A. In 1860 Mr. Roots returned to Illinois and enlisted in the Thirty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Fought at Pea Ridge, Corinth, Perryville, Chickamauga, Peach Tree Creek, and with Sherman to Atlanta. His regiment then turned north with gallant old Thomas, and at the battle of Nashville was nearly annihilated, losing every officer, commissioned and non-commissioned. Mr. Roots coming out from under the war-cloud unscathed, returned to his Kansas farm, and in 1866 married Miss Emma Ensign, of Centralia. They have five children. Mr. Roots now has 210 acres, a fine farm naturally, and made valuable by his labor and care. Upon this he has two houses, a fine orchard, hedges, etc. His father, who settled on Illinois Creek in the fall of 1856, is still there, hale and hearty. His wife, formerly Anna Durrant, and himself, celebrated their Golden Wedding in 1880, the event calling together a large turn-out of the oldest and most respected families in the county. Mr. Sams took the farm management at once in his hands at the close of the war, and has made it valuable and productive. He married Nancy Kilmer, of New York, by whom he had ten children—the eldest, Josiah, a volunteer in the Kansas Eighth, died in Leavenworth, leaving a wife and two children; Priscilla Sams married David Hall, a Union soldier, who died at Nashville; Francis Sams died when nine years of age; Ella married Mr. Coats, and lives in Ohio; while Hannah, Mrs. George Carver, lives in Marshall County, Kan.; James P., Robert, Albert, C. His education, attained in Nemaha County, included among other branches a thorough training in vocal music, for which he had a natural aptitude, and for the past three winters he has successfully taught a number of classes in this pleasing and useful accomplishment. Mr. Sams has a cosy home about two miles east of Centralia. His wife was Miss Julia Chadwick, daughter of an early settler of Harrison Township, and a native of Clinton County, Pa.

JAMES P. SAMS, farmer, Section 4, P. O. Centralia, born in 1848, in Steuben County, Ind. He accompanied his father, A. M. Sams, to Kansas, in 1860, locating in Nemaha County in 1862. He has 200 acres, a good two-story farm-house, a barn, stock-yards, etc. He married in 1870 Minnie Van Loon, of Leeds County, Canada. They have three children—Josephine, James F. and Louis V. His and his regiment's service was under Rosecrans, the Chattanooga campaign, Sherman on the Atlanta, and Thomas on the Nashville campaigns, and in Texas, where he secured his discharge in 1866. On his return to Kansas, he clerked two years in Seneca for Bolivar Schofield, and then in the spring of 1868 he settled on his farm, and has since resided there. His farm is a valuable one, and has been made attractive by his taste and skill in horticulture, of which he has made a specialty. His orchard comprises 300 trees, and his showing of grapes and small fruits is varied and excellent. He is a Republican, and a member, with his wife, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Stickney was Mary J. Bostian, a native of Tennessee, and their seven children were born in Kansas.

Schoonmacher, who was born in Ulster County, N. Y., and they have six children. Mr. and Mrs. Townsend are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

E. S. VERNON, farmer, Section 33, P. O. Corning, is a native of Muskingum County, Ohio, where he was reared. In December 1861, he enlisted in the Seventy-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. His first introduction to the rebels was at Fort Donelson, thence to Shiloh, siege of Corinth, Bolivar, Iuka, Raymond, Champion Hills, and the siege of Vicksburg; helping to undermine Fort Hill. After the surrender of Vicksburg, he was engaged in several raids into Louisiana and Mississippi; took part in Meridian raid, after which the regiment went home on veteran furlough of thirty days; joined General Sherman at Big Shanty, Ga ; then taking part in the battle of Bushy Mountain, Kenesaw, Nickajack, Atlanta, July 21, 22, and 28; Jonesborough and Lovejoy. After the capture of Atlanta, the regiment went North with General Sherman, after Hood, to near Tennessee, but soon returned to Atlanta, and participated in Sherman's march to Savannah; thence by steamer to Beaufort, S. C., helping capture Pocataligo, by crossing the Coosa River, in skiffs in the night. Sergeant Vernon was then detailed as Sergeant of a forage squad of thirty men, and in that capacity made frequent raids, sometimes twenty miles from the main army, in search of supplies for the regiment. At the Edisto River, this forage squad took an important part in the capture of the town of Orangeburg. When the army arrived at Fayetteville, N. C., Sergeant Vernon was placed in command of a provost guard of twenty men at brigade headquarters; was at the battle of Bentonville; from thence went to Goldsborough, Raleigh, Petersburg and Richmond, and after participating in the final grand review at Washington, in 1865, he went to Louisville, Ky., where he was mustered out. He again sought the walks of private life, and in 1869 brought his family to Kansas. Mr. Vernon has 240 acres of well-fenced and improved land, his farm house being surrounded by a fine grove and orchard, where twelve years ago was a bare prairie. S. K. WARRENBURG, farmer, Section 12, P. O. Centralia, was born in Fayette County, Ohio, 1850, and is a son of Frederic and Elizabeth Warrenburg, who removed, in 1854, to Indiana, and, in 1859 to Champaign County, Ill. S. K. Warrenburg came, in 1870, to Kansas and opened up the farm where his father now lives. His capital was about $500 and plenty of muscle and will-power; to-day we find him on a small but valuable farm, well-fenced and improved, with about $2,000 worth of fat cattle in his yards, besides eight head of horses and mules, and seventy-five head of "stockers." He married Adabelle Hondyshell, of Miami County, Ind., and they have two children—Ralph H. and Albert W., both born on the Kansas farm. He then fought with Sherman, from Rome to Atlanta, and was wounded August 15, 1864, in one of the desperate battles before Atlanta. His honorable discharge dates March 23, 1865, and he is now a pensioner. Since the war he has made various removals in Iowa, and for a time kept hotel in David City, Nebraska. Came to Kansas and Corning in 1881. Mrs. Warrington was Mrs. Jane Layton, formerly of Boston, and this lady is now manager and hostess of the Corning Hotel, the only one in the place.

A. D. WELLS, farmer, P. O. Centralia, was born December 18, 1832, in Susquehanna County, Pa., and is a son of William R. and Betsy Wells, now residents of Seneca. He settled in Illinois about 1848, and came to Kansas in June, 1857. A young man, alone in life, he took a claim on Hickey Creek, improved it, and disposing of it, removed to Lincoln, then a contestant with Seneca for county-seat honors. After taking an interested part in the contest, and seeing the downfall of his town imminent, he settled on his present well-improved 200-acre farm. He owns besides, twenty acres of timber, and has his orchard, hedges, etc. He has been twice married, the deceased wife being Lucinda Dennis, the present one, formerly, Mrs Catherine M. Sherman. They have five children. Mr. and Mrs. Wells are Methodists, and he is a Republican.

GRANADA.

The first settlement in the vicinity of Granada, located in the township of the same name, was effected by D. M. Locknane, who arrived in 1855, and was shortly followed by Messrs. Chappel, Pilant, Haigh, Searles, Vilott, Spencer, Anderson, Terrill, Wright, Letson, Knapp, Nevil, Swerdferger, O'Brien, Riley, Duwalt, Brown and Steer. A store building was erected by Manoah H. Terrill in 1856, and at the beginning of the war Granada was a thriving little town, situated on the old freight route to Denver. Its existence ended, practically speaking, with the advent of the railroads, both north and south of it. It has now a post-office, kept in connection with a general store, one hardware and drug store and a blacksmith shop.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.—GRANADA TOWNSHIP.

JOHN ACHTEN, farmer, P. O. Granada, was born in 1827, in Rhenish Prussia, educated there, and served three years in the German Army, Prince William (afterward King, and now Emperor William) commanding at his last review. He came to America in 1852, located in Ohio, thence went to Illinois, and thence, in 1857, came to Kansas, making a claim on Section 13, Township 3, Range 14. This claim he improved, breaking up land built, fenced, etc.; and in 1867, changed to his present location. Mr. Achten now has 320 acres in his home farm, all hedge fenced and rail fenced, and 170 acres of which are in cultivation. He has, besides, 220 acres for pasturage, fenced with wire—not a bad showing for one who began without a dollar, only twenty-five years ago. He married September 17, 1857, in Paris, Ill., Annie Press, also of "Rhine Prussia," who came, in 1841, to the United States, settling in Wisconsin. They have seven children—Frank, Fred, George, Lizzie, Mary, Rene and Dollie—all born in Capioma and Granada, Kan.

JAMES BARNES, farmer, Section 20, P. O. Wetmore, is a son of James Barnes, Sr., who brought his wife and eleven children to Kansas in 1857, and settled the next year in Granada, where the father died in 1878 and the mother in 1875. James and Wesley Barnes settled on their respective farms in Granada Township in 1857. James Barnes enlisted in 1862, in the Eighth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and served with that gallant regiment throughout the entire Rebellion; was seriously wounded in the hip in the battle of Chickamauga; has five bullet marks on his person—one received in the battle before Atlanta; and is a United States pensioner. He took part with his regiment in over twenty pitched battles, and was discharged at Huntsville, Ala., in 1865. He has since been a permanent and prosperous settler of Kansas. Has a good farm, well-stocked, and a new frame house. His wife was Ellen Walters, of Andrew County, Mo., and their six children were all born on the Granada farm. The Barnes' family are of English ancestry, and were among the founders of the city of Baltimore, where James Barnes, Sr., was born. He removed to Guernsey County, Ohio, where his large family of eleven children were born; seven of the brothers being now residents of Granada. A singular coincidence will be noted in the fact, that James Barnes, Sr., was born March 10, 1812, his son, the subject of this sketch, was born March 10, 1841, and his grandson, Joseph (son of James Barnes), was born March 10, 1867.

DAVID BRONSON, farmer, P. O. Granada, was born in 1836, in Danbury, Conn. At the age of seventeen, he removed to Carbondale, Pa., with his parents, and from there to Aurora, Ill., where he worked as carpenter. In September 1861, he enlisted in Company H, of the Fifty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Served in Missouri during the Price raid and returned into Kentucky, his being the regiment that mutinied on account of the poor old Belgian rifles furnished, and destroyed them. Col. Thomas Sweeny, of Fenian fame, was their leader during the remainder of the Rebellion. The regiment fought at Fort Donelson, Pittsburg Landing and Shiloh, where Private Bronson was struck with a piece of shell, and immediately after by two balls, the three wounds, however, confining him but a few days, as he was present at the Corinth affair, an imprudence that cost him many a weary month in the hospital thereafter. Upon his recovery, he again enlisted in Company K, of the One Hundred and Forty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was on detached service in his own

State during the remainder of the war, coming out with a commission as Second Lieutenant. He married in 1867, in Champaign, Ill., Martha Hodgdon, born in Williston, Chittenden County, Vt.; lived two years in Kane County, Ill., and then settled in Powhattan, Brown Co., Kan., lived there three years, then returned to Aurora, Ill., where he was employed as yardman, by the C., B. & Q. R. R. Co. In 1875, he again settled in Kansas, coming this time in connection with an agency for fence barbs; sold all his Illinois property, including a hotel in Bristol, and settled permanently as a Kansas farmer and stockman. Mr. and Mrs. Bronson have four childen—Julia E., George E. and U. S. Grant, born in Kane County, Ill., and Grace, born in Brown County, Kan. Mr. Bronson is a member of the G. A. R.

THEODORE CHIPMAN, farmer, P. O. Capioma, was born in Warren County, Pa. In 1860, his father, Giles Chipman, settled with his wife and a family of five children on a new prairie farm in Brown County, Kan. It was the "hard year," and the family saw many of the privations incident thereto. The lumber for their first real house was hauled in 1860 from Iowa Point. Both parents died in Brown County, near Hiawatha, and here Theodore Chipman has lived for twenty-three years. He began with raw prairie, and has developed a good farm and home. He married in 1879 Mrs. Janet Hamilton, a native of Ottawa, Canada. Mr. Chipman is a Free Mason. A brother, George Chipman, a volunteer in the Twenty-fifth Missouri Unionists, was killed by rebels at the battle of Pittsburg Landing, during the Rebellion of 1861-'65.

A. B. ELLIT, farmer, Section 20, P. O. Wetmore, was born in 1825, in La Rue County, Ky., and raised in that State as a farmer. On the outbreak of the Mexican War in 1846, he enlisted under Col. McKee in the Second Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and under Gen. Zach. Taylor fought at Monterey and Buena Vista; returned home in July, 1847, and farmed until the spring of 1849. Was married that year to Elizabeth Edwards. In the fall of 1849, moved to Missouri and engaged in farming until 1855, when he made and settled upon a claim near Mt. Pleasant, Atchison Co., Kan. In 1856, he brought out his family, and his father and brother settled near him. During 1856, a band of 600 Southerners destroyed all their fences and fed all their corn, and were about to appropriate the only remaining yoke of cattle left them, but were prevented by a Missouri captain, who drew a six-shooter and swore he would kill the first man who attempted to yoke them up. A rumor that Jim Lane and his Kansans were close at hand scattered the Southern banditti with ludicrous haste, some even leaving saddles and guns, telling Mr. Ellit to "give Lane thunder" if he came that way. In 1858, Mr. Ellit moved to near Huron, and there lived until his enlistment in 1861 in the Second Kansas Cavalry, with which he served until the spring of 1863. In 1862 was one of a company of forty that killed and routed Quantrell and his band on Blue River, in Missouri; out of thirty-three all were killed but seven. Mr. Ellit was Duty-sergeant, and managed one part of the fight. In the fall of 1863, he was with Gen. Blunt when Price drove him from Blue River bridge; remained with him till Price was whipped and driven out. In 1864, he freighted to Denver, Col., and in the fall of 1866, moved to Pettis County, Mo., and a few years later to his present farm in Granada Township. His first wife, Elizabeth Edwards, died in Pettis County, Mo. But three of her ten children survive her. The present Mrs. Ellit was Mrs. Watson. Her maiden name was Porter.

JOSEPH HAIGH, M. D., is the only son of Uriah and Isabel (Anderson) Haigh, pioneer settlers in Granada. They came there in 1857, from Washington County, Pa., where Joseph Haigh was born, October 22, 1851. He studied medicine with Dr. S. R. Anderson, a Virginian, and the first practitioner in Granada. Dr. Haigh is a graduate of the Northwestern Medical College, St. Joseph, Mo., and is now First Vice-President of its alumni. He is a Republican in politics and liberal in religion. Mrs Dr. Haigh was Miss Fannie J. Cooley, a native of Franklin County, Ind., and their two daughters, Bertha and Belle, were born in Granada. Three brothers of the Haighs came to Granada in 1857, James, Urias and Joseph, and all served in the Union Army during the Rebellion of 1861-'65, the youngest dying at Fort Smith, Ark., the second still residing in Granada, and the eldest in Republic County, Kan.

D. H. HARGIS, farmer, P. O. Goffs, was born in 1847, in Howard County, Mo., and reared in that State a farmer. In 1863, he and three brothers enlisted in Company A, Ninth Missouri Cavalry, and served through the guerrilla campaigns of that State. An older brother, William Hargis, was shot down in his father's yard by Bill Anderson, the bandit, who had previously robbed and burned the house solely because the family were known to be loyal. Another brother, Sergt. Thomas Hargis, was killed in a skirmish, and D. H. Hargis saw 180 men butchered and scalped by these white fiends in Missouri. In 1865, Mr. Hargis came to Kansas, locating in Troy, Doniphan County, and five years ago removed to Osborne County, took a homestead on Section 22, got a deed, then left it. His location in Kansas was followed by that of his father and five brothers. Mrs. Hargis was Mrs. S. J. Meers, born in Buchanan County, Mo. Their three children are—Leonard, Cora and Isaac N., all born in Doniphan County, Kan.

G. K. HATCH, farmer, P. O. Wetmore, was born in 1846, in Hamilton Township, Erie Co., Pa., where he was reared, and from which town he enlisted in September, 1864, in the One Hundred and Ninety-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. With his regiment he participated in the Bermuda Hundred affair, the siege of Petersburg, the assault on Fort Gregg, etc., and the pursuit and capture of Lee and his army. He came to Kansas in 1869, lived seven years here, then four years in Pennsylvania, and has finally settled again in Kansas, and intends making Nemaha County his future home. He is a member of the G. A. R., F. & A. M., the I. O. O. F., and the I. O. G. T., of Union City, Pa.. His wife was Miss Addie Hitchcock, of Erie County, Pa., and their two children are Roscoe C. and Elzie, the eldest born in Pennsylvania and the girl in Kansas.

SAMUEL R. HATCH, farmer, Section 18, P. O. Goffs, came with his wife to Kansas in 1870, from Erie County, Pa. He entered eighty acres of raw prairie and bought 160 more, and as a result of thirteen years of labor and care has it nearly all fenced, and seventy acres in cultivation; has a good-sized frame house, orchard, grove, etc. He was born in 1833, in Erie County, Pa., and married Abbie Pickett, of Schoharie County, N. Y. They have one son—Hardie E., born in Erie County, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Hatch belong to the Goffs Methodist Episcopal Church.

A. M. HOUGH, farmer and stockman, P. O. Granada. Mr. Hough was born in 1817, in Loudoun County, Va., and was reared there, the son of a farmer. In 1838, the family settled in Zanesville, Ohio, the father and sons engaging in the manufacture of windmills, which was carried on later in Springfield, Ill. A. M. Hough, a carpenter by trade, worked many years in this city, and it was he who framed the first window for the old State House. While here he made the acquaintance of honest Abe Lincoln and Mary Todd, then a "sparking couple." Mr. Hough came to Kansas with his wife and nine children in 1866, and bought 720 acres on the line of Brown and Nemaha counties, living in the former, in which he served six years as a Commissioner. So well did he manage his farm and stock operations, that each of his five sons is now settled and doing for himself—four of them farmers and one of them a lumber dealer. Mr. Hough was the first man to feed cattle on a large scale in the old Locknane Township, and fed in all ten years. Since 1880, he has lived in Granada, and devoted his entire attention to stock transactions instead of farming actively. Mrs Hough was Susan Kuhn, of Lancaster County, Pa., and their nine children are all well fixed around them.

JOHN A. WOODBURN, farmer, P. O. Wetmore, was born October 12, 1833, in Eaton, Preble Co., Ohio. In 1835, his parents, John and Elizabeth, settled in Randolph County, Ind., where he grew up on a farm. In 1855, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1860, he brought his family to Kansas and began life as a day laborer, living on a vacated claim on Elk Creek, and at the same time preaching as a supply, and has since resided as a farmer and preacher in Northern Kansas, much of the time in poor health, and making twenty removals with his family. In 1878, he located on his present farm in Granada. Mrs. Woodburn was Mary F Roberts, of Montgomery County, Ohio, married in 1855, in Deerfield, Ind. They have nine children living. Mr. Woodburn had but poor and limited educational facilities in youth, and his effective work in the church for the past sixteen years attests the fidelity with which he has studied.

CAPIOMA.

The town site of Capioma, situated in the township of the same name, was laid out in 1857, the plat being recorded July 9, 1859. It was named in honor of an Indian chief, and the first settlers in its immediate propinquity were William Barnes, James McCallister and Samuel Magill. A schoolhouse was built in 1857, and in 1859 a good hotel building was erected by Walter R. Gage. Some years later a store building was put up J. H. H. Ford. In 1866, a steam saw-mill was put in operation by John Walker, and at different times, two churches, Methodist and Congregational, have been erected. The settlement is now, just about where it was fifteen years ago, having one store, a hotel and a blacksmith shop.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—CAPIOMA TOWNSHIP.

JOSHUA BUSHNELL, farmer, Section 14, P. O. Capioma, was born December 25, 1825, in Oswego, New York, and is of York State ancestry, as both parents were born in Oneida County. Mr. Bushnell removed West in 1851, settling in Henry County, Ill., and lived there seventeen years, twelve years as a farmer and five years as proprietor of the Cambridge House at Cambridge, the county-seat of Henry County. He came to Kansas in 1869 and settled where he now resides, paying $825 for a quarter section on which was a one-story adobe house in which his family lived for a few years. Beginning thus Mr. Bushnell rapidly increased his operations and became a large land owner and stock-raiser, owning at one time 800 acres of land. To-day we find him nicely situated, his farmhouse being one of the best in Capioma Township, a roomy and substantial stone house with a basement well fitted for culinary purposes and the two stories surmounted by a mansard roof. His outbuildings correspond; a circular barn, thirty-six feet in diameter, granaries, corn cribs, tool house, etc. While Mr. Bushnell has never been an active politician, he has been chosen a delegate to nearly every State and Congressional Convention held during the past ten years. He is a Republican. His first wife, Sarah C. Wilson, whom he married November 15, 1849, in Camden, N. Y., died September 11, 1858, in her home in Camden and is buried there; she left two children, both since deceased. The present Mrs. Bushnell was Barbara J. Seneley, of Brown County, Ohio, married February 2, 1859, in Henry County, Ill. Their children are Barbara, Jane and Lensby.

G. W. CONRAD, farmer, P. O. Capioma, is a native of Williamstown, Oswego County, N. Y., born in 1840. Is of German and American ancestry, his mother being a native of New York State. Mr. Conrad left his native place at the age of sixteen, and settled in Henry County, Ill., removing five years later to Jasper County, Iowa, where in 1862 he enlisted in the Twenty-Eighth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, fought with Gen. Grant at Belmont, Helena, Jackson, Black River, Champion Hills, and through the siege of Vicksburg, and then went with Gen. Banks on the ill starred Red River Expedition, fighting at Pleasant Hill, Sabine Cross Roads, St. De Russy, etc. His regiment was then sent by water to Alexandria, Va., and fought under Gen. Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley, Opequan, and Winchester, where Mr. Conrad well remembers Sheridan's immortal ride, and hearing the gallant little Irishman shout, "We will drink coffee in the rebel camp to-night," which promise was, as all know, made good. During this battle Mr. Conrad received a singular wound, a three-inch ball striking and destroying his blanket roll and knapsack, and coming so close to his shoulder as to break a blood vessel and raise a "welt" bunch perfectly discernible to this day. After some final service on the track of Sherman's grand march in Georgia and the Carolinas, at guard and provost duty, Mr. Conrad and the heroic and honored Twenty-eighth were discharged in July, 1865. In 1869 he brought his family to Kansas, settling on the 320-acre farm in Capioma, where we now find him. Here he has first-class improvements and buildings, and has become one of the substantial and respected farmers, having served as a Republican three years as Trustee of Capioma, and one term as County Commissioner. His wife was Lurana M Rawson, of Worcester, Mass., and they have six children—Clara, George, Isabel, Eunice, Burton and Millie.

WALTER R. GAGE, deceased, late of Capioma, was born in 1818, in Pennsylvania, and grew up there as a farmer. He married in Erie County, Pa., Lavinia Ostrand, who was born in Barcelona, N. Y. They lived eight years in Gowanda, N. Y., and seven in Marcellon, Wis. Came to Capioma in 1856, lived there three years on a new farm or claim south of the village, and in 1859 built in Capioma the Gage House, which Mr. Gage ran as a hotel until his death, in August, 1869. He was a Republican, and served as postmaster, Notary Public, and Justice of the Peace many years. He left eight children—C. S., Adella, H. C., W. R. Burton (since deceased), William, Minnie S., Effie. Arabella Gage died in April, 1860. In 1876 the hotel and contents burned down, a total loss, and on the site Mrs. Gage has erected a pleasant cottage home in which to spend her declining years.

HUGH R. MAGILL, farmer, P. O. Capioma, was born in Clay County, Mo. He was early left an orphan, and was reared by Caleb Magill, an uncle. In 1849 he settled with a brother, William B., in Platte County, Mo., where he remained until 1854, when he took a claim near Kinnekuk, helping to survey the Kickapoo Reservation while there. In 856 he came to Capioma, making a claim on Sections 10 and 11, which he sold to D. P. Magill. Has resided on his present farm about twelve years. Is a Republican and was Judge of Elections (Free-State) when his townsmen first voted on the Lecompton Constitution, for which only two votes were cast in that town.

SAMUEL MAGILL, farmer, P. O. Capioma, is a son of D. P. Magill, a Kentuckian and pioneer of the Platte purchase. Samuel Magill was born in Platte County, Mo., grew up there, and in February, 1854, with David Locknane, made a visit to what is now Granada—each selecting land and building log houses, the first in that town. Messrs. Robert Ray and Magill came out for permanent settlement in October, 1855, Mr. Magill claiming 160 acres, now the site of Woodlawn, which he sold the next year to H. L. Alkier. He then settled where he now is, and began work in earnest, this work resulting in the fine 320-acre farm and home he owns to-day, though he began in a shanty fourteen feet square, with scarcely a dollar in the world. Mr. Magill is a Democrat in politics, and though not a politician, is known as one of the most successful farmers and fruit growers of his county, his orchard and vineyard being among the first planted and the most productive in this region. He has a tasteful and commodious home, environed by a grove and orchard, strongly reminding one of down East, the effect being heightened by his barn, sheds and the timber skirting Walnut creek which crosses his farm. He married in 1858 Miss Uree J. Hooper, and they have eight living children.

L. D. TATMAN, farmer, P. O. Woodlawn, was born in 1842, in Ohio. Eight years later, his parents, William and Lydia Tatman, settled in Adams County, Ill. S. D. Tatman, after a varied experience in Illinois, Texas, and Colorado, finally settled on a farm in Walnut Township, Brown County, Kas., improved it, and selling, settled on his present farm in 1876. Here he has rebuilt the house and erected a barn forty feet square, planted grove, orchard, etc. He married Miss Nancy Eldredge, of Henry County, Ill., a daughter of John and Sarah (Roberts) Eldredge. They left Henry County in December, 1854, and pushed out on the frontiers as far as Ash Point, Nemaha County, Kas., Mr. Eldredge making the usual claim, building a cabin, and commencing pioneer life. During the winter he had occasion to visit Iowa Point, on the Missouri River, and, being caught in a violent and long-continued "blizzard," was kept there four weeks, his wife and two daughters meanwhile believing him dead. They were compelled to cut their own wood, care for the stock, and do all the rough out-of-door work during this weary month, freezing hands and feet and suffering much from fears of Indians, and grief and loneliness. During the "scare" of 1855, Mr. Eldredge removed his family to Missouri, but satisfied that it was a speculative hoax, returned. The family settled in Brown County, Kas., in 1856, and here Mr. Eldredge died in April, 1878, his widow and daughters surviving him. He was a native of New York, and Mrs. Eldredge of Pennsylvania. She recalls numerous anecdotes and incidents of early times in Kansas and Illinois, and is a perfect type of the healthy and fearless pioneer woman of thirty years ago.

BAILEYVILLE.

In 1880, N. Bailey, a substantial farmer in Clear Creek Township, laid out a town on the Union Pacific Railroad (Kansas Division) seven miles west of Seneca. A post-office was established with G. M. Rasp as postmaster, and a large hay press and sheds erected by S. H. Rice & Co., of St. Joseph, which firm also established a store for the benefit of their employes and others. In the spring of 1882, S. H. Rice & Co. sold their hay-pressing machinery to Bailey Brothers, together with two sections of hay lands, which they owned. The store was transferred to Bay & McQuinch, who still run it. Prior to this time a siding had been put in and a station built by the railroad company. The post-office passed from G. M. Rasp to Bert E. Rice, and finally to James Tennant, the present incumbent.

OTHER TOWNS.

Neuchatel.—This is the name given to a post-office in Neuchatel Township, established early in the history of the county. The settlers in the immediate vicinity are French and Swiss. In 1870, Jules Leroux commenced the publication in this township of the Star of Kansas, an eight page monthly, printed in the French language and devoted to Communism. In May, 1876, he removed to Fremont County, Iowa, taking his establishment with him. There is no village of the name.

Goffs.—A railroad station of this name, the title being a compliment to Edward H. Goff, of the Union Pacific Railroad, is situated on the Central Branch, a few miles northwest of Wetmore. It is a railroad town, laid out in 1880, and contains a hotel and store, occupying one building, the property of Abbott Brothers.

Woodlawn.—During the summer of 1881, W. L. Challis selecting a fine, natural site, in Capioma Township, erected a four-story mill with stone basement, in which he placed an engine of one hundred horse-power, and four sets of burrs. This mill, placed in the charge of J. W. Burt as manager, at once became so far popular as to constitute a nucleus around which a little settlement formed, given by the proprietors the name of Woodlawn. A store building was erected, in which was placed a stock of general merchandise, by W. N. Taylor. A private post-office was established early in 1881, converted to a government office, with Paul Challis as postmaster in 1882. A drug store was opened by Dr. J. B. West, and a hotel of nine rooms thrown open to the traveling public, by Albert Yost. The second floor of Taylor's Store Building is fitted up as a public auditorium, known as Woodlawn Hall. Situated as it is, about an equal distance from Wetmore and from Sabetha, and too far from either to interfere with the moderate growth which it asks, Woodlawn has, undoubtedly, unlike so many of its neighbors, a permanent lease of life.

American City is a post-office, situated in Red Vermillion Township. An act, incorporating a town of this name, comprising 380 acres of land, was approved by the Territorial Legislature, February 14, 1857. A store was opened, and in 1861 a Methodist church building erected. Dr. N. B. McKay is the present postmaster.

Dorcas and Clear Creek, are post-offices only, located in farmhouses, the former in Capioma, the latter in Clear Creek Township.

Sother is not a post-office, but is accorded notice as having been for a time the terminus of the C. B. U. P. Railroad. A section house was built, and a store opened by J. R. Pickett. It was named for Hon. Thomas Sother, and is about four miles northwest of Wetmore.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—HARRISON TOWNSHIP.

E. C. CHILSON, farmer, Section 7, P. O Seneca, is a son of Alfred Chilson, was born in 1840, in Geauga County, Ohio; enlisted in 1861 in the Nineteenth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and later in the Chicago Mercantile Battery; was in the department of the Gulf, and fought at Sabine Cross-roads. Went with Gen Banks to Texas, and took part in the Pascagoula raid. On his return from the field, he located with his father and brother in Harrison Township. His school was at the old Geauga Seminary, made famous by the associations of the martyred Garfield; and, with strong religious convictions, he began preaching as a licentiate in 1866; continued for a number of years in Kansas, his theological studies resulting in a serious mental affection, which forced his retirement. He is now living quietly and happily on his Harrison farm. Mrs. Chilson was Caroline Fortney, of Virginia, and a settler of 1860 in Kansas.

W. W. GROVES, farmer, Section 22, P. O. Goffs, was born in 1833, in New Lyme, Ashtabula County, Ohio, and married Josie Chandler, of Orwell, Ohio, in March, 1854. They then removed to Louisa County, Iowa, and after a few years' residence in that State, returned to Ohio, and from there to Goodhue County, Minn. The ill health of Mrs. Groves caused their settlement in Kansas in the fall of 1869. Mr. Groves has done good work here, transforming a raw prairie farm into a tillable and productive one. Built a good farmhouse and planted a grove of forest timber, also an orchard of 250 apple and 300 peach trees. He is a carpenter by trade, and has always followed it. Mr. and Mrs. Groves have four children—W. J. Groves, Theresa and Terissa, twins, and Mary A. Samuel Groves died at the age of fourteen, and another pair of twins died in Ringgold County, Iowa. Mrs. and Miss Groves are Methodists, and Mr. Groves is a Baptist.

LEWIS LOGAN, farmer and stock-breeder, P. O. Goffs, is a native of Kings County, Ireland, born in 1838. His parents emigrated to this country in 1846, and settled in Johnson County, Iowa. Lewis Logan grew up here, and in August, 1862, enlisted in the Twenty-second Iowa Volunteer Infantry. His was the first brigade on the east side of the Mississippi, and the first to open battle at Port Gibson; also did brave service at Champion Hills, Black River bridge, and the siege of Vicksburg. It was then sent to Texas to meet Gen. Banks, then supposedly on his way up Red River. After Banks' failure, the Twenty-second joined the army of the Potomac, and fought under Butler and Phil. Sheridan. Joined Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, from there went to Georgia, and from there to Morehead City, North Carolina, where the brigade did fatigue duty, and from there to Augusta, South Carolina. The company then went to Atheins, Capt. A. B. Cree commanding, and established a provost marshal's office. After the discharge of the regiment in 1865, he returned to Iowa, and in 1874 settled in Norton County, Kan., and opened a stock ranch. Dearth of rain and rapid settlement caused his removal to his present farm, which he bought of Peter Mackey. In 1879 the range for stock was almost entirely open from Corning to Wetmore, and with 200 head of cattle and a herd of horses, he rapidly developed a large stock business. He now has 36· acres of land, a fine residence, and all needed improvements and appliances. It is his intention to breed mules quite extensively hereafter. His registered jack, Prince Albert, was bred by George Jenkins, of Savannah, Mo., and he has a number of very fine brood animals. Few men have more reason to look back with satisfaction upon the past than Lewis Logan, of Harrison. Mrs. Logan was Miss Frances Brenneman, of Lancaster County, Pa., and they have a fine family of seven active, intelligent boys—John E., Lewis, Charles M., Walter S., Fred L., William O. and Elmer E. Mr. Logan is a member, and is chaplain of Wetmore Lodge, A. F. & A. M.

PETER MACKEY, farmer, P. O. Goffs, was born May 4, 1822, in Manchester, England, and came with his parents to the United States in 1831. They located in Patterson, N. J., and in that State he learned the blacksmith's trade. He worked seven years as a machinist, and one year for the Government at Nashville, Tenn., during the war. In 1868 he came to Kansas and settled in Harrison. He began on a "raw" quarter section, broke it, planted an orchard, etc., and then sold it and settled where he now is. His farm here is a good one, located on Rose Creek, and he is continuing his work as an improver. Mrs. Mackey was Levina Walts, of Brownsville, N. Y., and they have had four children—William, Peter, Anne, and Catherine, who died the wife of C. H. Lane and left two children. Mr. and Mrs. Mackey belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church of Goffs.

A. J. MORGAN, farmer, Section 6, P. O. Seneca. Mr. Morgan was born in 1839, in Venango County, Pa.; removed to Indiana in 1858, and in June, 1861, enlisted in the Fourteenth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, it being one of the first on the field, and taking part at Rich Mountain, Cheat Mountain, Greenbriar, and the first Shenandoah campaign. Early in 1863, Mr. Morgan was assigned to the Sixth United States Regular Cavalry, and as one of that regiment he fought at Fredericksburg, Beverly Ford, etc., and harassed Lee's invasion of the North. He narrowly missed capture at Gettysburg, and a few days later was taken prisoner, held three months, and paroled, this of course ending his service. Locating again in Indiana, he married Mrs. S. J. Sappington, and came West. He has 240 acres all under fence, and in a good state of culture. Is a member, with his wife, of the Christian Church, of Harrison. There are three children—Luella and J. P. Sappington, and John E. Morgan.

J. F. RANDEL, farmer, Section 7, P. O. Corning, was born in 1838, in Decatur County, Ind. In 1846, his father, Garrett Randel, removed the family to Schuyler County, Ill., and in 1853 to Marion County, Iowa. The Randel Colony, in Red Vermillion, Nemaha County, Kan., was founded in 1856, by the settlement of Garrett, Harvey and G. W. Randel, with their families and those of eleven others, only four or five of the heads of the families being now alive. The removal of the said colony was an interesting event, as the train comprised seventeen ox-teams, three horse-teams, fifty yoke of work oxen, twenty-seven head of horses, and 252 head of cattle. J. F. Randel resided as a quiet farmer colonist until early in 1864, when he enlisted in the Twenty-second Kansas, and served six months. Mr. Randel married Melinda Thompson, September 6, 1857, and a noteworthy fact is that of their having seven children, four of whom were married under the same roof that sheltered the nuptials of their parents, Mr. Randel having purchased the estate of his father-in-law, John Thompson, who settled among the colonists in 1857. Another historical fact is that G. W. Randel, son of Garrett Randel, and Miss Lydia White, were the first couple married in Nemaha County, the date of the event being May 18, 1857, and the result, seven lively, healthy children.

CHARLES W. ROMINE, farmer, Section 7, P. O. Corning, was born in 1830, in Jackson County, Ohio, and is an early Kansas settler. His parents removed in 1839 to Champaign County, Ill., returning to Ohio in 1846. C. W. Romine lived in Champaign, McLean, De Witt and Hamilton Counties, Ill., and came to Kansas with his family in 1857. He bought the claim which comprises his present fine farm of C. M. Allison, who had built a log-house and made slight improvements. This house burned down with contents in 1863, entailing of course a severe loss upon Mr. Romine. Upon the ashes, however, he built his present frame-house, and by good management and hard work has secured a valuable 200-acre farm and good home. His wife was Catherine Young, of De Witt County, Ill., and they have three living children—Joseph, Nancy and Henry H. James Romine died June 8, 1875, in Republic County, Kan. Mr. and Mrs. Romine are members of the Missionary Baptist Church.

A. C. ROSEL, farmer, Section 10, P. O. Goffs, born in 1837, in Greensburg, Ind. He accompanied his father, Wesley Rosel, to Keokuk County, Iowa, in 1849; he then, in 1856, removed to Marshall County, Kan., went to Denver in 1860, and during the Civil War was part of the time in Fort Larned, and part of the time in Iowa. He has lived in Brown, Doniphan and Jefferson Counties, and settled on his present farm in 1868. Has eighty acres in good state of cultivation, a good and substantial farmhouse, a grove of 500 trees, an orchard, etc. In 1875 he lived in Republic County, Kan., called there by the unsettled affairs of his father, who had settled and died there. Mr. and Mrs. Rosel have two children—William L. and Edward, and are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

JONATHAN SPRINGER, farmer, Section 10, P. O. Goffs, born in 1834, in Shelby County, Ind. Is of Swedish ancestry, his fore-fathers being among the founders of Delaware. He grew to manhood and received such schooling as was attainable in Holt County, Mo. From there, in June, 1854, he came to Kansas with nine others and located in Doniphan County. These men were, David Martin and his sons, Thomas and James, George McIntyre, Charles Millermon, Robert Davis, —— Gonge and himself. Of these, only Messrs. James Martin, Davis and Springer are now residents of Kansas. After visiting various parts of the county, the Fox and Sauk Villages, Mission, etc., Mr. Springer made a claim on Wolf River, where Severance now stands. He held the best water-power on the river, which he sold, in 1869, to a company that have built a $25,000 mill upon it. Since his first location in the State, Mr Springer has been a firm advocate of the Republican party, and was in early times a subscriber to the New York Tribune, then classed as an incendiary publication by the Pro-slavery Code, then in force. He, with a few adherents, carried side-arms, and at all times spoke their sentiments. In those days, and in 1857, when they won their first victory, every man went to the polls armed to the teeth. Mrs. Springer was Mary H. Floutner, born near Harper's Ferry, Va., and married March 20, 1860, in Holt County, Mo. They have had a very large family of children. Since 1880 Mr. Springer has resided in Harrison Township, where he owns a well-improved farm.

REILLY TOWNSHIP.

EDWIN CAPSEY, farmer, P. O. Smithland, Jackson County, was born May 24, 1850, in Shropshire, England, and grew up to the age of twenty in that county. He came to America in 1870 with a company of three others—Allen Brisbourne, Thomas Dickin and William Stanway; went into partnership with Ed. Davis. This party came at once to Kansas and located on a farm on Soldier Creek, Jackson County, where they spent the summer of 1870. One summer satisfied his three companions, who returned to "Merry England," Mr. Capsey alone having to stay in the "Land of the Free." In 1872 he married Mrs. Charity E. Cline, who inherited a farm by her deceased husband in Nemaha County, where they now reside. Her maiden name was Rule, and her birthplace Pennsylvania. Mr. Capsey bought a farm adjoining hers, and there we find them in a substantial frame house, 24x18 feet and 22x18 feet, owners of a good barn and orchard and a well-improved farm. They have seven children—Mary E., Sarah B., William H., Nellie C., Frank L., George E. and Nettie I., all born in Kansas, on the homestead. Mr. and Mrs. Capsey attend the United Brethren Church.

PATRICK REILLY, farmer, P. O. Smithland, Jackson County, is the pioneer of this large family of brothers in Kansas. The four brothers, Patrick, Francis, John and James Reilly, are all of Irish birth. Their father died in the old country, the widowed mother and the sons coming to America and locating in Philadelphia about 1850. Patrick Reilly was the first to strike West, as he, locating in 1854 in Bureau County, Ill., began first as a day and "by-the-month" farm hand; later rented the farm on which he worked, and ran it until 1859, when he came to Kansas and bought the southwest quarter of Section 21, Township 5, Range 15. In March, 1860, the brothers all settled in this neighborhood, where the two eldest, "Pat" and "Frank," as they are best known, have become large land-owners and stock-feeders. The mother joined the boys in 1864, and died in 1880. During the first six years Patrick Reilly engaged in freighting across the plains, then settled, and for the next fourteen years was engaged in farming and stock business, on a farm partly composed of the original quarter bought in 1859. Mr. Reilly was elected a county commissioner in 1873, and re-elected in 18.5. He was first a Douglas Democrat, then a war Democrat, and finally severed his alliance with any party and acts for himself. Reilly Township was set apart and named in honor of the brothers in 1880. Frank Reilly has about 2,000 acres of land, and feeds annually about 200 head of cattle. The family are Roman Catholics.

W. T. WILCOX, farmer, P. O. Wetmore, was born in Wilson County, Mo., and early left an orphan; he lived during his boyhood near Palmyra, Mo., and one year in Mississippi, later residing on the Platte Purchase in Missouri. He came in 1854 to Kansas, and lived two years on Stranger Creek, then in 1856 settled on Straight Creek, Jackson County. He was reared in Missouri by a family named Elliott, and one of this family, Jesse Elliott, located with him on Straight Creek, in 1856. Other settlers there were Robert Mitchell, Thomas Davis, A. B. Owen, and J. Snieder, or Snyder. Mr. Wilcox was one of the first men married here, as he and Lucretia F. Green were united by Squire, afterward Rev., Abner Channell, February 24, 1856. His wife Lucretia died May 23, 1872, and he was married March 20, 1873, to Cassandra M. Morgan, who died February 17, 1876, and he was married to his present wife, Sarah W. Tinemore, February 15, 1877. By his first wife, Lucretia, he has three children, James E., Susan J. and Jesse G.; by his present wife, Sarah, he has three children, Minnie J., Julie M. and Joanna M. During the Rebellion Mr. Wilcox served as a volunteer in the Eleventh Kansas (see history of the same on another page in this volume), and has since been a resident of Nemaha and Jackson counties, and is now farming on Elk Creek.

NEUCHATEL TOWNSHIP.

F. F. FISHER, farmer, Section 7, P. O. Centralia. The subject of this sketch has a record of more than ordinary interest. Born in 1843, in Jefferson County, N. Y., his parents settling six years later in Dodge County, Wis., he grew up there, and in 1862 enlisted in the Twenty-third Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, a regiment that proudly holds that it was never defeated, though in the difficult and dangerous service of the Southwest. Its first work was at Vicksburg, the Yazoo Swamps and Arkansas Post, then through the siege of Vicksburg to the surrender. The regiment, however, won its brightest laurels during Gen. Banks' disastrous Red River Expedition, the whole route being a series of skirmishes and terrible dangers. Surprised at Carrion Crow Bayou, while arms were stacked and pay being drawn, the heroic Twenty-third rallied "and saved the army by its devoted bravery," as Greeley says, though only forty uninjured men came out of the fight. Mr. Fisher was shot through both cheeks, the ball leaving a scar distinctly visible at this writing. In consequence of the wound he was transferred to the Veteran Reserve Corps, and guarded rebel prisoners thereafter till the close of the war. He then spent a year in Minnesota, and in 1867 went from the pineries of Wisconsin on a raft to St. Louis; then to the mountains, where he spent twelve years, finally "striking it," his partners and himself now owning twenty-five "prospects," several of which are "panning out" richly. He married, November 7, 1882, Miss Nettie Kendall, of Mount Lake, Minn.; has bought a section of land in Neuchatel, and will pass the remainder of his life as a farmer and stockdealer.

ELIAS HAWK, farmer, Section 8, P. O. Centralia. Mr. Hawk came to Nemaha County, Kan., in 1866, with his family, and was the first settler at the head of French Creek, where he still lives. His now fruitful and valuable farm was then raw prairie, and his entire stock comprised only a cow, a pig and a lamb, his last dollar having been expended in Centralia. With his own hands he cut the timber for his first log house, hauled the logs three miles, and built it. For years he made a practice of hiring cattle, and breaking in young steers for neighbors fortunate enough to own them. To-day he has a good frame house, an orchard of 100 trees, stock yards, sheds, etc., and is well-to-do. Born in Dauphin County, Pa., he removed when seventeen to Johnson County, Iowa. Enlisted in the Twenty-eighth Iowa Volunteer Infantry. He served through the siege of Vicksburg, and on the Red River expedition was severely wounded at the battle of Sabine Cross-roads. After being laid up about a year he was honorably discharged, and returned to Iowa. His wife was Sarah Linninger, of Cumberland County, Pa., and they have seven children, four born in Iowa and three in Kansas.

J. HOLLINGSWORTH, farmer, Section 8, P. O. Centralia, was born in 1846, in Clay County, Ky. His parents, both Kentuckians, settled soon after his birth in McLean County, Ill., where he was reared. August 15, 1861, when but fifteen years old, he enlisted in the Thirty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and fought as a private in the battles of Fredericktown, Mo., Cash River, Fort Gibson, Raymond, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, and at the assault on Vicksburg received a ball through the left shoulder. Again entering the field, in September, 1863, he fought at Jackson, Miss., then went to New Orleans and took a hand in the fights at Opelousas, Franklin, Grand Coteau, etc.; then went into Texas, meeting armed rebels at Malagorda Isle, Fort Esperanza, Indianola, etc. His regiment was badly used up by the railroad accident on the Opelousas and New Orleans Railroad, losing fifty-seven men. Its final work was done at Mobile. Mr. Hollingsworth then settled in Fairbury, Ill., married, and in 1869 came to Kansas, first to Crawford County, and in 1877 to his present farm. He also owns a claim in Norton County, Kan. Mrs. Hollingsworth was Rachel Fitzgerald, of Fairbury, Ill.

VALLEY TOWNSHIP.

JACOB NICHOLSON, farmer, P. O. Seneca, was born in 1825 in Guernsey County, Ohio; he settled in 1848 in Jasper County, Mo., removing thence in April 1861 to Kansas, buying the farm of William Berry, South of Seneca. Was elected a county commissioner in 1863, served one term, sold out to Leopold Cohen, and bought his present 317-acre farm in 1874. He has made good improvements here, as he did on the original farm. He married, in Ohio, and in her native county, in 1845, Annie E. Gregg. They have seven children—Hezekiah, Elizabeth A., George E., Sarah, John, Alice and Jacob. Mr. Nicholson is a Democrat, and he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of old Lincoln, the site of which is on his land.

STEPHEN SHERMAN, farmer, P. O. Seneca, came to Nemaha County in June, 1860, with his wife, father, J. H. Sherman, and brothers, Albert, Amos and Edward. Stephen enlisted, 1862, in the Seventh Kansas, and served under Col. Jennison until, at the battle of Hurricane Creek, August 13, 1864, he (Sherman) received a ball through his left leg, which confined him about a year in hospital and inactivity. Returning, he took a homestead in Nemaha County, and six years later bought the old Sherman homestead, where he now lives. His father, a native of Germany, came to America in 1829, and died in April, 1878. Albert Sherman, a volunteer in the Eighth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, died in Leavenworth hospital in 1862. Amos served through the Civil War in the Thirteenth Kansas, and is now dead. The youngest brother is farming in Rice County, Kansas.

AMERICA CITY.

N. B. McKAY, M. D., a pioneer settler of Nemaha County, was born Sept. 13, 1826; studied medicine with Dr. L. Goldsborough at home and in the Western Reserve College, Cleveland, Ohio. In the fall of 1849 he settled in Greenbush, Ill.; practiced there three years, one year in Clayton, Ill., and later in Milton, Iowa, and Galesburg, Ill. From this latter city Dr. McKay and two others were sent to Kansas to locate a site for a colony. This resulted in the establishment of the noted Home Association in June, 1858. The Doctor identified himself with the Home Association for about four years, and then located at America City, where we now find him, still active in his chosen profession. He is also postmaster at that place. Mrs. Dr. McKay was Chloe Goldthwaite, of Worcester, Mass., and they have had four children—Sarah M., born in Greenbush, Ill.; Augusta M., born in Clayton, Ill., died October 5, 1870, at the age of seventeen; Frank, born in Milton, Iowa, and Carl, born in Galesburg, Ill. The Doctor is genial and popular, fat, fair and fifty-seven. He is well remembered in connection with the various public enterprises, both in early and later days, and was one of the founders of Corning, in this county, he giving it the name of his partner, the Hon Erastus Corning, of New York

JEWELL COUNTY.

LOCATION AND NATURAL FEATURES.

JEWELL COUNTY is located in the northernmost tier of counties, 150 miles from the Missouri River. The county is thirty miles square, divided into twenty-five Congressional townships, and contains 900 square miles, or 576,000 acres of land. The county is among the first in the State in agricultural resources. Its central portion is rolling, and in places somewhat broken, but contains many fine farms and much good pasture land. The valley of Marsh and Buffalo Creeks—a tract embracing the southeast quarter of the county—is, next to the White Rock Valley, the finest, richest and most densely settled portion of the county. It is about fifty or seventy-five feet below the central portion, and is exceedingly fertile, and just rolling enough to afford proper drainage.

The valley of Limestone Creek in the southwest, is a well settled and fertile district, but the finest and most noted portion of the county is the valley of the famous White Rock, to which the Indians clung with most desperate pertinacity to the last. To them it was the paradise of the surrounding country, and to-day it is the richest, most thoroughly developed and well improved portion of Jewell County. This valley extends east and west through Towns 2, south; the creek being wholly within that tier of towns. The first attempts at settlement were here made, but for years proved fruitless, owing to the determination of the savage occupant never to yield his possession. The Republican River touches the northeastern corner of Jewell County.

The principal streams are: White Rock, Buffalo, Limestone, Marsh and Brown's creeks. White Rock flows east, and empties into the Republican River, in Republic County. Its principal tributaries from the north are: Burr Oak, Walnut and Montana, and from the south: Porcupine, Troublesome, Big Timber and John's creeks. Buffalo has three principal branches, all rising near the center of the county, and flowing in a southeasterly course, forming a junction six and one-half miles from the south line of the county; thence running east and emptying into the Republican River in Cloud County. There are three branches of Marsh Creek that drain the eastern middle portion of the county, and, uniting, empty into Buffalo in Cloud County. There are five branches of the Limestone, all having a southerly direction, draining the southwest corner of the county, and emptying into the Solomon River, in Mitchell County. All of these streams have numerous small tributaries, which, with the main streams, are belted with from fifteen to seventy-five rods of timber, consisting principally of cotton-wood and elm; but including burr oak, ash, hackberry, walnut, red and white elm, box elder and red cedar.

The soil is a rich, black vegetable mould, from one to twenty feet deep, underlaid principally with a porous clay. The valleys will produce good crops with far less rain than the upland, and are more seriously affected with too much rain. Good water is found at greatly varying depths in different parts of the county, ranging from the level surface or springs to 125 feet.

The principal building stone is magnesian limestone, it being found in every township except Highland. When first quarried it is generally soft and easily cut with a common saw, but by exposure becomes hard. Sandstone is found in the extreme south.

EARLY SETTLEMENT OF THE COUNTY.

In the spring of 1862, William Harshberger and wife settled upon land adjoining the present town of White Rock, and John Furrows took a claim just west of Mr. Harshberger's farm. A. Clark, wife and child, settled just over the western boundary of what is now Republic County. Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Harshberger were sisters, the whole of the little colony coming from Knox County, Ill. They formed the first settlement in Jewell County, built cabins and broke ground, but were soon driven away by well-grounded fears of Indian raids. A battle between the Pawnees and Sioux, was fought near Mr. Clark's cabin, and one of the former tribe was literally hacked to pieces. Upon this occasion these settlers were warned of a threatened outbreak, and were told that it heralded no good to the whites of White Rock Valley. They therefore left, and a second attempt at settlement was not made until four years thereafter—in the spring of 1866. At that time William Belknap took a claim five miles west of the present town of White Rock; John Marling with his wife and child, settled near the present town of Reubens; Nicholas Ward, his wife and adopted son, Mrs. Sutzer and son, Al. Dart, Arch. Bump, Erastus Bartlett and a man by the name of Flint, took claims within two miles east of that town. This settlement was broken up by something more than presentiments. In August of this year a party of forty Cheyennes attacked Marling's cabin, and while he was gone for assistance the savages entered his house, dragged his wife into the woods with a rope around her neck, and horribly outraged her. They then stole everything they could find, set fire to the cabin and dashed off before Mr. Marling could obtain assistance from the stockade below White Rock City. After this, the entire settlement took refuge there, where they remained two days, and then went to Clyde, Cloud County. A few days afterwards, learning that the rumors of a general massacre were groundless, the settlers returned to their claims. They rested in fancied security until the following April, when occurred a horrible event which effectually destroyed the little settlement from the face of the earth. A detailed account of the massacre is taken from the county history prepared by M. Winsor and James A. Scarbrough, and from which many of the facts of the early history of Jewell County are condensed: "On the 9th day of April, 1867, the Cheyennes made another descent upon this devoted settlement, killing Bartlett, Mrs. Sutzer, her little son, and Nicholas Ward, and desperately wounding Ward's adopted son, leaving him for dead, and carrying Mrs. Ward off a captive. The particulars of this horrible massacre are as follows: "The Indians came to Mrs. Sutzer's cabin, where Bartlett was boarding, and demanded dinner, which she proceeded to prepare, in the meantime sending her little son across the creek to Ward's to inform them of the presence of the Indians. Bartlett was down in the timber, splitting rails, and returning for dinner, was met by the Indians and tomahawked as he was passing around the corner of the house. He was found lying on his back, his iron wedge near his right hand and his own knife—a dirk—sticking in his throat. It is thought that when Bartlett was killed Mrs. Sutzer started to run. She was found dead about thirty yards from the house with her skull crushed with a rock. It appears that the cunning fiends had refrained from using fire-arms for fear of raising an alarm. After completing their bloody work at Mrs. Sutzer's the Indians crossed the creek to Ward's cabin, and again called for dinner which Mrs. Ward prepared for them. They ate their dinner, smoked their pipes and chatted away in the most friendly manner. At the conclusion of their "smoke," one of them very coolly loaded his gun and asked Ward if he thought it would kill a buffalo. Ward replied that he thought it would. Whereupon the Indian instantly leveled his gun at Ward's breast and shot him through the heart, killing him immediately. The two boys—Ward's and Mrs. Sutzer's—then started to run. The Indians pursued them, following them to the bank of the creek, and shooting them down in the bed of the stream. The Sutzer boy was shot through the heart; instantly killed. The Ward boy was shot through the neck and left for dead. Some time during the succeeding night, however, he recovered his senses, and groping his way back to the cabin in the dark, found the door broken down and entered. Feeling around in the dark with his hands he stumbled and fell over the dead body of his adopted father. Procuring some blankets from one of the beds, he returned to the timber, where he remained during the night, and was found the next morning by a party of claim hunters, to whom he told the sad and harrowing tale. It appears that when the Indians ran out to shoot the boys, Mrs. Ward must have shut and bolted the door, when the Indians returning, broke it down and took her prisoner. Her sad fate will probably never be known, as up to the present time, after the lapse of eleven years, nothing definite has ever been heard of her."

Of the original members of the settlement who were not victims of this massacre, Mr. Flint was absent at Clyde, the Darts were absent, Mr. Marling, wife and child, had returned to Missouri, and Messrs. Bump and Davis had been waylaid and shot in Cloud County during the previous May. The survivors, including Mr. Rice, all left the county, after this horrible affair.

In the winter and spring of 1868, Richard Stanfield and Carl G. Smith took claims in Sections 7 and 9, Township 2 south, and Gordon Winbigler and Adam Rosenberg near White Rock Creek and the town of Rubens. Mr. Rosenberg was with General Custer in his famous expedition to the Indian Territory, where Mrs. Morgan and Miss White were rescued from the Indians. When the Chicago colony of Scandinavians laid out Scandia, Republic County, in the fall of 1868, their settlements extended into Jewell County, though none remained here permanently until the spring of 1870. In May, 1869, the Excelsior, or New York Colony, "under the lead of one Walker, came into the county and took claims along White Rock Creek, as high up as Burr Oak, and as far down as John's Creek. About two miles east of the present site of Holmwood, a block house was erected for protection, and surrounded by two lines of earth-works. Here the whole colony resided during its short stay in the county. Immediately after their arrival, they gave public notice that all claimants of land on the creek must be on their claims by a certain date, or they would be contested. This had the effect to bring to the creek a number of Swedes and Norwegians, who laid claim to nearly all the most valuable land. At this time, the latter part of May, 1869, there were over one hundred people in the county, all on White Rock Creek." During this month a force of men was raised, and proceeded to the scene of a late massacre in the northwestern part of Jewell County, in which four hunters from Nebraska had been killed. Previous to their return John Dahl, one of the Scandinavian settlers, was killed by Indians, Peter Tanner's cabin was burned, and other outrages were committed. The Excelsior Colony, consisting of Mrs. Frazier and her two sons, Mr. Walker, President of the company, and others, considered that they were "wanted elsewhere" than in this locality, and made immediate preparations to depart. While a portion of them were moving their household effects from their fort to the protecting care of Mr. Lovewell and his band, they were attacked by Indians, robbed of all their possessions, but escaped alive. Mr. Walker was at Junction City at the time, and hearing of the raid, sent up a lot of men and some teams, and in June moved away. All the Scandinavian settlers had already gone, which left Jewell County entirely deserted. It remained in this desolate condition from June until August, 1869, when Peter Kearns ventured hitherward and took the old Nicholas Ward claim. He worked it all of the following winter. In the spring and fall of this year, however, such men as James A. Highland, N. S. Cederberg, William D. Street and James McCraith, took claims, and finally became permanent residents of the county. In February, 1870, the great tide of immigration commenced to set into Jewell County. In that month John O'Roak, William Scott, Samuel Sweet, Wilson McBride, Chris. Erns, John W. McRoberts, Samuel Bowles, T. Bowles, Phil. Baker, Adams and Gregory came in, all taking claims on White Rock. In the same month, A. J. Davis, Jerry Burnett, M. L. Stultz, Benjamin Lewis and Charles Lewis came in and settled on Buffalo Creek.

The first permanent settlers of the Buffalo Valley were Henry Sorick, George A. Sorick, John A. Sorick, George W. Waters, R. F. Hudsonpiller, Thomas B. Hart and William Cox, who took claims in the immediate vicinity of Jewell City, April 8, 1870. The next arrivals were S. R. Worick, John H. Worick, John Hoffer, Joseph W. Fogle, Cyrus Richart, Chris. Bender, David J. Rockey, William H. Cameron, Samuel Krape, C. A. Belknap and A. J. Wise, known as the "Illinois Colony," who arrived at the forks of Buffalo Creek, April 12, 1870. They all took claims in the vicinity of Jewell City, and all, with the exception of Mr. Cameron, remained until "the war was over" and very materially assisted in "holding the creek" during the somewhat troublous season of 1870. On May 13, 1870, twenty-eight settlers gathered at John Hoffer's shanty, to discuss means of defense against a rumored invasion of the Cheyennes. William D. Street called the meeting to order, and suggested the building of a fort. His suggestion was at once adopted, and the following gentlemen organized themselves into a company—the Buffalo Militia—for the purpose of building that structure and protecting their homes: L. J. Calvin, F. A. May, W. M. Jones, Samuel Krape, Louis A. Dapron, C. L. Seeley, J. A. Scarbrough, Cyrus Richart, Chris. Bender, J. H. Worick, David J. Rockey, James W. Hall, Richard D. Fardy, Charles J. Lewis, C. A. Belknap, A. J. Wise, John Hoffer, William Cox, S. R. Worick, Allen Lightner, James F. Queen, J. W. Fogel, J. A. Sorick, R. F. Hudsonpiller, I. A. Sawin, Henry Sorick, William D. Street and John R. Wilson. Mr. Street was elected Captain: Charles J. Lewis, First Lieutenant; Louis A. Dapron, Second Lieutenant; James A. Scarbrough, Orderly Sergeant. At once selecting a spot fifty yards square, they plowed around it, laid a wall four feet thick and seven feet high, and in two days "Fort Jewell" was completed. It is upon the present site of Jewell City, and the well which they dug, the first in the county, was situated at the edge of the present Delaware street. The Buffalo Militia "held the fort" until June, 1870, when it was taken possession of by the Third United States Mounted Artillery. They held the fort, but they never were called upon to repel an attack, although there is no knowing what would have happened had they not taken these wise precautions.

During the months of May and June, the numbers of those who located at "Jewell City" were increased by the arrival of Colonel E. Barker, Jesse N. Carpenter, O. L. McClung, W. C. McClung, R. R. McClung, Z. F. Dodge, J. K. Dodge, F. T. Gandy, H. P. Gandy, L. C. Gandy, Gabe. B. Wade, P. R. Deal, Samuel Cameron, C. E. Plowman, Jonathan Street, George F. Lewis, James Carpenter, Jacob S. Jackson, W. R. Phillips and others.

During the month of April, 1870, quite a number of other settlers arrived and took claims in the southern part of the county. Prominent among them were Charles L. Seeley, Isaac A. Sawin, Allen Lightner, William M. Jones, James W. Hall, Richard D. Fardy, L. J. Calvin, F. A. May and John R. Wilson. The majority of them remained.

The first white woman who became a resident of the southern part of Jewell County, was Mrs. Annie Billings, wife of N. H. Billings, who arrived at Fort Jewell, May 22, 1870. She was accompanied by her little ten-year-old sister, Miss Jennie Jones, who is now married and lives on Wolf Creek, in Cloud County. The second invoice of white women who came to cheer the bachelor pioneers with their refining presence were: Mrs. Adaline Sorick, Mrs. Jennie Halstead, Mrs. Annie Waters and Mrs. Mariah Dodge, all of whom arrived at Fort Jewell on the evening of July 3, 1870.

CRIMINAL MATTERS.

In 1871 Guy Whitmore and Jake Hanes, noted horse-thieves, were arrested at Grand Island, Neb., by William Stone, the Sheriff of Jewell

County. When taken, they had eleven stolen horses in their possession. When the Sheriff reached his home near Salem, in Jewell County, he remained over night with the prisoners. Leaving them with his Deputy he went out on an errand, and during his absence a mob overpowered the Deputy, and hung the prisoners to a tree. Efforts were made to discover the perpetrators, but without success. The Sheriff never received his pay for the capture, as the County Commissioners claimed that he did not "produce the prisoners dead or alive."

The most noted murder trial in the county, was that of Daniel Davidson, a Swede, for the murder of his wife, November 29, 1878. The first trial resulted in conviction; but in the second he was acquitted, by the disappearance, it is claimed, of a part of the evidence found by the coroner's jury. The circumstantial evidence was strongly against the accused. He had been separated from his wife for some time; she refusing to live with him, and receiving marked and suspicious attentions from a man named Swartz.

For some weeks previous to her death she had been ill, and her husband had remained with her during the time. On Friday, the 29th of November, 1878, having recovered sufficiently to attend to her family—a girl of twelve and a child of one and a half years—she told her husband she had no further use for him, and that he could go to his own home, which was a mile and a half distant. She further told him that he must pay for the divorce which she had applied for, and that she intended to marry Swartz as soon as it was obtained. He returned home, and that night she was shot through the window while undressing to retire. The two children were in bed asleep, and Mrs. Davidson was near the foot of the bed, facing the window, when the shot was fired, which took effect in her breast close to the heart, and must have killed her instantly. The concussion blew out the lamp and awoke the children. The younger began to cry, and the older calling to her mother, and receiving no reply, arose, and in going to the bureau to light the lamp, stumbled over the dead body of her mother. Toward morning the frightened, lonely and weary children fell asleep, and slept until a neighbor coming to the house on an errand, discovered the awful and touching situation. Fresh footprints of a horse going and coming between the house of Davidson and that of Mrs. Davidson through the fields, were traced the next morning, the horse having been fastened at a spot where none had been seen for several weeks, according to the recollection of the little girl and the neighbors. This testimony, although strong against the prisoner, being circumstantial, was not deemed by the jury sufficient for conviction.

POLITICAL ORGANIZATION.

In July, 1870, Col. E. Barker and Orville L. McClung presented a petition to Governor Harvey, asking for the organization of the county. On the 14th of that month, C. L. Seeley, F. T. Gandy and A. J. Davis were appointed the first Commissioners, James A. Scarbrough, County Clerk, and Jewell City was designated as the county-seat. The county and the city were named in honor of Lieut. Col. Lewis R. Jewell, of the Sixth Kansas Cavalry, who died of wounds received at the battle of Cane Hill, Ark., November 28, 1862. Col. Barker, had been commissioned Notary Public on the 10th of June, being the first public officer of Jewell County. That functionary presented the new officers with their commissions, and in August they called upon him at his shanty on Middle Buffalo, one and one-half miles north of Jewell City; held an open-air meeting on the banks of that stream, and were sworn into office on the 20th of that month, 1870. The duly-qualified Commissioners held their first meeting at the office of the County Clerk in Jewell City, on August 22, Mr. Seeley being chosen as chairman. The county was divided into three commissioners' districts, and five municipal, viz.: Vicksburg, Buffalo, Limestone, White Rock and Big Timber. At this meeting it was ordered that on the twenty-seventh day of September, 1870, an election be held for the purpose of electing county and township officers, and locating the county-seat. Result was as follows: For County Commissioners—First District—Dennis Taylor; Second District—Thomas Coverdale; Third District—Samuel C. Bowles. For County Clerk—James A. Scarbrough. For County Treasurer—Henry Sorick. For County Surveyor—N. H. Billings. For Register of Deeds—S. O. Carman. For Probate Judge—Charles L. Seeley. For Sheriff—A. J. Davis. For Coroner—William Cox. For County Superintendent—S. R. Worick. "Springdale," a paper town, supposed to be located on the divide between White Rock and the head of the East Buffalo, received twenty-four votes for the county-seat, and died a premature death—or rather, died before it had ever been born. In April, 1873, Jewell Center, now Mankato, concluded that, owing to its central location, it was more entitled to be the county-seat than Jewell City. In response to a petition, on April 7, 1873, the County Commissioners ordered an election upon the re-location of the county-seat, to take place the 13th of May, 1873. Jewell Center was the successful candidate for the honor, by a vote of 861, to 626 for Jewell City. On the 28th of June, 1875, another election for the re-location of the county-seat took place, at the request of Jewell City. This election resulted again in favor of Jewell Center—971, to 756 for Jewell City, and nine for Midway, a town on Middle Buffalo, and another aspirant for the county-seat. The question has not been agitated since, and it is, probably, definitely and fairly settled.

The county buildings of Mankato are small, inconvenient, and unsafe for keeping the records of so large a county. The present court hose is a small frame building, donated by the citizens of Mankato to secure the county-seat. A court house square has been set apart in the most elevated portion of the town, where it is intended to soon erect a court house commensurate in size and elegance with the importance of the county.

The county poor-farm, of about 240 acres, situated one mile south of Mankato, is provided with a good poor-house, costing about $4,000.

STATISTICAL.

The Assessors of Jewell County, in their returns for 1882, give the following statistics, which fairly exhibit its wealth and prosperity: Acres of taxable land under cultivation, 123,379; not under cultivation, 225,147; total, 348,526 acres. Of the total valuation of all real estate and personal property ($2,048,452), $1,146,206 is in taxable land. $102,360 in town lots, $856,090 in personal property, and 142,856 in railroad lands. Acres of winter wheat, 19,515; rye, 2,634; spring wheat, 17,509; corn, 120,734; oats, 5,211; barley, 70; buckwheat, 556; potatoes, 1,895; sorghum, 739; tobacco, 15; broom corn, 614; millet, 4,891; Egyptian or rice corn, 286; tons of prairie hay, 20,347. Value of garden products, $3,989; pounds of cheese, 9,004; butter, 224,384. Number of horses, 7,543; mules, 1,036; cows, 5,342; cattle, 10,397; sheep, 2,817; swine, 35,625. Value of all animals sold for slaughter, $328,285. Number of apple trees, 78,167; peach, 150,465; cherry, 12,450; pear, 2,064; plum, 1,152.

The population of Jewell County for 1882, by towns, is as follows: Jackson, 449; Sinclair, 528; Vicksburg, 644; Grant, 563; Allen, 686; Montana, 622; Richland, 504; Washington, 448; Buffalo, 648; Prairie, 658; Harrison, 637; Holmwood, 593; Central, 1,114; Calvin, 444; Brown Creek, 557; Walnut, 632; Burr Oak, 900; Limestone, 550; Odessa, 456; Athens, 656; Highland, 575; White Mound, 620; Ezbon, 576; Ionia, 514; Erving, 502. Total, 15,086.

Railroads.—The main line of the Central Branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, built by the Union Pacific, extends along the southern boundary of the county, a branch of which runs up the valley of the Buffalo to Burr Oak, on White Rock Creek. This line will soon be extended to Salem, and on to some connecting point on the Burlington & Missouri Railroad in Nebraska. It was built in 1878 and 1879, and has been of incalculable value to the county. At present there are no encouraging prospects of any part of the county's receiving better railroad facilities. The northern part of the county has the benefit of the Burlington & Missouri in Nebraska, the eastern part of the Scandia Branch of the Missouri Pacific, and the southern part of the main line of the Missouri Pacific. This county is not, however, so dependent upon close railroad communications, as it ships more hogs and cattle than any other county in the State, and consequently has a correspondingly less amount of grain to freight to market.

MANKATO.

Mankato, formerly Jewell Center, is situated about the center of the county, on Sections 15 and 22, Township 3, Range 8 west. In Center Township, in 1872, a "town company" was formed, of which M. W. Whitney was President, P. S. McCutchen, Secretary, and G. S. Bishop, Treasurer. They surveyed and platted 320 acres, now included in the town site, and named it Jewell Center. Their design was to start a town and secure the county-seat. In the fall of 1872, C. W. Petigrew built and opened a store, and the future county-seat, in the minds of its projectors, was "started." A postoffice was established, and D. T. Vance, the present official, was the first postmaster. Early in 1873, the citizens of Jewell Center and the settlements on White Rock commenced to agitate the question of removing the county seat, as before stated. The similarity in the names of Jewell Center and Jewell City caused delays in mail, and two years ago the former place determined to select a new name. "Alta" was first chosen, but it was found to be the cognomen of another town in the State, and it was again christened, by the name it now bears—Mankato. This was given to it by H. R. Hill, who attended school at Mankato, Blue Earth Co., Minn.

The country around Mankato is the most rolling and broken of any part of the county. It was the last in the county to be taken up, and it was thought when the first settlements were made that it would never be suitable for anything but grazing; but it now has some very fine farms. Had the land been as suitable for a town as Jewell City, it is quite likely the founders of that city would have chosen the present site of Mankato. Water is reached, in permanent supply, at a depth of from ten to ninety feet. This is certainly a great consideration to those who come here to live. The town is mostly settled by live young business men from the East, who brought with them, especially, the educational ideas of that older section of the country. The school advantages of Mankato have always, therefore, been good. The attendance is at present about 140. It is the purpose of the citizens soon to replace the wooden school building with the finest structure in the county.

There are four organized religious denominations here, namely:—the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Lutheran. The last has been organized for about three years, but is at present without a pastor. Most of the members reside in the country. They are intending to soon erect a church building.

The Mankato Baptist Church was organized in 1876, by Rev. Mr. Howard. They worship in the Methodist Church, but are now making arrangements to build. They have about forty-five members, and Rev. J. Schutz is their pastor; he also has charge of East Buffalo Baptist Church, of eighteen members, which was organized in 1882, and of the Holmwood Church, with twenty-five members, organized in 1880.

BURR OAK.

Burr Oak, at present, is the largest and most prosperous town in the county, situated at the terminus of the Central Branch, on White Rock Creek, ten miles northeast of Mankato. It is pleasantly located and surrounded by as fine a country as can be found in the county.

The first settlers in the town and vicinity were A. W. Mann, F. Gilbert, A. J. and D. H. Godfrey (A. J. Godfrey built the first house on what is now State street), G. Beanblossom, L. N. Tingley, J. M. McCormick and others, who located in the spring of 1870.

The postoffice was established in 1871. J. M. McCormick, a faithful public officer, has held the position of Postmaster from that time to the present. The town was laid out in 1875 by A. J. Godfrey on the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 23, Township 2 south, Range 9 west, being a part of his homestead. The first store was that of J. E. Faidley, the second F. Gilbert, and the third T. B. Carpenter. Rev. Allen Ives, in May, 1871, at A. J. Godfrey's, preached the first sermon. The first school was taught in the winter of 1873 by W. H. Kemp. In 1875, a whirlwind of considerable severity passed over the town, but owing to the scarcity of houses did little damage, merely injuring the few that then marked the town.

Since 1875 Burr Oak has made a more rapid growth than any place in the county. It is larger in population and does more business, owing to the fact that it is the terminus of a railroad and has the trade of a very rich and well-settled district.

The place was organized as a city of the third class in April, 1880. It now has a population of 700. The first city officers were: J. K. McLain, Mayor; W. M. Spurlock, Clerk; A. W. Mann, Treasurer; T. B. Carpenter, O. F. Roberts, A. J. Godfrey, George Quigley and Dr. J. E. Hawley, Councilmen.

1881—J. W. Mann, Mayor; J. H. Palmer, Clerk, and William Spurlock Treasurer.

1882—Dr. J. E. Hawley, Mayor; Thomas Tweedy, Clerk, and W. B. Spears, Treasurer.

The church and school privileges are good. The first school was taught here in 1873. The town now has an elegant and commodious school building, just completed at a cost of $3,500. There are three grades, and the departments are doing good work.

There are four religious denominations in Burr Oak—the Baptist, Methodist, Dunkards and Catholics. The last was organized in 1881 by Rev. J. Perrier, of Concordia. There are fifteen families in the parish and they have an $800 church edifice.

The Baptist Church was organized in September, 1879, by Rev. Mr. Howard. The society has just purchased the old schoolhouse and is remodeling it for its accommodation. The society has about twenty-five members. H. D. Babcock was the first pastor, succeeded by Rev. S. Shutz, the present incumbent.

The Methodists were organized in 1873, with fifteen members, Rev. H. G. Breed being their first pastor. The membership is now about 110. The pastors in order have been Revs. H. G. Breed, C. G. JEWELL CITY.

The early history of Jewell City can be found at length in the County history. The origin of this city, which is situated ten miles east of south of Mankato, was the building of a fort, in 1870, for the protection of the settlers in its vicinity. It was called Fort Jewell, and was a large sod enclosure in which the first well in the county was dug. It was a false alarm that caused its erection, and, happily for the settlers, they were never called upon to use it as a means of defense. The town is well situated between the middle and west branches of Buffalo Creek, on a comparatively level tract of land. It is surrounded by rich lands, and adjacent to the Limestone and Marsh valleys.

In May, 1871, George James established himself in town as the first shoemaker in the county, or in fact in the country, west of Concordia. The first store in the town was opened June 4, 1871, by John D. Robertson. In September, 1871, the Jewell House, the first hotel in the place, was built by James Kelsey. The town has grown steadily and substantially ever since, although it had the misfortune, early in its existence, to lose the county-seat.

In March, 1872, W. P. Day and W. D. Jenkins established the Jewell City Clarion, the first paper in the county. It was purchased by M. Winsor in February, 1873, and enlarged from a four column folio to one of seven columns. Mr. Winsor changed the name of it to the Diamond, retaining possession of it until April, 1878, when it was consolidated with the Monitor. The postoffice was established July 4, 1870, with J. Hoffer as Postmaster who was succeeded by J. A. Scarbrough, and in November, 1874, by S. R. Worick, the Money Order department having been established the previous July.

Sunday morning, at 5 o'clock, July 28, 1873, a cyclone from the northwest visited the prosperous town and blew down a $4,000 schoolhouse, several partially finished buildings, and removed several from their foundations. Fortunately, no lives were lost. The storm continued in a southeasterly direction, and did considerable damage in Cloud County, especially at Concordia.

There is an excellent quality of limestone in this vicinity, which has been used in the finest buildings of the town.

In 1880 the town was organized as a city of the third class, with the following officers: H. C. Jennings, Mayor; H. A. Schulenberg, Clerk; J. D. Robertson, Treasurer; G. B. Crandall, R. W. Hill, J. T. Bunch, A. L. Marks, and Thomas Miller, Councilmen; H. F. Stone, Police Judge.

The officers of 1881 were: J. T. Bunch, Mayor; H. A. Schulenberg, City Clerk; J. D. Robertson, Treasurer; J. Hoffer, Police Judge.

The following were chosen in 1882: G. B. Crandall, Mayor; M. F. Knappenberger, City Clerk; J. D. Robertson, Treasurer; A. L. Marks, Police Judge.

SCHOOLS, CHURCHES, THE PRESS.

The schools from the first have been good. Since 1873 to the present time they have been kept in a building constructed principally from the ruins of the one destroyed at that time. In October, 1882, a $6,000 stone school building was completed and occupied. It is the finest school building in the county.

Hollen, Rev. J. Lawrence, and the present incumbent, Rev. A. B. Conwell. The latter assumed the pastorate in 1879, and during his term of service the debt has been lifted from the church and money put in the treasury. Present membership, sixty. Mr. Conwell has charge, also, of the societies at East Buffalo and Spring Creek.

The Christians organized a society in the spring of 1873, under the pastorate of Rev. O. N. Gray. He remained in charge until 1877, when, on account of the territory covered by the church membership, societies were formed at Brown's Creek and Marsh Valley. Rev. G. D. Sellers took charge of the city and county churches, but was succeeded in 1882 in the pastorate of the Jewell City society by Rev. J. T. Kiggins. The church building, a good wooden structure, was erected in 1879.

SALEM.

Salem, situated ten miles east of Burr Oak, in the fertile and far famous valley of White Rock, is an inland town, but enterprising, prosperous, and enjoying an excellent trade. It is without a railroad, but has good prospects of having the Central Branch extended from Burr Oak. It was laid out, January 25, 1872, by H. S. Browning, C. P. Miller, and George W. Smith, the site taking a portion of their adjoining farms. The location is a pleasant one, and the country surrounding is fertile and quite thickly settled. The first house was built by Browning & Smith, in March, and occupied by Wilson Bros., of Scandia, with a stock of general merchandise. The second store was opened, June 1, 1872, by J. M. Parker. Messrs. Miller and Smith, both of the Free Methodist Church, have left the town, and are abroad as ministers of that denomination.

Within a decade Salem and the surrounding country have made marked progress. The town has a population of about 300, and is steadily growing. It has good schools, and three religious organizations. The United Brethren, organized in 1872, under Elder Bird. On the Salem circuit they now have six churches and 150 members. Rev. Andrew Poulson is the present pastor. The Free Methodists were organized in 1872, by Rev. C. P. Miller, one of the Town Company, with five members. They have increased to seventy-five. Rev. John Whiting, of the Mankato circuit, is their pastor.

OMIO.

This is a finely-located village in the eastern part of the county, fifteen miles from any other town. It is in the middle of the renowned Marsh Valley, quite as fertile but not as famous as White Rock Valley. It was laid out in May, 1877, by J. O. & A. J. Godding, J. Fogle and C. In 1873 came West and homesteaded in Jewell County, and in August, 1881, in conjunction with his brother, established the Western Advocate at Omio, a small town and without railroad communication, but the paper in size and matter would seem to come from a large railroad city. They are deserving of great credit for their ably conducted journal.

With a limited common school education, he commenced the printing business, an excellent school, at the age of fourteen. OTHER STATIONS.

Holmwood, situated on the White Rock, eight miles north of Mankato and five miles east of Burr Oak, is a young and flourishing town, but was unfortunate when the Central Branch Railroad went to Burr Oak, only five miles west on the same stream. But, surrounded by a fertile and well-settled district, the town has continued to grow, yet more slowly than before. If there is ever a railroad built across the county, from east to west, it will be likely to pass up the valley of the White Rock. The schools are prosperous, and there are two religious denominations here—the Baptist and Methodist.

Rubens, three miles east of Holmwood, and Ionia, on Limestone Creek, are towns similar in size and location to Holmwood and Omio. Being without railroad communication, these towns are not making many substantial improvements, yet are enjoying a fair local trade in general merchandise and farm machinery.

After this, Mr. Beeler, as foreman of the settlers, built the first successful stockade ever built on the Solomon River. POTTAWATOMIE COUNTY.

NATURAL FEATURES.

POTTAWATOMIE County, formerly embraced within the limits of Riley, was organized by the Territorial Legislature of 1857. Its northern and southern boundaries were the same as at present, while its western boundary was the guide meridian, about five miles east of Manhattan, and its eastern boundary about five miles east of its present one. It is now bounded on the north by Marshall and Nemaha counties, on the east by Jackson and Shawnee, on the south by the Kansas River, on the west by the Big Blue; having natural boundaries on the south and west. Its area is about 850 square miles, and its present territory is embraced within Ranges 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, and within Towns 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10. Its northern boundary is on the line dividing Towns 5 and 6; its eastern, on the section line in Range 12, that is one mile west of the line dividing Ranges 11 and 12; its southern and western boundaries are very irregular. It lies in the second tier of counties from the Nebraska line, and between it and the Missouri River are the counties of Jackson, Jefferson, Atchison, Leavenworth and Wyandotte. It is the most accessible county west from the state capital. The county has quite a varied physical appearance, of bottom, bluff and upland: the bottom land is 25 per cent; upland, 75 per cent; forest, 5 per cent; prairie, 95 per cent. The average width of its creek bottoms is one mile; of the bottoms on the Big Blue and Kansas, three miles. The surface of the county is generally undulating, but along the Big Blue there are some majestic bluffs. In the southwest corner of the county there is a small, beautiful, fertile peninsula, situated between the Big Blue and Kansas Rivers, on the eastern part of which it is scarcely half a mile from river to river. On the west lies the beautiful city of Manhattan; on the south side of the Kansas some of the most beautiful scenery, made up of the fertile vales and picturesques bluffs of Riley County. Its timber belts are quite extensive, and their average width is a quarter of a mile, and the varieties are such as are common in the adjoining counties.

Saint Mary's City	----	884

☞ The Census Report of Pottawatomie County gives no information as to changes or creation of new townships. Such information appears in the historical sketch below.

Geology.—There is a great variety of elements in its soil, which makes it a leading county in Kansas for the raising of grain and of stock, in which production it takes high rank. Of building stone, there are large quantities, and some of the varieties of its limestone are very beautiful in appearance. In the eastern portion of the county good coal has been found, though it is not known to exist in considerable quantities. The taxable and cultivated acres have largely increased in the last half decade, and the whole number of acres in the county is about 543,000. Good springs are numerous, and well water is readily obtained at an average depth of twenty-five feet.

Water Courses.—The Big Blue touches the county at its northwest corner, separating it from Riley County; starting in a southwesterly direction, its farthest west point is reached at about the line separating Towns 7 and 8, from thence the course is southeasterly to its mouth at Manhattan. Its northwestern tributaries are Spring Creek with eastern branches, and the Four Mile as a western branch; the Shannon, Carnahan, McIntire, Cedar and Elbow creeks. The Kansas River forms the southern boundary of the county, its principal tributary in the county being the Red Vermillion, which has its source in Nemaha County, enters Pottawatomie from the northeast, runs southwesterly, and empties into the Kansas in Bellevue Township. Its tributaries from the west are French and Mill creeks. Others are Coal, Indian, Adam, Rock Bush, Darnell, Cross Clear and Pleasant Run creeks. The county, with its water boundary south and west, and the numerous creeks running through every portion, is second to none in the State in its water supply.

Early Settlers.—William Martell, Antoine Tasier, Bazile Greemore, Francis Bergen, Robert Wilson, A. Higben, Joseph Truckee, O. H. P. Polk, Baptise Ogee, Mrs. B. H. Bertrand, Mrs. Joseph Bertrand, Mrs. Amable Bertrand, now the wife of Dr. L. R. Palmer, Zoa Durcharm, now Mrs. Wilson, were the earliest settlers of what is now Pottawatomie County. They were here years before the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. Robert Wilson took the first claim in 1853, on the land where now stands Louisville, and here he erected the first house in the county outside the Pottawatomie reserve. It was used as a hotel for many years. Judge Huggins and Dr. Sabin erected the first flouring mill that was run in the County, in 1856. The first white child born in the county was Frank X. Palmer, son of Dr. Luther R. and Mrs. Helen L. Palmer. Luke Lea, of Mississippi, was the first Indian Agent stationed at St. Mary's.

War Record.—In the early Kansas struggles, and during the late rebellion, the record of the county is such that satifies her most patriotic sons and daughters. Her people, ever true to freedom and to a true nationality, furnished a full quota of volunteers, and their deeds of valor and heroism will be sacredly guarded and faithfully preserved in the annals of Pottawatomie County. The history of the people, whose homes are in this county, is a history that is in no sense tame, in any of its particnlars. Having an aboriginal class within its borders, in the long ago; and hence a people of remarkable energy and force of character, standing related to them; having a population, coming from nearly all quarters of the globe, different nations with differing religions, have settled upon its soil to solve the problem of a homogeneity, where in no other land but that of New Kansas, could there be so successful a solution. The Indian, the African, the Caucasian; the Catholic, the Protestant, the Free Religionist, the Yankee, the Buckeye, the Sucker, the Hawkeye, the Southron, the Celt, the Frenchman, the Swede, the German, the Dane, the Britain, all these have homes on these expansive prairies, and here alike remembering their devotion to fatherland, consecrate their all to the perpetuity of American liberty.

Educational Progress.—Samuel W. Greer, Territorial Superintendent of Public Instruction, January 4, 1860, submitted a report to the Legislature, in which Pottawatomie County is reported as having six organized school districts, five of which had employed teachers; $9 had been raised to build schoolhouses; $30 had been raised by private subscription for teachers' wages. There were 182 persons of school age.

J. S. Mitchell, County Superintendent, in his report for 1882, states: The children of school age are—males, 2,927; females, 2,765; total, 5,692. The number of school buildings, 98; of school rooms, 106. There are ninety-eight school districts. There are four joint districts with Nemaha, three with Jackson, and three with Riley. During the year 1882, the superintendent has made 120 school visitations; has organized two school districts, and since October 1, 1881, there has been an examination of 203 teachers. The estimated value of school property is $80,735. There was $8,505 of schoolhouse bonds issued during the year. The present bonded indebtedness is $17,455. The certificates granted were of first grade, seven; second, sixty-seven; third, fifty-seven. About 80 per cent of the school children were enrolled in the school during the year, while the average daily attendance is but 55 per cent of the enrollment. During the year, eight new school buildings were erected and finished, and five new ones are in progress. The tax levy for all school purposes is 9.2 mills.

Taxable Wealth of the County.—Pottawatomie County is year by year increasing its visible wealth. Hundreds of men went to it in the neighborhood of two decades ago, with scarcely any thing of this world's goods, who to-day can count their lands, their cattle, and their varied personal property, in the aggregate reaching tens of thousands of dollars. Comparisons of assessments made in the early part of three decades, show the marked increase of property through the years. In 1861 the assessment was $324,-436. In 1871 it was $2,510,821, and in 1882 it was $3,854,712.05. The value of the lands was $2,112,552; of personal property, $977,826; the railroad assessment, $427,548.05; the town lots stand, $336,786.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION.

The county takes its name from the Pottawatomie tribe of Indians, whose reservation at the opening of Kansas Territory for settlement, and for years afterwards embraced a large portion of the lands of the county. In the latter part of the year, 1856, a petition drawn by Dr. Luther R. Palmer, the Government physician at St. Mary's Mission, and signed by himself and a few other settlers, was addressed to the Legislature, asking for the organization of a new county to be named Pottawatomie, Charles Jenkins and J. A. J. Chapman being appointed to present the petition to the Legislature.

The petition was granted, and on the 23d of February, 1857, Governor Geary appointed Robert Wilson, Probate Judge; George W. Gillespie and Charles Jenkins, County Commissioners, and J. L. Wilson, Sheriff. The first Commissioners' Court convened at St. George, March 21, 1857, Judge Wilson, Chairman, ex-officio, and appointed L. R. Palmer, County Clerk; Josiah D. Adams, Treasurer; J. A. J. Chapman, Surveyor, and W. L. Seymour, Coroner. April 20, 1857, the Board of Commissioners appointed James S. Gillespie, County Assessor, and divided the county into the four townships of Pottawatomie, St. George, Blue and Shannon.

August 17, 1857, Jacob Emmons was the Probate Judge and Clerk of the Commissioners' Court, and on September 21, two municipal townships were formed, named Vienna and Louisville. At the meetings appointed for October 19, November 16, December 21, 1857, and January 18, 1858, there was no quorum present. February 21, 1858, Thomas R. Points was appointed Commissioner, and on March 15, William C. Dyer was appointed Sheriff. Judge Emmons performed the double functions of Chairman and Clerk of the Board, as may be seen in an order, of which the following is a copy:

ORDER NO. 1.

Treasurer of the County of Pottawatomie: Pay to Jacob Emmons, or order, the sum of $32.85 out of any money in the treasury appropriated for county expenses. Given at Saint George, this 16th day of March, A. D. 1858. By order of the County Commissioners.

JACOB EMMONS, President of the Board.

JACOB EMMONS, Clerk for Pottawatomie County, Kan. Ter.

January 17, 1859, at a meeting of the Bdard of Supervisors, the townships were represented as follows: Vienna, A. K. Johnson; Louisville, L. R. Palmer; St. George, John Blood; Pottawatomie, A. Cornell; Blue, Mordecai Cockrell; Shannon, Thomas Pierce. A. G. Rowell, was Clerk: A. Bartlett, County Attorney; Jacob Emmons, County Surveyor and Acting County Treasurer. At a meeting of the Commissioners' Court, held April 2, 1860, the members were L. R. Palmer, Chairman: L. W. Crowl, Joseph H. Cornell. April 5, John L. Wilson was appointed Probate Judge, and E. M. Squires, Superintendent of Public Instruction. July 2, 1860, the county was divided into Commissioner's districts. Louisville and Vienna were the first; St. George and Blue, the second; Pottawatomie and Shannon townships, the third.

October 2, 1860, Joseph D. Patterson was clerk of the United States District Court, and the proportion of the court expenses for Pottawatomie County was $587.70. July, 1, 1861, Uriah Cook was appointed County Treasurer; October 11, S. Cooper, Sheriff; October 22, John L. Wilson, County Commissioner, and Isaac Walker, County Assessor. April 7, 1862, the board consisted of C. C. Foot, Chairman; L. W. Crowl, and Jacob Van Brunt; John N. Liserbocker was County Treasurer. October 8, A. Benton was appointed Superintendent of Public Instruction. The last term of the Commissioners' Court, held at St. George, was November 7, 1862; the first term at Louisville, January 5, 1863; the first at Westmoreland, in October, 1882. January 5, 1863, Asa P. Smith entered upon the duties of the office of County Clerk, and remained as such until his death. He was succeeded by Henry P. Smith, who has since held the office and whose term expires in January, 1884.

In the struggle for county-seat location, the aspirants in 1861 were St. George, Louisville and Mount Union. Louisville finally triumphed by a majority of twelve.

A plain two-story frame building was erected for court house purposes at Louisville, and was occupied until the departure of the county officers for Westmoreland, in September, 1882; the election held September 19, 1882, determining its location there. The last contest was between Westmoreland and Wamego, and the former place had a majority of 350 votes. County Clerk Smith, by order of the Board, advertised for bids for the lot and building, to be received on or before January 1, 1883.

The Town Company at Westmoreland have erected a neat and commodious frame building of two stories for court house uses. The Methodist Episcopal Church building for several weeks was occupied by most of the county officers. The jail at Louisville is a small stone building, 12x16, having a limited capacity for holding criminals. During the years of 1865 and 1866, the county paid to Douglas County for the use of their jail $226. There has been a good deal of friction over county-seat matters in Pottawatomie County, and a suit in 1882 is pending over the permanent location of the county seat of Westmoreland, growing out at an alleged fraudulent canvass of the votes that were cast at the election for county seat, on the 23rd of September, 1879, when Louisville, Wamego, Laclede and Westmoreland were the candidates, Wamego and Westmoreland standing as the two highest from the available returns.

Municipal Township.—The county in 1882 is divided into twenty-one municipal townships. They are named Blue Valley, Shannon, Clear Creek, Rock Creek, Sherman, Lone Tree, Mill Creek, Vienna, Lincoln, St. Clere, Emmet, Center, Union, Pottawatomie, Greene, Blue, St. George, Louisville, Wamego, Belvue and St. Mary's. Shannon will probably be divided in January, 1883, as petitions are on file at present writing in the County Clerk's office, from the citizens of the northern and southern portions of the township to that effect. Shannon has two voting precincts, north and south: Blue Valley has north, south, and Olesburg; Greene has Carnahan and Garrison; Blue, north and south: Mill Creek, Onaga, and Havensville. Thus there are twenty-seven voting precincts in the county. The population of the towns and villages in 1880 was as follows: Havenville, 180; Onaga, 242; Butler, 48: Garrison, 145; St. George, 206; Belvue, 100; St. Mary's, 884; St. Clere, 22; Laclede, 32; Louisville, 433. Wamego is included with the population of the township of the same name. The area of the township in square miles, their population in 1875 and in 1880 with their gain are presented in the following table:

Township.	Area in sq. miles.	Population in 1875.	Population in 18 0.	Gain in five years

POLITICAL STATUS OF THE COUNTY.

St. Mary's, Rock Creek and Big Blue are known as the early voting precincts of what is now Pottawatomie County, and of the members in the first Territorial Legislature of 1855, H. D. McMeekin, now proprietor of the Merritt House at Wamego, then a member from Leavenworth County, is one of the surviving ones. At Pawnee, July 6, 1855, he introduced the resolution which carried an adjournment of the body to Shawnee Manual Labor School. In April, 1857, the census of Pottawatomie County showed 205 votes; a population of 641. In the Territorial Legislature, elected October 5,

*Sherman and St. Clere townships have been formed since 1880; their separate areas are given, but the population includes the old and new townships in one.

1857, Benjamin Harding and Andrew J. Mead were elected Councilmen from the district of which Pottawatomie was a part; Abraham Barry and Charles Jenkins were elected to the House from Riley and Pottawatomie. This county gave for Territorial delegate, M. J. Parrott, 148; E. Ransom, 16 votes.

January 14, 1858, on a vote on the Lecompton Constitution, the county gave two votes for it; 207 against it. March 9, 1858, J. D. Adams and Uriah Cook were elected from the county as delegates to the Leavenworth Constitutional Convention. October 4, 1858, Thomas R. At the election, November 8, 1859, for a Territorial Legislature, Dr. L. R. Palmer was elected a member of the Territorial Council, and Amasa Bartlett, of this county, a member of the House. December 6, 1859, at an election held under the provisions of the Wyandotte Constitution, the average Republican majority of this county was one hundred.

Samuel D. Houston received 103 majority from this county for State Senator in the district composed of this county and Riley; Ambrose W., Mussey, of St. George, was elected Representative. Jacob Safford, though elected Judge of the judicial district, in which this county was a part, received no votes from this county; thirty-one having been cast for J. R. McClure; 120 for R. L. Wilson. November 6, 1860, Charles B. Lines, of Wabaunsee, was elected as a member of the Territorial House, from Pottawatomie and Wabaunsee counties. November 5, 1861, Welcome Wells and O. J. Grover were elected as Representatives from this county to the State Legislature. The district was composed also of Riley and Clay counties, and the other members were I. T. Goodnow and Daviess Wilson from the district.

The apportionment made by the Legislature of 1862, put Pottawatomie and Jackson in one Senatorial district, and they still remain as one district. The representation in the State Senate for this county is reported in the history of Jackson County. In the House of Representatives, the county has been represented since 1862 as follows: 1863, S. V. Lee; 1864, O. J. Grover; 1865, Russell Church; 1866, Henry P. Smith; 1867 and 1868, R. W. Jenkins; 1869, P. Y. Baker; 1870, John H. Clark; 1871, H. C. Linn; on and after 1872, the county has had two representatives. From 1872 to 1877, the districts were numbered 13 and 14; from 1877 to 1883, they were 68 and 69; they are now 56 and 57.

The representatives from the county since it has had two, are as follows: 1872, J. C. Lightcap, Welcome Wells; 1873, R. A. Guffy, Welcome Wells; 1874, O. J. Grover, James H. Shehi; 1875, J. S. Since Kansas has been a State, the Judges of the District Court, who have presided at the temple of justice in Pottawatomie County, are Jacob Safford, Charles K. Gilchrist and John T. Morton. At the Presidental election of 1864, Pottawatomie County gave Lincoln, 213; McClellan, 35 votes. In 1872, Grant had 1,307; Greeley, 692 votes. In 1880, Garfield had 2,139; Hancock, 1,179; Weaver, 224 votes.

LOUISVILLE.

This place was pre-empted by Robert Wilson, who built a log cabin on Rock Creek—since called Brush Creek—at the military crossing, where he kept a frontier hotel for several years. He and his sons, James and Louis, were the earliest settlers in this region. The town was located on the southeast quarter of Section 20, and the southwest quarter of Section 19, Township 9, Range 10, and it was named after Louis Wilson. It was recorded as a town site with the above description, January 15, 1857. It lies on both sides of Rock Creek, quite the larger portion north of it. It is a very pleasant locality. There are medicinal springs near the town. A most interesting old settlers' reunion and basket dinner was held at Taylors' grove, near Louisville, June 4, 1879, L. R. Palmer, presiding. July 10, 1880, a soldiers' and sailors' reunion was held at Louisville, an enrollment providing for all who have served their country, either as National or State troops. J. R. Baker, of Westmoreland, was President; J. S. Mitchell, Secretary; J. J. Hostutler, Treasurer; with Vice presidents from the municipal townships.

The Congregationalists and Methodists of this town have well established church organizations and good church buildings. Rev. Mr. St. John is pastor of the Congregational, and Rev. Mr. Brown of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The I. O. O. F., Rose Lodge, No. 122, was instituted at Westmoreland, December 15, 1874; its officers were as follows: M. S. H. King, N. G.; R. P. Atwood, V. G.; W. K. Merritt, Secretary; J. S. Codding, Permanent Secretary; Charles Zable, Treasurer; J. C. McBride, Warden; C. A. Skene, Conductor; John Sebring, R. S. to N. G.

The lodge was moved to Louisville, March 22, 1879. During the summer of 1881, it built a new stone hall, 25x65 feet, costing nearly $2,000. Its officers for 1882 are as follows: L. G. Beal, N. G.; R. S. Hick, V. G.; John M. Cotton, Secretary; John A. Beal, Permanent Secretary; A. C. Merritt, Treasurer; David Hilderly, R. S. to N. G.; E. T. Baker, L. S. to N. G.; J. S. Mitchell, R. S. to V. G.; George Parry, L. S. to V. G.; R. J. Hodgson, Warden; G. R. Anderson, Conductor; Abe Giltner, I. G.; E. D. Anderson, O. G.; A. H. Brill, Chaplain.

This lodge has a membership of about seventy-five. Its meetings are held on Saturday evening, and visiting brothers are always welcome. This is the most prosperous secret organization in the county.

Press History.—July 17, 1867, A. Sellers started the Pottawatomie Gazette at Louisville, which was the first one in the county. Patrick McCloskey, in February, 1868, bought a half interest in it; on July 5, 1869, he obtained the other half from Mr. Sellers, and in 1870 it became the Kansas Reporter. This paper became the property of a joint stock company, and W. H. Powell was its editor. E. Barnes succeeded Mr. Powell, and in the summer of 1876, he disposed of his interest to Messrs. Hick & Reed, and they published it until April, 1878. Sylvester Fowler then took possession of it as editor, and continued until January, 1879. Hick and Reed ran it until July 1, 1879, when H. G. Evans edited it until July 1, 1880. In March, 1880, Reed bought Hick's interest, and on July 1, 1880, Reed took charge of it as editor and proprietor, with John M. Cotton as assistant editor. October 23, 1881, the paper was sold to a joint stock company and was moved to Wamego. Mr. Cotton went there as editor and remained three weeks. The paper was then sold to S. Fowler, and in February, 1882, Mr. Fowler sold it to Charles E. Chandler and J. L. Browne. There were twelve shareholders in the joint stock concern. Cotton and Anderson sold out their shares, and Mr. Fowler, who had bought the Wamego Tribune of W. P. Campbell, sold to Cotton & Anderson, and they established the Louisville Republican, November 24, 1881. W. T. Anderson had printed the St. Mary's Express. Messrs. Cotton & Anderson are the present editors and proprietors of the Republican.

ST. MARY'S.

The beautiful town of St. Mary's is on the Kansas River, in the township of the same name. This township is in the extreme southeast of the county, and comprises an area of thirty-five square miles. The present site of St. Mary's marks the earliest point settled by white men in the county.

In 1848, the Jesuit fathers, chief among whom were Rev. Morris Gailland, Rev. J. B. Hocken and Rev. Father Va Wright, established a mission at what is now the town of St. Mary's, for the purpose of educating the Indians, so as to bring them into a knowledge of Christianity. Outside this little band of devoted priests, James Graham was probably the first white man who settled in the county. His term of office as sheriff commenced in January, 1882. He came from St. Louis with these founders of the mission, June 17, 1848, landing from the steamer Excel, at what is now St. Mary's. Dr. Luther R. Palmer came in 1850, as a physican employed by the Government. In May, 1851, Benjamin H. Bertrand started from Michigan, under a contract from the Government, for this point with 660 Indian men, women and children. His brother Joseph came to Kansas in 1840, first locating at Sugar Creek, near Fort Scott. Washington Hewins and Alexander Coquillard came from South Bend, Indiana, with Mr. Bertrand. Mr. Bertrand acted as interpreter, having been an Indian trader and of a French race intermingled with Indian blood. The Bertrand brothers, who were Catholics, and the members of the priesthood, who served here as missionaries, worked the initial movement for the foundation of an institution, known as St. Mary's College. This school was started in 1848. Up to 1869, it was a Mission School for the Pottawatomies, and was then chartered. The main college building was burnt in February, 1879. After the fire, the Sacred Heart Convent, which then contained about thirty persons, was used for that purpose, and the females of the convent were transferred to an institution at St. Louis. This building cost about $75,000; the stone addition, built in 1881, cost about $20,000; and the link, built in 1882, about $2,000. The log buildings erected for the mission are still standing as reminders of the day of small things, which are never to be despised, especially when all that nature and art have contributed to make this place, with its general surroundings, one of the most attractive places for student life that can be found in the West. In 1882 there are about 250 pupils at the college, nearly every State, the Canadas, and Mexico being represented. The cost per year to pupils is $150. There are fifteen professors; there is a classical and a commercial course of study. There are five sisters for the parish church, who are instructors, and they have about 150 pupils. These receive a good English education. The college library embraces about 1,500 volumes of miscellaneous, historical, literary and scientific. The Philatethic Society—signifying truth-loving—is a very prosperous organization. Of the appurtenances of the college, there is a grist-mill, a bakery, a blacksmith shop, a carpenter's shop, an extensive orchard, a vineyard of five acres, a stone wall for several miles surrounding the college farm. In short-horns there are nearly 500 head of a most excellent class. The old church building, now used as a tool house, was the first one erected in Kansas. Father Gailland acted as teacher and pastor. He spoke the Indian and English languages, as well as the French, and made a dictionary and grammar in the Indian language. The Catholic Church, erected in 1875, was burned in 1880. It was a stone building, costing about $1,500. The neat and beautiful edifice now standing in the city, built of fine stone, cost about $25,000. It has seating room for about 1,000 people; its dimensions are 50x100 feet. There are about 150 families in the parish. There are over 2,000 acres in the college farm, and it is one of the very best in the State. The pastor of the church is Father Swearer.

St. Mary's was laid out as a town by B. H. Bertrand, August 8, 1866. Another addition was made by Mr. Bertrand, Dr. Luther R. Palmer and Dr. H. C. Linn, September 20, 1869. Another addition was made January 31, 1870, by Dr. Palmer, Adelaide Bertrand and John D. Lasley. June 27, 1870, an addition was also made. The town is located on the northwest quarter of Section 10, Town 10, Range 12. The bulk of the business done in the town is on Bertrand street, which is south of the railroad. This is an active growing town, and is doing a good amount of business.

Of the three organized churches of the town, the Swede Lutheran Church was established in 1874; the Methodist Episcopal, in 1876; the Congregational, in 1878. There is only regular preaching in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Rev. Mr. Morris is pastor.

There are three elevators, which do an immense business in shipping grain, and handle considerable coal and lumber. Trumbo & Co., and Moulde & Connor, and Thomas & Hathaway, are the operators.

The village contains two hotels, a banking house, five general stores, besides a hardware, shoe, cabinet and other shops.

Press History.—In October, 1870, the St. Mary's Star was commenced, John O'Flanagan, editor. A few months afterwards, the office passed into the hands of James W. Fox, who started the Pottawatomie Independent. This paper collapsed in a short time, and Mr. Fox sold the material to a joint stock company, who after publishing a paper for a few weeks, moved it away from St. Mary's. The St. Mary's Times was established by O. Le Roy Sedgwick, in the spring of 1875, as a Republican newspaper, and in July, 1877, H. G. Evans took control of it and changed the name to St. Mary's Democrat. It was independent in its politics. February 1, 1878, the paper passed into the hands of H. H. Tipton, who changed it to a Democratic paper. John O'Flanagan is the present editor and proprietor. In January, 1878, H. G. Evans started the Pottawatomie Chief, at St. Mary's, as an advocate of the doctrines of the National Greenback party. Shortly after Mr. J. A. McAnerny became a partner. This firm, in August, 1878, sold the paper to J. E. Clardy, who continued its publication here for a while, and later removed the material to Wamego.

WAMEGO.

The township of Wamego, in which the town is situated, is the smallest township of the county, but, according to the census of 1880, is the most populous. The city of Wamego, by its eligible situation, on the banks of the Kaw, and also on the main branch of the Kansas Pacific Railroad, has distanced in growth many towns which, by earlier establishment, had, not long since, greatly the advantage in point of growth.

June 12, 1866, Hugh S. Walsh, general agent of the Wamego Town Site Company, had a plat filed for record. April 5, 1870, A. M. Read made an addition; Antoine Ulrich made one June 9, 1870; S. Finney made one October 12, 1870, and Antoine Ulrich made one December 6, 1870. It is the end of the first division of the Kansas Division of the Union Pacific, and is 104 miles from Kansas City. Here is a round house and shops that employ a very considerable number of laborers. The site is beautifully located. A wagon bridge crosses the river at this place. The expense of this bridge was borne by the issuance of bridge bonds, the larger part of which was voted by the citizens of Wamego. This causes a large amount of the products of Northern Wabaunsee County to find its way to market at the Wamego Station. This place is the most populous one of the county, and it must of necessity be a place of very considerable commercial importance.

April 26, 1882, the Sixty-third Anniversary of Odd Fellowship in these United States was observed at Wamego; the Lodge of Louisville joining with that of Wamego to listen to an oration by Theodore Botkin, of Mound City. From these proceedings is gathered the history of Wamego Lodge, No. 80, I. O. of O. F., which was instituted September 18, 1871, by Isaac G. M. The seven charter members were T. H. Lowell, J. Houston, B. F. Fliger, S. A. Clary, H. Kimmell, S. K. King and F. J. Sellinger. The first officers of the lodge were: T. H. Lowell, N. G.; J. Houston, V. G.; B. F. Thayer, R. S.; S. A. Clary, Treasurer; H. Kimmell, W. M.; S. King, I. G. Wamego furnished the first Grand Master of Odd Fellowship in the then Territory of Kansas, in the person of John Collins, who became an Odd Fellow in 1852. He died July 7, 1882, and his funeral services held July 9, were conducted by the Wamego and Louisville Lodges, and Manhattan Lodge No. 17. Judge Collins had held the office of Justice of the Peace almost continuously for about seventeen years. Pottawatomie County, with its shire town, permanently located at Westmoreland, becomes settled upon the matter of boundaries, and retaining its present territory, it is morally certain to increase in wealth and population equal to that of any interior county of Kansas.

The Methodist Church, South, made the first attempts at preaching at Wamego, and Rev. Mr. Williams, living near the Big Blue, was the first preacher. Rev. J. H. Lee of Manhattan, Rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church there, frequently preached at Wamego. Preachers of the Baptist and Christian Church occasionally ministered here, and in 1867 there was a union of the Northern with the Southern Methodists in one organization, and they have a very good church edifice costing about $3,500. It was dedicated June 9, 1878; its pastors have been T. F. Herd, J. A. Woodburn, Mr. Robins, William Knife, E. R. Brown, G. F. Houts, J. A. Lord, Lawrence Hibbard, B. F. Parlett, J. M. Wilson and George E. Nicholson. Its present membership is about seventy-five.

The Baptist Church was organized December 9, 1869, with nine members. Rev. G. W. Scott was the pastor when the church was organized. Rev. R. P. Evans has since been the pastor, but the church has preaching only occasionally. Their church building was obtained of the school district, it being the early school building prior to the organization of the church. The edifice cost $1,200; the church membership is about fifty.

The Presbyterian Church edifice is a well-built frame, completed in 1881, at a cost of about $3,500. The organization was effected February 7, 1869. Its pastors have been J. A. Veale, I. T. Whitamore, A. Essick, W. B. Christopher, H. R. Lewis, W. E. Williamson, Alexander Sterrett, and Wm. A. Scarrett. Its membership is about seventy-five.

The Catholic Church building was erected in 1881, at a cost of $3,000. Their pastor is Rev. B. Nuttmann. Their services were held formerly in various available places.

There is also a Methodist Episcopal Church, which has a membership of about twenty. This society had a small structure which was burned, and they rebuilt a neat building, and hold regular services.

The Wamego school is a two-story stone building, 50x75 feet, erected in 1872, at a cost of $12,000. The principal of the school in 1882 was E. M. Donaldson. There were five other teachers.

The Choral Society was organized April 22, 1878. There are about thirty members.

A plat of the Wamego Cemetery was filed in the office of the Register of Deeds, October 7, 1874, and the grounds have been most beautifully laid out and adorned. Wamego is the objective point that is reached by rail in going to the late county seat, Louisville, and the new one, Westmoreland, which place is reached by Butler on the Kansas Central.

The Wamego Lodge, No. 80, I. O. O. F., was organized in October, 1873. Its charter members were T. K. Lovell, M. S. H. King, James Houston, S. A. Chary, H. Kimmell. Its membership is about fifty. Its present officers are as follows: John Prunty, N. G.; C. N. Baker, V. G.; N. J. Hord, Secretary.

The Wamego Lodge, No. 75, A. F. and A. M., was organized in 1869. Its charter members were J. W. Peck, W. M.; W. D. Embley, S. W.; T. N. Gardner, J. W.; D. H. Wayner, Treasurer; E. B. Deitrick, G. D.; A. P.

McMillian, Joel S. Sheldon. Its present membership is about seventy-five.

The history of the press at Wamego is quite eventful. In 1869, J. E. Clardy and John O'Flanagan established the Kansas Valley. They published it until March, 1870, when Mr. Clardy sold out his interest to Mr. O'Flanagan, who continued the paper until November, 1871, when he sold the office to J. T. Bradley, who removed it to Solomon City. It was strongly Democratic in its politics. In May, 1869, Mr. Jennings started the Wamego Courier. It suspended the following September, and Mr. Jennings took charge of the Le Roy Pioneer.

In August, 1870, R. W. Jenkins commenced the publication of the Wamego Dispatch, independent. J. E. Clardy purchased an interest in it in the spring of 1871, and they published it until August, 1871, when it was sold and the material was taken to Neuchatel, a French settlement in Nemaha County.

The Wamego Blade was started in the spring of 1872, by R. E. Cunningham, who, about a year afterwards, moved the material to Clay Center. It was independent in its politics. In the spring of 1871, L. R. Palmer and H. C. Linn published the Pottawatomie Star. They ran it about one year, when they sold it to W. E. Powell, who removed the office out of the county.

In May, 1871, W. E. Powell commenced the publication of the Pottawatomie Republican. It was discontinued in November, 1871. During the County Fair at Wamego, in September, 1882, Mr. W. P. Campbell had exclusive charge of the Daily Kansas Reporter, which ran for that time. Mr. C. is one of the best of newspaper men.

In September, 1877, the Wamego Tribune was established by W. P. Campbell; his associate was his brother, J. B. Campbell. October 1, 1878, the paper was published semi-weekly. It was Republican in its politics.

In 1882, J. L. Browne, the Postmaster at Wamego, is managing the Wamego Reporter, which in its politics is Republican.

The veteran newspaper man, J. E. Clardy, is now publishing the Wamego Agriculturalist as a semi-agricultural, semi-prohibition paper at Wamego. It is the largest newspaper in the county and is well patronized. It was established February 22.

There are four hotels in Wamego—the Ames House, Avenue House, Merritt House, and Wamego House.

In 1841 he removed to Medina County, Ohio, where he carried on his business, and afterward lived in Huron County, from whence he came to Kansas in 1856. The train in which he came had to avoid Missouri, and they came through Iowa and Nebraska. Soon after entering the Territory about four miles from the Nebraska line, they were arrested by the United States forces, under Col. Cooke, and escorted to Indianola. Gov. Geary met them and ordered them released, and told them to seek their homes. The morning they were taken prisoners, it rained, and being ordered out of the wagons, his children all took cold, in consequence of the exposure, four were attacked with typhoid fever, from which one daughter, fourteen years old, died, three weeks after they reached Topeka. He lived for a time in Topeka, and finally settled at Auburn, Shawnee County; continued to farm until 1865, when he moved to Wamego in Pottawatomie County, and entered business as a merchant in the grocery line, which he continued four years. He was the second son of Samuel and Sarah (Kettel) Huggins. He received his education in the common schools and at the Salem Academy. After leaving school, he learned the trade of a tanner and currier. Not liking the business, he applied himself to the study of law. Soon after being admitted to the bar, he removed to Oakland County, Mich., where he successfully practiced his profession until 1856, at which time he emigrated to Kansas. He was an ardent Free-state man, and became an intimate friend of James H. Lane, and one of his followers during the troublous times that followed. He was in Lawrence, May 15, 1856, when the town was sacked by the border ruffians, and was robbed of all his money, and even his coat. Thus reduced to first principles, he went to Franklin and hired out with John Strong as fireman and engineer, with the stipulation, that in case of fighting to be done on the Free-state side, he should at all times be free to leave his work and engage in the battle. He worked thus for some time, participating meanwhile with the Free-state men in all their battles. He engaged in the second battle of Franklin, and all the subsequent battles, up to the surrender of Titus. On the arrival of Gov. Geary, Mr. Huggins left the Territory, being one of the companions of Gen. Lane. He reached Civil Bend, Iowa, as one of his biographers states, "ragged and dead broke." Here he remained lumbering until the spring of 1857, at which time he returned to Michigan. WESTMORELAND.

Rock Creek Township, which agrees in location and area with Congressional Township 7, Range 9, contains Westmoreland, the new county-seat, and Moodyville, and is one of the most picturesque sections of the county. There are mineral springs at both of these places, whose waters possess highly medicinal qualities. The original town plat of Westmoreland was recorded April 25, 1871, Volney Baker, proprietor. Since, there have been additions made by Rachel Armer and A. C. Cochrun. It is located in the center of the southwest quarter of Section 33, Town 7, Range 9. Cockrun's addition was platted and filed October 12, 1882. There are in the town, three general stores, four hotels, two churches, Congregational and Methodist (each with a good church building), one physician, one lawyer, a carpenter shop, restaurant, livery stable and butcher shop. October 5, 1882, Jasper K. Whims, of Westmoreland, and Messrs. Cotton and Anderson issued the first number of the Period, a five-column, four page paper at Westmoreland.

MOODYVILLE.

Moodyville, a place of considerable prospective importance, was laid out in April, 1882. It is situated in the southwest quarter of Section 14, Town 7, Range 9. It has a joint stock company hotel, 30x50 feet, three stories high, and containing twenty-one sleeping rooms. It is a frame building; its cost is $3,500. Hiram F. Robbins is president of the Company; William Henry, Secretary; E. M. Moody, Treasurer. The village has a stone schoolhouse, costing $500, and a church edifice, erected by the Church of the Disciples, in 1879; Rev. J. T. Jackson, pastor.

Moodyville Springs.—East of the general highway, down the main street—called Broadway—which is 100 feet wide, a short distance from where the suspension bridge crosses Rock Creek, is one of the best springs in the State. Its waters are very strong in salts of magnesia; it has traces of nitrate, sulphate of lime, sulphate of soda, sulphate of potassa, carbonates of lime, chloride of sodium; and contains alumina and organic matter. These springs flow from the base of a hill on the east bank of Rock Creek. A thick foliage from the beautiful forest trees renders the surroundings quite pleasant, and keeps out the sun's burning rays in midsummer. There is quite a large, level park below the springs, on which is located a nice fountain. Northeast of the springs is an attractive cave that furnishes much to interest the geological student. A roadway crosses the creek north of the cave, passes around a romantic bluff to the south, and again crosses the creek below the bend, where Pray Creek forms a junction with Rock Creek, about half a mile south of Broadway. This spring drive-way is twenty feet in width. Preparations are made for forming a nice fish pond, which will be well stocked with fish. Southeast from the springs on the bluff is a mound, suggesting pre-historic periods, giving reasonable evidence of the existence of the mound-builders. Fossils and petrifactions of the native flora are exceptionally rich at the springs and vicinity, and on the farm of Archibald Richards, adjoining them, was found, in a mound, remains of an Indian, decorated with trinkets. In addition to these natural beauties and curiosities around these springs, there is an enchantment in the vision that presents itself in the distance. Rich grasses grow on the acres, from the water-line to the crown of the highest hill. On an October day, the grand wooded lands, with their mantle of green, crimson and gold, softened by the mellow haze, reach away to the horizon in every direction. Here the air is as pure as the breath of mountains, and the limpid, refreshing fluid kind Nature has furnished at these springs, is as clear and sweet as those of ancient Bethesda.

ST. GEORGE.

St. George Township is one of the most romantic and historic portions of the county. It is composed of beautiful rolling farming land, well wooded in the valley. Black oak timber is found here in large quantities. Among the early settlers in this vicinity was Jacob Emmons, who settled on the northwest quarter of Section 8, Township 10, Range 9. He was Probate Judge, County Commissioner, County Clerk, and County Surveyor, and for quite a period of time virtually "carried the county in his pocket." He was a general adjudicator of neighborhood difficulties in the early time, and in matters that came before him as judge, in the absence of a knowledge of legal lore, his decisions were based on honesty and common sense. The first Commissioner's Court at St. George was held at a building owned by Dr. J. D. Adams. Judge Emmons advanced $200 for books used for public records.

St. George was a town of fine prospects in the early days. Its original plat covered the east half of Section 9, Township 10, Range 9. It was made by John Andrew Jackson Chapman, surveyor, in February, 1857.

One pet scheme of the citizens of St. George was to have their town connected with St. Joseph by rail, on a great southwestern thoroughfare. The old town of St. George was vacated in 1879, and its present area is about sixty acres, which is on the southwest quarter of Section 9, Township 10, Range 9. This is a place where extensive grain shipments are made, and E. B. Purcell & Co., of Manhattan, built their capacious elevator here in 1879; their store was started in 1871. C. W. Knapp, formerly of Riley Center, is their resident manager, becoming the successor of G. W. Cheney, who is the efficient station agent and telegraphic operator here. Elijah Walker is insurance agent, broker, notary public and real estate conveyancer. He is one of the earliest settlers, and is a man of affairs. C. F. Shipps is postmaster. There is one hotel, one good schoolhouse, and the usual complement of stores and shops. The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1877, Rev. E. H. Parkinson, pastor. Since then its pastors have been Rev. Mr. Brown and Rev. Mr. McNair. Its membership is about thirty-five. C. F. Shipps is Sunday-school superintendent. The Church of the Disciples was organized in 1880, with a membership of forty-five. Its pastor is Rev. R. W. Watson; W. A. Ensign, Sunday-school superintendent. Its early members were Jacob Emmons, George W. Gillespie and J. W. Simpkins.

TOWNSHIPS AND VILLAGES.

Blue Township.—This is the southwest township of the county, and it has much to do with Manhattan, the county-seat of Riley. Its area is about forty-five square miles. Its shape is exceedingly irregular. No portion of the county has had settlers who have made their impress on public affairs more than have those who settled early on the Big Blue. At the Juniata crossing of this river was Samuel D. Dyer, who had charge of a government bridge ere the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act. Among the early settlers was the family of Asahel Gilbert Allen, who left Roxbury, Mass., October 17, 1854, and settled at Juniata early in December, 1854. February 18, 1855, Mrs. Dunklin, the mother of the wife of J. Dyer, died, and her funeral was held on the following day. There were twenty-eight persons present. A Sunday-school was organized here April 27, 1856. The three male teachers were Rev. Mr. Lovejoy, Mr. Nealy and Mr. Allen. The female teachers were Mrs. Lovejoy, Mrs. Child and Mrs. Allen. The librarian was Dr. S. Whitehorne. There were thirty-one pupils. June 3, 1856, the first quarterly meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church North was held here. Elder Goodnow presided, and Rev. Mr. Lovejoy was given the circuit. Rev. Messrs. Blood, Denison, Griffin and Trafton were present. There were eighteen at dinner at Mrs. Allen's and the bill of fare was baked beans, plum pudding, bread and butter. Mrs. Allen's son, John Adams Allen, born in June, 1842, is now the manager of the Co-operative Grange store at Manhattan. Moody Powers is one of the early settlers of this township. On Elbow Creek, in this township, is a neat church building erected by the Catholics, situated near the dwelling of Mr. Richard Sheehan, one of its most earnest patrons.

Clear Creek Township includes within its limits Butler, a station on the Kansas Central, whose postoffice is Blaine. Dennis V. Cox is postmaster. Blaine was laid out October 14, 1879.
